TELEGRAPHIC COMMUNICATION WITH INDIA AND CHINA.

So often have our readers perused articles under this heading, many of them containing fair promises, destined apparently to remain for ever unfulfilled, that by this time they may be inclined to pass wearily over it, in despair of finding any reliable facts, or hopeful information. Not long since we gladly hailed some slight improvement in the working of the existing lines of telegraph to India, but our hopes of permanent amendment were quickly dispelled by the almost simultaneous failure of the Persian Gulf and Malta cables. Then, of the three new schemes that were promulgated about the middle of last year, only one, that of Messrs. SIEMENS BROTHERS, for an overland line through Russia and Persia, seems to have achieved any measure of success; the ANGLO-INDIAN Company, an equally meritorious undertaking, to say the least, having remained in abeyance owing to hard times and the want of Government support; while the INDIA, CHINA, and COLONIAL Company, with its bold project for a complete submarine line, starting from Falmouth, has entirely collapsed, and left "not a rack behind." It really began to look as if the labours of the Select Committee that sat last year under the presidency of Mr. CRAWFORD to report on postal and telegraphic communication with India had been thrown away, as far as concerned the latter subject.

We have now to consider the character and probable results of the important meeting held at the Mansion-house on the 23rd March. Sir FREDERICK HALLIDAY, who convened the meeting, explained that its object was to impress upon the Government and the House of Commons the absolute necessity of an improved communication. He referred to the able and complete nature of the report of the Select Committee of 1866, and pointed out that although two years nearly have passed since it was issued, absolutely nothing has been done towards carrying out its recommendations. Amid the cheers of his hearers he said, "What we want is one line, under one control, "and that British control, free from end to end of all political, "Asiatic, or European complications." Mr. CRAWFORD, who followed, justly observed that a single system of telegraphic communication between this country and India through the Continent would be insufficient, dependent as we were on the goodwill of foreign countries, and seeing that circumstances might arise to cut off our communication with the East absolutely and entirely. There were also great physical difficulties in the way of upholding a system of communication in rigorous winters and in mountainous parts of a country. On the other hand, we had the sea nearly the whole way from this to India, and we could be independent of almost every other nation along the route, with the single exception of 120 miles between Alexandria and Suez. Mr. CRAWFORD also pointed out the peculiar circumstances which gave this proposition far more weighty claims to Government support than even such an undertaking as the Atlantic Cable. Mr. JOHN PENDER ably advocated the cause of the Manchester merchants, and Mr. PEEL wound up the business of the meeting by nominating twelve gentlemen to form a standing committee (among whom our readers will be glad to see that China interests are well represented) to carry out the views of the meeting.

It appears to us that the committee will most effectually perform the duty they have undertaken, by giving energetic support to the ANGLO-INDIAN Company in their endeavour to procure from Government a guarantee of five per cent. on the capital employed. We do not want any more new schemes or rival companies. Here is one prepared with a well-organised system, already in possession of numerous valuable concessions, and moreover, with an advantageous contract ready-made; only waiting, in fact, for that small modicum of Government support that has never been withheld from any other undertaking likely to be beneficial to India. In November last a very influential memorial, in support of this company's request, was presented to the SECRETARY for INDIA; but (as Mr. CRAWFORD aptly remarked) it was met with the usual stereotyped answer of a Government unwilling to do anything. It is impossible that the question should be shelved in this manner. It is one of national importance, and if Ministers persist in their obstructive policy, it must be forthwith ventilated in the House of Commons.

THE HONG KONG MEMORIAL.

THE "HONG KONG ASSOCIATION OF LONDON" was organised just in time to take charge of the petition to the House of Commons, which was received from that colony by the last mail. The Association has undertaken the duty of procuring the aid of some influential members of Parliament to support the petition, and of organising a deputation to wait on the Duke of BUCKINGHAM with a statement regarding it. It would appear that by some oversight the Hong Kong Committee failed to recognise the necessity for securing influential support for the movement in this country, and regarded their work as finished when the petition had been signed and despatched. The opportune formation of the London Committee fortunately obviates a very great difficulty that might have arisen from this course. The hasty presentation of a petition to the House of Commons is always a hazardous step; the first endeavours of those who seek redress for colonial grievances should be to lay their case before the Government, reserving an appeal to Parliament as a later resource. The great party struggle initiated by Mr. GLADSTONE'S resolutions on the Irish Church question has to be fought out after the Easter recess; a dissolution may follow, or if not, the business of the Session will be so much in arrear that a discussion on Colonial Affairs—never a favourite subject in the House—would be hopeless. The petition, presented at so inopportune a juncture, would "lie on the table" unheeded; while any subsequent representations to the COLONIAL SECRETARY would (not un-naturally) be met with the reply, that by petitioning Parliament the colonists had taken the matter out of his hands. These considerations have decided the London Committee to draw up a separate memorial, to be presented to the Duke of BUCKINGHAM by a deputation at as early a date as possible. In this document the claims of the colony are urged, very strongly as regards the arguments adduced, but very temperately as regards the language they are conveyed in; and we have little doubt that it will meet with a favourable reception.

THE two composite screw gunboats Kwang-tung and Shan-tung, built by Messrs. WILLIAM DENNY and BROTHERS, of Dumbarton, for the Viceroy of Canton, have been launched, fully completed, with their engines and boilers on board, and on the 31st ultimo made a trial of their speed over the measured mile in Skelmorlie Bay, the result being, in both cases, an average speed of 9 3-10th knots an hour. Their propellers will now be disconnected, and they will proceed at once under canvas to their destination, where they will soon render a satisfactory account of some of the pirates still infesting the coast. We cannot see, however, that this most praiseworthy step on the part of the VICEROY in any way exonerates our own Government from the duty of sending out the vessels specially provided for the protection of British commerce in China waters. The order for these vessels, we understand, was sent to Messrs. DENNY BROTHERS through the agency of Mr. DAVID GILLIES, manager of the Hong Kong and Whampoa Dockyards, and formerly manager in the employ of Messrs. DENNY and Co., engineers.

ALTHOUGH the commerce of Italy in Japan is confined to the purchase of silkworms' eggs, the Government considers it so important that in spite of their very deranged finances it is decided to send out a ship of war to protect their interests. The Clotilde steam-frigate has been selected for this service, and is now being fitted out with all despatch for Japan, where she is to remain on the station. She is under orders to sail from Genoa on the 1st of May.

COAL DISCOVERIES IN CHINA AND JAPAN.

A Blue Book on Coal, lately issued, contains the following interesting correspondence on the discoveries of mines in China and Japan :—

CHINA.

CONSUL SWINHOE TO SIR R. ALCOCK.

British Consulate, Amoy, April 4, 1867.

SIR,—I hasten to report to your Excellency that coal has been discovered to exist in Pong-hou, the chief island of the Pescadores. Some months ago a servant of mine was passenger on board of the Chinese cruizer Volunteer, bound from Takow to Amoy. He came to me and reported secretly that that steamer, being detained in Makung Harbour for want of coal, some of that article was supplied to her from the island. I communicated the intelligence to Commander Broad, senior naval officer here, and sent my man across to Formosa to learn positively from what island the coal had been procured. The secret was so well kept by the Chinese that my man succeeded in getting no information on the subject. No one knew anything about the coal. They supposed it must have been purchased from a junk from the Kelung mines, North Formosa. A few days ago, however, the Volunteer returned to Amoy, and I learned the whole story from the engineer of that vessel. About October of last year the Volunteer and the Gorilla, both Chinese cruizers, got into a heavy gale between Takow and the Pescadores. The Gorilla was wrecked on Fisher's Islands, but the Volunteer succeeded in making Makung Harbour, whence she could not proceed to Amoy for want of sufficient coal. The Chinese officer in command consulted with the Heetai or military commandant of the Pescadores, who stated that some black earth had been noticed on the north side of Pong-hou Island which the people said was coal, but it was a secret, and none was allowed to disturb the soil. The necessity of the case forced him to get over his scruples, and he allowed the engineer of the Volunteer to proceed to the spot with carts and 100 coolies to dig and bring away the coal. The journey from the town across country to the coal site occupied half a day. The engineers succeeded in procuring about twenty-one tons of coal, which, though obtained from near the surface, they found serviceable enough when mixed with what little fuel they had on board. The hill whence this coal was procured projected on to water which communicates both with the well-sheltered Pong-hou Harbour, and with the sea on the coast towards Formosa. Deep water is marked in the chart within a few hundred yards of the spot, which lies in latitude 23° 35′ 20″ and longitude 119° 32′ 50″ (see Admiralty chart 1961, "Pescadores Islands") The engineer said that the whole hill looked as if containing coal. The Mandarins are anxious to keep the matter dark lest the existence of this valuable substance should draw the attention of the foreigner to these islands which possess so spacious and safe a harbour. I must try and pay a visit to Pong-hou to learn the extent of these mines, but I should think it would be worth the while of Her Majesty's Government to institute a thorough examination of these islands, which are likely some day to play a more important part in the world's history than they do at present. The coal will no doubt be the same that occurs in layers under the new red sandstone interior of Canton, up the river in this district, and at Kelung. There is no reason why the same layer should not be upheaved at the Pescadores. What comes into the market of all these coals is merely surface coal worked in the simple horizontal borings of the Chinese style. As soon as water is reached the Chinese stop work and commence another boring, as they have no means of properly pumping out. Coal above the level is naturally deteriorated by the action of the air, and affords an indifferent fuel. If the mines could be worked under European masterahip and the damp coal extracted, there is every reason to believe that it would be found to be a thoroughly good and serviceable article.—I have, &c.,

ROBERT SWINHOE, H.B.M.'s Consul at Amoy.

The above was forwarded to the Foreign-office by Sir R. Alcock with the following letter :—

SIR RUTHERFORD ALCOCK TO LORD STANLEY.

Peking, October 1, 1867.

MY LORD,—I forward the enclosed report from Mr. Swinhoe, giving the result of his exploration for coal in the Pescadores, made at my instigation, not so much for any interest attaching to the geological data obtained, as for the lesson conveyed by the negative result and the causes which led to it.

When I urged upon the Tartar General and the Viceroy at Foochow in last June the expediency of ascertaining with certainty the existence of valuable coal in this group of islands so admirably situated for the supply of ships in mid channel, between Formosa and the mainland, and isolated from any large populations, I was met by the usual objections founded on the popular belief in geomantic influences and the danger of disturbing the Fung-shuy. The high officers professed to believe in these influences, as the elders of the villages do; and the result goes far to show, I think, that nothing is to be hoped from argument or persuasion in any matter connected with the development of the vast mineral resources of this country. Yet on the attainment of facilities for working mines more than anything else, I believe, depends any prospect of future increase in foreign trade, or material improvement in the financial state of the Government. If it can neither be coerced nor persuaded into the adoption of a more liberal policy there is little hope of amelioration of any kind. They would find in it a source of strength and a vast accession of material means wherewith to improve their administration, as well as money for the payment of their armies, the want of which is a main cause of continuous insurrections. These are fed by deserters from the Imperial forces always left in arrear, ill-fed, and worse paid. Whole divisions thus go over in a body to swell the ranks of those who threaten to make all Government impossible. If this last much longer, and those at the head of affairs in Peking continue to show the same impracticable spirit and slavish fear of the opposition which innovations provoke, there is nothing to be looked for but anarchy and the subversion of a dynasty showing an utter incapacity for rule. Their sole aim is to stand still and offer a passive resistance to all efforts to move them forward. Yet in progress lies their only hope of safety and the stability of the throne, and there are times when the leading members of the Foreign Board seem to see this. The fact of their persistent refusal to give facilities for the effectual working of their almost unlimited coal-fields, petroleum wells, and other sources of inexhaustible wealth is the more significant that never was a Government more poverty stricken or put to greater straits for money.

I think it desirable to draw your Lordship's attention to this feature of the Chinese character and policy now, because I have long been convinced, in the event of a revision of treaties next year being claimed, nothing is to be gained worth serious effort if the authority to work mines and the introduction of railroads and telegraphs be refused, and in the present temper of rulers and people such concessions are certainly not to be looked for from negotiations based on respect for the absolute right of the nation or its Sovereign to do as may seem best to themselves in the internal affairs of the country and the development of its resources.—I have, &c. RUTHERFORD ALCOCK.

JAPAN.

The following, from Sir Harry Parkes, encloses some interesting memoranda by Mr. Mitford and Mr. Sutton on coal discoveries in Japan :—

SIR H. PARKES TO LORD STANLEY.

Yesso, September 11, 1867.

MY LORD,—I mentioned in my despatch of the 17th ultimo that Mr. Mitford had accompanied Vice-Admiral Sir Henry Keppel on a visit of inspection to the coal mines, which the Japanese Government have commenced to work on the Island of Yesso, under the superintendence of Mr. Erasmus Gower; and I now inclose a Report by Mr. Mitford, upon the state of the works and the prospects of the undertaking. I shall bring the information it contains to the notice of the Gorogio, in the hope that they will see the expediency of placing sufficient means at the disposal of Mr. Gower to enable him to work the coal with advantage.

The demand for fuel is constantly increasing, and our interests in obtaining supplies upon the spot is second only to that which it may be presumed is felt by Japan itself. The competition, however, which may thus be created with the mining operations of the Russians in the neighbouring Island of Saghahe, where coal of good quality is also found, will perhaps account for their not viewing these efforts of the Japanese Government with similar favour.—I am, &c.,

HARRY S. PARKES.

MEMORANDUM ON THE COAL MINES OF IWANAI, ISLAND OF YESSO, JAPAN.

The Japanese Government appear to have been long aware that coal was to be found in the neighbourhood of Iwanai. Some six or seven years ago Messrs. Blake and Pompelli, two American engineers in the service of the Tycoon, were ordered to report upon these mines. Although the opinion which they expressed was favourable it is only since the beginning of the present year that any serious attempt has been made to work the seams, and for this purpose the services of Mr. Erasmus Gower, an English civil engineer, were secured.

The little town of Iwanai is situated at the south-east corner of a bay on the west coast of Yesso to the south of Strogonoff Bay. The town contains a mixed population of Ainos (aborigines) and Japanese. The coal mines lie two miles inland from a village called Kaianoma, some seven miles across the bay. Four seams of coal had been discovered. Two of these are from four to six feet thick; one is about three feet thick; and the fourth, which has not yet been thoroughly examined, is about a foot thick. The quality of the coal, according to Mr. Gower, is soft. It yields from 10 to 12 per cent. of ash and 30 to 35 per cent. of gas. On first being lighted it sends out a thick black smoke, but soon burns with a clear strong flame, and leaves no clinker.

Mr. Gower has not yet been able to begin working the mines. His time at present is taken up in making a tramway from the mines to Kaianoma, building bridges and houses for the persons to be employed, and surveying the district. The rails for the tram-road have been sent for to England, and the cars are to be supplied from California. From Kaianoma to Iwanai, where there is a good anchorage for ships, it is proposed to send the coal in steam propellers. Steamers could, in fine weather, load at Kaianoma itself.

The chief difficulty with which Mr. Gower has to contend is the scarcity of labour. The population is partially a moving one, consisting principally of Japanese who migrate from the main island during the season for the herring fishery. Herring oil and seaweed are the principal trade of the coast, and whole fleets of junks are employed in carrying this produce to Hakodate, and even as far as Osaka, and other points on the main island. There is also a small export of timber.

Wages are as high as 1 ichibu and 300 cash per diem; and although cheap and efficient labour could be procured by employing the Aino population, the repressive policy of the Japanese will not allow the aborigines even to take service privately with Mr. Gower.

Mr. Gower complains that, contrary to all rule, although responsible for the economy with which the mines are to be worked, he has no means of checking needless expenditure or detecting frauds, as he is kept in ignorance of the nature of all contracts entered into by the Japanese officers employed under him. As an instance of this he pointed out 6,800 pieces of timber, a foot square, and from 18 to 24 feet long, which had been ordered without his knowledge, and for which he had no use. Under these circumstances Mr. Gower finds it difficult to estimate the probable cost at which coal may be delivered; but he imagines that it will not exceed four dollars per ton on the spot. Freight to Hakodate would be three dollars, and to Yokohama or Nagasaki six dollars per ton.

Digitized by Google

He expects the mine to be in working order by the end of June, 1868.

An experiment was made with some of the coal picked out from the surface of the seams in the galley fire of H.M.S. Salamis, under the superintendence of the chief engineer. Seventy-nine pounds of coal yield 17·27 per cent. of ash, 1·5 per cent. of clinker, an average volume of smoke, and a strong and durable flame.

Mr. Gower has made a proposition to the officials of Hakodate, offering to supply the machinery necessary for working some petroleum springs at Washinoki and Yama Kushinai in Volcano Bay, on the condition of his receiving half the profits.

I am able to state confidently on the best authority that the Russian authorities at Hakodate view with no favourable eye Mr. Gower's schemes, or those of Mr. Gartner, a Prussian gentleman, who has made proposals to the Japanese for introducing scientific farming into the fertile island of Yedo. The Russians affect to see in the offers of Europeans to teach the Japanese how to develop their own resources, only so many attempts to enrich themselves at the expense of their employers.

A. B. MITFORD.

MR. SUTTON TO COMMODORE BULLOCK.

Serpent, Osaka Bay, May 25, 1867.

SIR,—In obedience to your order I inspected the coal field near Hiogo, and I have the honour to enclose the following report:—

The coal is of a tertiary formation, and it crops out in a number of places on the sides of a low range of hills about six miles to the westward of Hiogo. The natives have been working it for the last ten years, but not continuously. They first commenced in 1857 and continued until 1861, when the works were stopped because imported coal was then much cheaper. During the above period they sent into the Hiogo market upwards of 500 tons of coal. The prices of coal have risen considerably of late. They were induced to commence the works again in February last. The first two months they employed only thirty men, after which they doubled the number, and up to the present time they have obtained more than 170 tons, which they informed me has been used by their steamers, and that their engineers reported it equal to the other kinds of Japanese coal. Their workings are very primitive, and so also are the tools they use. They select a place where they see the coal cropping out, and follow it into the sides of the hills horizontally. In the above way they have cut numerous little tunnels a little larger than the thickness of the seam (which varies from 1 ft. 6 in. to 2 ft. 5 in. in. thickness), the largest of which is not more than 200 ft., consequently they have not got into the proper seam, but merely an outlying branch of it; but still the best of the coal brought out in my presence was quite equal to Takosima (Nagasaki) coal. It is not of exactly the same description, but more of an anthracite kind. The highest point of their works is about 100 ft. above the level of the sea, from whence it dips about an angle of fifteen degrees towards the sea. I traced it more than a mile in that direction, and I am of opinion that if a shaft was sunk about half-a-mile further down the valley in the direction the seam runs, a good kind of coal would be obtained, and it could easily be brought into Hiogo by means of a tramway, which could be constructed comparatively at a very small cost, it being impossible with the present mode of conveyance (a long narrow cart holding about half a ton drawn by one bullock) to keep up a good supply of coal at Hiogo.—I have, &c.,

FREDERICK WM. SUTTON,
Chief Engineer, H.M.S. Serpent.

THE NEW SPANISH LOAN.

Apropos of this loan "A MERCHANT" writes to The Times in the following terms, on the illiberal commercial policy pursued by Spain towards all her colonies, but more especially towards Manila:—

I perceive with pleasure that the Spanish Home Government are attending to the financial wants and interests of their colonies, by endeavouring to raise money in Europe. Though the security offered is, no doubt, quite sufficient, it would, I am sure, have been more satisfactory to subscribers to receive some assurance or guarantee that the Spanish Government likewise intend to inaugurate a more liberal commercial policy in their colonies than the one hitherto pursued by them.

The enormous protection afforded to the Spanish flag, the number of colonial ports yet entirely closed to foreign trade, the complicated tariffs, and many other important matters of a restrictive nature, have been and always will be against the expected or promised unfettering of the resources in which the colonies certainly abound. Spanish colonists seem convinced of this; at least, at Manila several attempts to raise funds by local Government loans have been made, but with little or no success. The principle of colonial contributions to the mother country may be right or wrong, but in any case it ought not to be enforced to excess. The colony above alluded to (Manila) has to pay in kind an annual tribute of 130,000 cwt. of leaf tobacco to Spain, which quantity is despatched regularly to Europe; while it is now reported that the Manila Government owes to planters about 4½ millions of dollars for crops 1866-1868, for which no payments were forthcoming. Hence a crisis, the further consequence being that planters are leaving the districts in masses, as they decline to continue to work for nothing. A similar state of affairs was predicted already eighteen months ago by the then Colonial Treasurer in a pamphlet issued by him, but no effectual steps were taken. In fact, the policy of Spain towards her colonies must greatly and speedily alter, else the colonial financial crisis which it is now sought to alleviate will soon recur and become a permanent evil. Let us, therefore, hope that the loan now to be raised will be employed in a manner really and truly beneficial to the colonists established in those fertile islands.

TELEGRAPHIC COMMUNICATION WITH INDIA AND CHINA.

A very numerous and influential meeting of members of Parliament, bankers, merchants, and others, representing various interests in the East, was held on the 23rd inst. at the Mansion-house, to consider the present state of telegraphic communication with India, which is alleged on all hands to be extremely unsatisfactory. The meeting was convened by Sir Frederick Halliday, chairman of the Anglo-Indian Telegraph Company, by circular, in which he remarked on the great importance of the subject. The Lord Mayor, who had placed a large room in his official residence at the disposal of the meeting, occupied the chair, and there were present Sir Frederick Halliday, Mr. Crawford, M.P., Baron Alfred de Rothschild, Mr. C. L. Bevan, Mr. John Peel, M.P., Sir Charles Bright, M.P., Mr. O'Beirne, M.P., Mr. Alderman Salomons, M.P., Mr. Gilpin, M.P., Mr. G. Moffatt, M.P., Captain Sherard Osborn, Mr. Jones Gibb, Mr. Willoughby Smith, Sir S. Canning, Mr. E. D. Kilburn, Mr. D. Mackinlay, Mr. H. G. Gordon, Mr. J. B. Key (Ashton and Co.), Sir R. Macdonald Stephenson, M. C. G. Pretsch, Baron de Stern, Mr. R. J. Ashton, Mr. James Russell, Mr. W. Napier, Mr. W. M'Adam Stewart, Mr. J. Wyllie, Mr. John Pender, Dr. Bishop, Mr. T. Hughes, Mr. J. S. Morgan, Mr. Rawson, Mr. Cyrus Field, Mr. Steven (Forbes, Forbes, and Co.), Mr. C. Magniac (Matheson and Co.), Mr. Charles Shand, Mr. P. D. Hadow (Peninsular and Oriental Company), Mr. James Allan (ditto), Mr. H. Bayley (ditto), Mr. J. C. Deane, Mr. T. H. Wells, Mr. C. W. Pickford, Mr. James Fraser, Mr. James Reiss, Mr. G. U. Adam, Mr. E. W. Campbell, Mr. J. R. M'Clean, Mr. W. Paterson, Mr. R. B. Alston, Mr. John Fleming, Mr. W. Shuter (Messrs. J. W. Cater and Co.), Mr. B. J. Colvin, Mr. Nicol, Major Snell, Mr. C. W. Howell, and many more.

It was originally intended that the conference should be private, but the persons interested in the subject attended in such numbers that by common consent the meeting assumed a public character.

Sir FREDERICK HALLIDAY, who, it will be recollected, was at one time Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, was the first speaker. He reminded the meeting that in 1856 the practical working of the postal and telegraphic communication between this country and India was investigated by a Select Committee of the House of Commons, of which his friend Mr. Crawford, member for the city, was chairman, and upon which both the Home and Indian Governments were most efficiently represented, as were also the interests of commerce and science in especial relation to telegraphy. The report of the committee described the existing methods of carrying on those communications as imperfect in their organisation, inefficient in their working, and liable at any time to interruption from political and other causes entirely beyond the control of the British Government, and at the same time set forth the advantages of telegraphic intercourse with India in relation to its trade with this country upon the evidence of very competent witnesses who had appeared before them. That intercourse was in Europe under the control of almost every nation, and in Asia at the control of a set of incapable and utterly unimprovable Arabs, Turks, and barbarians. The committee dwelt on the impossibility of obtaining redress, but pointed out the means of improvement. Their report was most able and complete, and did credit to themselves and to the energetic and able member who presided over them. It left nothing to be desired, and the whole subject was laid before the House of Commons, the Government, and the nation. That was nearly two years ago, and what had been the result? Absolutely nothing. All the delays, uncertainty, and inaccuracy in the transmission of messages—all the thousand causes of dissatisfaction—continued. At this time the Persian Gulf line was broken, and we were practically cut off from communication with the East. It was a grave reproach that such a state of things should have been allowed to continue so long, considering the magnitude of the political, social, and other interests which were bound up in the maintenance of the existing relations between this country and India. It was a grievance and a positive humiliation. In the city of London it was impossible to exaggerate the enormous importance of a punctual, rapid, and accurate telegraphic communication with the East. At present, when a man sent a message to India there was no knowing whether it would arrive in ten hours, or ten days, or thirty-six days, or whether it would arrive at all. Or, if it did arrive, whether it was intelligible, or whether the sense of it might not be ruinously reversed. (Hear, hear.) Why should they tolerate such a state of things? Ocean telegraphy, as Mr. Field said to him the other day, was no longer a romance or a marvel; it was a hard, practical, and substantial fact, just as much so as the mail train from Liverpool to London, and ought to be as regular, punctual, and complete. Take the case of the Abyssinian Expedition; why should we not have intelligence in six hours from the seat of war? But what was the fact? According to The Times of Saturday the latest telegraphic communication was dated the 2nd of March, twenty days ago. How was the General to communicate with his base of operations under such a system, or what more need be said of the inefficiency of such a system? During the mutiny of 1857, when the very fate of our Indian Empire trembled in the balance, the Europeans in many places depended for relief on the chance arrival of troops, or on the miserable possibility that in the midst of the wild and trackless sea an army on its way to China might be intercepted. That was eleven years ago, and were we any wiser? Had we taken any practical measures in consequence? Suppose such an emergency were to happen to-morrow—and let no man "lay the flattering unction to his soul" that it could not—and that daughters, wives, and sons were in the hands of a bloodthirsty soldiery, our countrymen would be nearly as much cut off from telegraphic communication with England as they were in 1858. Between people so severed and separated, and yet so bound house to house and heart to heart, it would be a priceless blessing if such a communication were effected as that which it was now sought to establish. He did not care who made the communication so long as it was made, but he certainly represented a body of gentlemen who were able and willing to do that great work in the only way in which it could be done. What they wanted was one line, under one control, and that British control, and free from end to end of all political, Asiatic, or European complications. (Cheers.) If, then, Government did not make such a communication, let them not mar it. He urged the meeting to press on the House of Commons and the Government the absolute necessity of insisting on the communication being made, and he trusted the conference would result in bringing about a satisfactory system instead of that of which they were now heartily ashamed. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. CRAWFORD, M.P., said the real question was not so much the grievances under which they were labouring as the way to remedy them. The Commons' Committee of 1866 in their report set forth all the bad elements in the system as it then existed, and every one of those elements still remained in full force. The committee recommended what they thought a proper course, and as the Government had since done nothing at all in the matter, this conference was held with the view of putting some pressure upon them. Any system of telegraphic communication between this country and India through the Continent would be essentially unsound, dependent as we were in the present day on the goodwill of foreign countries, and seeing that circumstances might arise to cut off our communication with the East absolutely and entirely. There were also great physical difficulties in the way of upholding a system of communication in rigorous winters and in mountainous parts of a country. On the other hand, we had the sea nearly the whole way from this to India, and we could be independent of almost every other nation along the route, with the single exception of the 120 miles between Alexandria and Suez. We had again the sea from Suez to Bombay. The laying of a line from Falmouth, or from wherever else it might start, by way of Egypt, might be perfectly facile, and reliance might be placed on its freedom from interruption, except in the event of any change in our friendly relations with Egypt. As to a guarantee, the Government naturally hesitated, after the failure of the Red Sea line, seeing that we were now taxed in consequence of that failure £36,000 a year. The Government had said why did we not put our shoulders to the wheel after the success of the Atlantic cable? The answer was that circumstances were very different, seeing that in the case of the Atlantic cable there was a broad expanse of water between the two countries it was sought to connect. We had also to a certain extent a political difficulty, arising out of the necessity of passing through Egypt, and having regard to that necessity—which would be nothing to that which might arise if the line passed through the Continent—he thought the Government were bound to assist by participating in the risk of the enterprise should anything happen to render the line valueless in the event of Egypt being at any time in the possession of a foreign Power at enmity with us. The practical step for the meeting to take was to resolve themselves into a committee to consider the best way to carry on an agitation on this subject, if he might use the term, but he would rather advise a fresh appeal to the Government or to Parliament, and if they thought it necessary to go as a deputation to the Government of India, he for one would be ready to accompany them. To the memorial presented in November last they received the usual stereotyped answer of a Government unwilling to do anything. They, the merchants, bankers, and others present, and all others connected with the East generally, should give the Government to understand that they were exceedingly dissatisfied with the existing state of our telegraphic communication, and ask for assistance either in the form of a guarantee or as circumstances might require.

Mr. JOHN PENDER, speaking on behalf of the Manchester Chamber of Commerce, said the complaints by the mercantile community there as to the irregularities connected with the present system of telegraphic communication were loud and long. The Government appeared to have facilities for quick communication, but not so the merchants of Manchester. The Chamber of Commerce had memorialised the Government on the subject, and he believed if action were taken by the meeting it would be earnestly and energetically supported by the commercial community of Manchester. There was a strong feeling on the part of the Government in reference to guarantees, but if they would only take their fair share in the shape of capital the thing would be done forthwith. Looking at them as the landlords of a great territory, they were bound to do as much for themselves as they, the merchants and others interested in the matter, were willing to do for themselves.

Mr. JOHN PEEL, M.P., bore testimony from his own experience to the extreme and vexatious irregularities and inconveniences in the transmission of telegrams, and said there was a grave suspicion in some quarters that they were tampered with on the way at some of the stations. He himself, however, had no reason whatever to suspect anything like bribery. So far from there being any improvement, the telegrams were worse and worse. He moved:—"That the following gentlemen, members of Parliament and others, representing various Eastern interests, be requested to form themselves into a standing committee, with power to add to their number, for the purpose of collecting and supplying such further information as may be necessary or available on the subject of Eastern telegraphic communication, and of arranging and carrying into effect such action as may be deemed advisable for the purpose of bringing the subject before the Government and the House of Commons:—Mr. Fleming, Mr. Creke, Mr. Wyllie, Sir F. Halliday, Mr. Napier, Mr. Magniac, Mr. Walkenshaw, Mr. Reiss, Mr. Gibb, Mr. Atkins, Mr. Hadow, and Mr. H. Gordon."

The motion was seconded by Baron ALFRED DE ROTHSCHILD, and carried with acclamation.

On the motion of Sir FREDERICK HALLIDAY, the thanks of the meeting were unanimously voted to the Lord Mayor for presiding on the occasion, and for affording accommodation in the Mansion-house for holding it.

The LORD MAYOR said he was glad they had assembled in such numbers, and taken up the subject in so business-like a manner, which afforded an augury that the work would be carried to a grand practical conclusion, for it was ridiculous that with such an army as we had in India, and with hundreds of thousands of our kindred there, we should be wanting in proper facilities for rapid communication with them.

The meeting then separated.

In the Italian Chamber of Deputies General Menabrea, replying to an interpellation of Signor Siccardi, has stated that the Government has determined to send the frigate Clotilde to Japan for the protection of Italian commerce.

HAMBURG, March 24.

It must appear to your readers so much like the fable of the Boy and the Wolf that I am almost afraid to revert to the old story of the Austrian expedition to the Far East. Nevertheless, the subject has been again revived, and, without being at all sanguine, I must say it looks as if there was this time a fair chance of success. In your last issue you republished the remarks of a correspondent of the Standard on the subject, and it is scarcely worth the ink to observe that they are greatly exaggerated and evidently penned with the animosity of party spirit and a desire to make Hungary look ridiculous. At all events, the writer is quite wrong as far as regards the projected expedition, for Hungary has quite as much to gain by commercial intercourse with China and Japan as Austria Proper, and from the very beginning the Hungarian Ministers have expressed themselves quite ready and willing to bear a fair share of the expenses of the mission. The arrival at Vienna of Herr Overbeck, the Austrian Consul at Singapore, seems to have infused new life into the authorities and the public, and produced something like enthusiasm. On the invitation of the Central Committee of the "Association of Austrian Industrials" a public meeting was held on the 11th inst., to take the subject into consideration, and about a hundred gentlemen attended. Colonel von Paradis, Vice-President of the Association, took the chair, and opened the meeting with a speech in which he contended that the owners of industrial establishments were more than others called upon to support the projected expedition, as it could not fail to bring grist to their own mills and be good for the general prosperity of the empire. Herr von Pacher, Referendary of the Central Committee, gave at considerable length an expose of the various interests that would reap benefits from trade with the East, and at his suggestion a resolution was passed declaring the adherence of the meeting to the principle of the expedition and pledging themselves to support it. At the same time it was resolved to draw up and publish a proclamation inviting support and co-operation from all merchants, shipowners, manufacturers, and corporations throughout the empire, for the execution of which a committee was elected, consisting of Messrs. von Pacher, von Paradis, Haardt, von Scrinzi, and Theimer.

All this is very satisfactory, and it is still more so to be able to state—as I am in a position to do from competent authority—that last week a conference was held at the offices of the Minister for Trade in Vienna—the Minister for Trade in the chair—which was attended by Vice-Admiral von Tegethoff, Captain Wipplinger, of the Imperial Navy, Baron von Gagern, Dr. von Scherzer, Consul-General Overbeck, and the Ministerial Secretary, Chawatt, as well as the Under-Secretary of State, Herr Fest, as the representative of the Hungarian Government, when the principle of sending out an expedition to the Far East with as little delay as possible was admitted on all sides. The two respective Ministers for Trade will now come to an understanding concerning the expenses and the proportionate amounts to be borne by the Austrian and Hungarian Treasuries, and then the next step will be to lay the plan before their respective legislatures, and ask for a vote in the usual constitutional manner.

The day before yesterday being the King of Prussia's birthday, the new German flag was displayed for the first time on all the public buildings in this city. A parade of the garrison and a military church service in the open air followed. In the evening the theatres were thrown open, and two military balls were given in honour of the occasion.

COMMERCIAL.

Coffee continues the leading article this week also, the sales amounting again to 50,000 bags, for which even rather better prices were paid, the market closing firm. There is no improvement to notice in Rice, but the demand is steady. Tea is higher and the transactions of the week have been considerable; among the sales by importers were 150 packages of Moning Congou per Peter Denny, via London, 214 do. do. per Douglas Castle from Shanghai (also via London), and the following parcels per Hong Kong, direct from Foochow: 213 packages Congou, 1,266 do. Kaisow Congou, 180 do. Pekoe Congou, 288 do. Pakling Congou, 797 do. Souchong, 104 do. Pekoe, and 48 do. Oolong. Notwithstanding the arrival of large supplies of Cassia Lignea the buyers are insatiable. Last week 1,600 chests were placed at 12½ sch. bco., but as importers wished to sell, as they still realise a large profit, they were content with 12¼, at which figure 4,000 chests changed hands, and there are still purchasers at that price. A better feeling prevails for Pepper, and 2,500 bags Singapore were taken at 3⅝ sch. bco. per lb., by which the stock in importers' hands is cleared off. There is but little demand for Spelter, and prices are about the same as last week, the only sales reported being 1,000 centners for spring delivery, and 500 do. afloat for delivery on arrival at 13.11, and 100 do. for spring delivery at 13.10

HOLLAND.

ROTTERDAM, March 25.

As I told you in my last, the Government, at the sitting of the 14th instant, laid upon the table the "Orange-book," containing the principal diplomatic documents tending to defend the policy pursued in the Lemburg-Luxemburg question, and principally with a desire to prove the fact that Holland had joined in the guarantee of the neutrality of Luxemburg. The papers show that no mention of such a guarantee was contained in the original draft of the London treaty, but that the Government consented to allow that it was included under the conviction that war would otherwise be inevitable. This was opposed by the Opposition, which criticised vigorously the behaviour of the Minister of Foreign Affairs. The debate lasted six days, at which, first the Minister, and afterwards some members of the Ministerial party, urged the necessity of the report of the committee appointed to investigate this diplomatic correspondence laying down an issue for the Chamber to vote upon the foreign policy of the Government, so that the Ministry could bring forward the Cabinet question again. This was declined by the Liberals, and a division was taken upon this conclusion—"That the Chamber should accept the papers as information, and should pass to the order of the day"—that is, that this Chamber should approve the vote of the former Chamber upon the foreign policy. This was passed by 55 against 18 votes. Then the debate about the motion of Mr. Blusse, that "The House having heard the statements of the Ministers, is of opinion that the country's interests did not require the last dissolution of the Chamber," was resumed, and, after a short debate, was carried by 89 against 34 votes. Notwithstanding that the Ministers promised to consider the adoption of this motion as a vote of want of confidence, they now declare that this motion was too ambiguous for the Ministry to consider it as a hostile vote involving the necessity for requesting their resignations. As soon as the division was known, Mr. de Bosch Kamper rose, and proposed that the House should forward an address to the King, in which the actual political situation should be stated, and the position of the Chamber and the Ministry fairly indicated for to-day's sitting. This address will be moved by a commission of five members. It is generally thought that a prolix debate will ensue, but the result is entirely a matter of conjecture, as the Ministers have elected to remain in office despite all hostile votes. I need not say that the general business and the interests of the country suffer much by this crisis, which must end in a dissolution of the Chamber, or an entire change in the Cabinet.

Beyond this struggle between the two parties in Parliament there is but very scant news. From Amsterdam I hear that the General Company of Trade and Industry will liquidate in a very short time; of course the financial condition of affairs will not be found very satisfactory.

In Rotterdam a very curious fact has occurred. A well-known actor, Mr. Albregt, had expressed his intention of giving a performance for his benefit; amongst the pieces announced for performance was a farce, called "The Two Emperors at Salzburg, or Napoleon III. as Marriage Broker." The Burgomaster of that town, however, prohibited the performance, under the instruction of the Minister of the Interior. The fact is, that the French Ambassador saw, in the title of the piece, an offence against the Emperor of the French.

Mr. A. Hohwu, manufacturer of chronometers at Amsterdam, has been honoured by the Japanese Government with a magnificent testimonial, which has been presented to him by the officer of the Japanese "Marine Akamak." This testimonial, a pair of silver vases, was presented to him in recognition of his services on behalf of the Japanese Marine. The testimonial bore the following inscription:—"The Government of Japan to Mr. Hohwu, Royal Manufacturer of Chronometers at Amsterdam, as a proof of esteem, 1867."

Postscript.—Rotterdam, March 25th.—The result of yesterday's sitting was most astonishing. I hazarded the probability that the address to the King, proposed by Mr. Kemper, would be approved of, but instead of my opinion being realised, the proposal was rejected by sixty-nine against three votes. After this decision the Chamber parted for the Easter recess. The Ministerial question is now en suspens, and no one knows what will occur. The Netherlands Bank has raised its discount ½ per cent.

COMMERCIAL.

Coffee.—The result of the Company's sale, at which 7[illegible],890 b. Java were offered, was that white Java Tjilatjap and Preanger sorts fetched 1c. to 2c. above valuation, whilst the inferior qualities of Java, Cadoe, and Malang were sold under the valuation. There is a good demand for the white and yellowish white sorts from this auction, but nothing is offered. The private transactions include 2,127 b. Java ex Insulinde and Nicot, 2,540 b. Padang Mocco ex Bremenland Mary Goddard, at 40c., and 2,563 b. Java ex Nederland.

Raw Sugar.—On the 19th inst. the Trading Company held its auction, at which 55,735 mats were offered, and all sold. The result, however, was not very favourable, the prices being for the brown and yellow sorts ½f. to ¾f. under those of November, and the white from 1f. to 1¼f. The greatest quantity was bought by Dutch refiners, only 10,000 mats being bought for export. The value now it as follows:—

No.	Value. Mar.	Nov.	No.	Value. Mar.	Nov.
5	f.28½	f.29	13	f.32¾	f.33½
6	29⅛	30	14	33¼	34¼
7	28¾	29¼	15	33½	34¼
8	29⅜	30¼	16	33¾	34½
9	30⅜	31¼	17	34¼	35¼
10	30½	31	18	34½	36
11	31¼	32	19	34¾	35¾
12	32¼	32¾	20	35½	36

Since the auction the market has been very firm, but no transactions have taken place, except that 561 mats Pamaroekan, floating per Seringapatam, No. 11, were sold at 31f. The stock of raw sugar in bond amounts to 34,339,743 kilo.

Rice, Tea, and Spices without the least particulars. The quotation is, for Nutmegs, No. 1, 80c. to 82c.; No. 2, 72c. to 73c.; No. 3, 57c. to 58c.; No. 4, 36c. to 37c.; Mace D, 116c. to 117c.; E, 112c. to 113c.; Cloves, No. 2, 28c. to 29c.; Java Cinnamon, No. 3, 155c. to 157c.; Black Pepper, 17½c. to 18c.; white, 40c. to 42c.

Arrack.—38/1 to 24/2 casks Batavia, trade-mark A P ex New Orleans, and 100 do. L A were offered by inscription. Only the first parcels were sold at 259¾f.

Tobacco.—(Java leaves.) On the 31st will be offered in auction 2,299 b. Tempeh, P K Blitar and M P. The stocks of Java at Amsterdam amount to 4,781 b.

Indigo.—The market is very firm, but without transactions, the stock being very unimportant.

Banca Tin.—2,000 slabs were sold at 54f. Billiton is quoted 52¾f.

Miscellaneous.—528 ch. Gummi Damar were sold by inscription, floating per Daniel Rankin from Batavia, at prices that did not transpire. Camphor unaltered, but firm. Cubebs, 129 b. ex Tweelingen changed hands, but the prices are not known. Rattans, 133 pic. ex Vrachtzoeker were sold at very firm prices.

Money and Stock Markets.—The stock markets have been generally dull, except the home funds; foreign stocks have been in general less buoyant. The demand for money was somewhat heavy, and especially in the open market the inquiries continue very active. Dutch Two-and-a Half per Cents., 54; Three per Cents., 63⅛; Four per Cents., 84⅞; Trading Company, 135½; Netherlands Bank, 253; Dutch India Trading Bank, 73½ to 74.

LIVERPOOL SPRING ASSIZES.

Disputed Charter-Party.—Miebuhr and Another v. Prichard.—Mr. Chas. Russell was for the plaintiffs, and Mr. T. Jones, Q.C., and Mr. Bruce for the defendants. The plaintiffs, who are cotton merchants at London, with agents in Liverpool, brought the action to recover compensation for damages alleged to have been sustained by them, by reason of the breach on charter party by the defendants, who are merchants and shipowners in Liverpool. The Charter-party in dispute was made upon the ship Cambria, belonging to the defendants, in September, 1865. The parties to the charter were Messrs. Tilby and Co., brokers in Liverpool, acting as agents for the defendants, and Messrs. Mors Le Blanche, as agents for the plaintiffs. The charter provided that after the ship had been fitted for sea she should proceed to Singapore with a cargo for the benefit of the owners, and then go to Rangoon for orders and afterwards to Bassein or Akyab for rice. She was then to return to the United Kingdom, and be discharged either at the port of London or Liverpool. If the ship was discharged in London the freight was to be 57s. 6d. The ship was to be addressed to Messrs. Tilby and Co., or to agents to be named by them, and they were to report the ship, collect the freight, and attend to the general business of the ship. The Cambria was loaded with a cargo of rice at Bassein, which she discharged at London. The defendants placed the ship in the hands of Messrs. Bagshot, brokers, of Leadenhall-street, London, and it was alleged that by so doing, and depriving Messrs. Tilby or their agents of it, they had broken the charter party. The charter party did not state the amount of remuneration to be paid, but the ordinary terms were 2½ per cent. on the whole freight. The amount of freight upon which the defendant paid was £3,964 12s. 4d., and the commission claimed was £99 2s. 6d. Mr. Mors, who had been in business for about fourteen years and was interested in from sixty to eighty charters during a year, said the practice, so far as his experience went, was under the "address clause," to pay 2½ per cent. commission. On the other hand, it was contended that when a ship was "addressed" the owners of the ship and freight had the option of attending to the ship's business, and the brokers were entitled to a fee of from two to five guineas for having "reported" the ship.—His Lordship, in directing the jury, said the question for their consideration was whether they were satisfied any usage had been proved which imported that where a ship was "addressed" to a broker or his agent he was entitled to a commission of 2½ per cent. whether he did the business of the ship or not.—The jury gave a verdict for the defendants.—His Lordship asked the jury if they found that the usage had not been established.—The Foreman: Yes.—His Lordship: Is there any usage proved to your satisfaction that the addressed broker should report the ship and be entitled to the fee for reporting? Yes.—The plaintiffs were allowed £1 6s., with leave to the defendants to move.

MANCHESTER MARKETS.

Mr. Sam Mendel's Report of yesterday says:—"During the past week a fair but not very active business was done in the market at daily advancing values, chiefly in resale lots of shirtings at irregular prices, varying 3d. to 9d. per piece below manufacturers' quotations. Yarns found favour, and were placed somewhat freely by spinners at advancing rates. This morning there was less animation both in yarns and goods, with some moderate reduction in values; but at no time was there any marked pressure to make sales, and since noon there is a better feeling and more disposition to give out orders at some moderate reduction from the quoted prices herein." Quotations are:—Grey Shirtings, 7lbs., 10s. to 10s. 6d.; 8¼lbs., 12s. 6d.; Cotton Yarn, Nos. 16-24, 16½d. to 18¼d.; Nos. 28-32, 1s. 5½d. to 1s. 8d.; Maddapollams, 4s. 6d.; Long Cloths, 11s. 6d.; T-Cloths, 7s. 6d.; White Spot Shirtings, 12s. 9d.

Head Office	KIACHTA, ORIENTAL SIBERIA, C. MITCHELL GRANT, Proprietor.

ARRANGEMENTS FOR 1868.

The Proprietor has made arrangements to run six couriers per month in May and June, in the event of delay in the transmission of telegrams by the Russian Telegraph Service. It may not be generally known that the delays during the last season were occasioned by the overflowing of the Rivers Irtisch, Obi, and Yenessei; upwards of 800 versts of Telegraph Line were swept away from time to time. As such inundations occur only once or twice in a century, the Proprietor hopes that the precaution he has taken will prove unnecessary. During the latter two months of last season the line worked very well, and Telegrams were delivered to and from Europe in 18 days; the average time being as follows:—

London and Kiachta by Telegraph	2 days.
Kiachta and Tientsin by Courier	12 „
Tientsin and Shanghai by Steamer	4 „
Total ...	18 days.

A courier having been killed by a fall from his horse last year, the telegram bag was lost, and has not yet been recovered. In order to prevent a recurrence of the inconvenience, it is the intention of the Proprietor to open all telegrams addressed to his care, and forward duplicates by the subsequent courier to their respective addresses, unless he be specially notified to the contrary. The number of stations in Mongolia will be doubled this year. Contracts have been made to deliver telegrams between Kiachta and Tientsin in twelve days; the non-fulfilment of the contracts as to time entails a penalty upon the contractors of from 1 to 3 taels per hour (6s. to 18s.), thus giving a guarantee that delay will not occur.

After the first two months of the season, which are the most severe as regards the climate, the contractors will reduce their contract time to ten days.

C. MITCHELL GRANT.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS.—Unerring Precision.—When health is breaking down from the continuance of some weakening discharge; when ulcers refuse to heal, and extending mischief is threatened, then is the time to try the potency of Holloway's healing Ointment and purifying Pills. No treatment for giving ease and safety leading to a cure can be compared to this. The Ointment cleans and cools the foulest and most angry sores, diminishes the inflammation, reduces the swelling, prevents the growth of proud flesh, and spares both pain and danger. Thousands testify from their own personal experience to the unvarying success attending the use of Holloway's medicaments in cases of ulcerated legs, enlarged veins, scurfy skins, and swelled ankles.

Summary of News from the Far East.

JAPAN.

THE REVOLUTION.

By way of San Francisco (as noticed in another column) we have already received news from Japan some ten days later than that brought by the present mail. There are, however, no facts of importance that are not comprised in the following summary of the Japan Times, which brings our dates from the new ports to the 20th February:—

We have nothing absolutely conclusive to report of the result of the struggle now in progress between the Mikado and the Southern Daimios and the ex-Shiogoon and his friends of the North. What we have to state, however, is of such a character as to lead to the hope, if not to the belief, that the existing difficulties will be overcome, and peace restored to the country without further bloodshed. Our statement last mail that the Mikado had offered to accept the treaties of 1858 and, nomine mutato, to put himself in the place of the Shiogoon as our ally, is confirmed by the publication of an official notification at Kobe to that effect. One of our correspondents there, writing under date of the 16th inst., says:—"A notification is published to-day, setting forth that the Mikado has undertaken to carry out the treaties with foreigners in their integrity, and commanding Japanese subjects to abstain from lawless acts towards foreigners. The natives are further informed that Satsuma and Chiosiu have garrisoned Kobe, and are enjoined to pursue their avocations 'without anxiety.' The Government of Hiogo and Osaka is for the present vested in three commissioners, one of whom is Ito." This man Ito is very well known to some of the members of the Foreign Legations, who have met him at Simonoseki and elsewhere; he is a confidential servant of Prince Chiosiu. In furtherance of the intentions of the Emperor, Dr. Willis and Mr. Satow have been invited up to Kioto. The ostensible reason of the visit is that Dr. Willis should give his professional assistance to some wounded officers of the Mikado's army, but it is believed at Kobe, and doubtless with good reason, that Sir Harry Parkes had a political object in view in sending them up. They left Kobe on the 16th Feb., and their visit would last, it was thought, about a fortnight. It is probably preliminary to an expedition to the capital by some of the Ministers.

On the 18th a representative of each of the Legations went up to Osaka to make preparations for the return of the Ministers to that city at an early date, their continued residence at Kobe being inconvenient and undesirable for many reasons besides those of a political nature. Thus diplomatic relations appear to be pretty firmly established already, or in good train towards their establishment, between the new rulers of Japan and ourselves. A lingering doubt of the power of the Southern chiefs, however, or a weak notion that it is possible to keep on good terms both with them and with the opposite party, by refusing special advantages to either, would seem to be indicated by the publication of a notification which, another correspondent tells us, has been issued (18th inst.) at Kobe. This is to enjoin foreigners not to sell arms or munitions of war to any Japanese whatever, to Government or private person.

The unfortunate rupture of friendly relations with the Prince of Bizen, which we mentioned in our last, has been pretty well accommodated, though for some time it was feared that evil consequences might ensue. The Prince held a village half way to Osaka called Nishi-omiya, mentioned by our old correspondent Mr. Seare as the place where he used to halt to "renovate the tissues" when journeying from Hiogo to Osaka or back. On the 13th inst., eight days after the disturbance at Kobe, Bizen's people still remaining at Nishi-omiya, the foreign consuls had to issue notifications warning their countrymen against going thither; and thus the land road to Osaka was completely blocked up. As this state of things manifestly could not be allowed to continue, Satsuma and Chiosiu ordered Bizen to quit his position. This at first he refused to do, but when he saw the others quite in earnest and prepared to force him out if necessary, he retired after a slight show of resistance, and went up to Kioto.

The greatest possible care is taken by the Yedo party to keep their transactions secret, or to falsify events which occur. We have it on good authority from various sources, however, that the house of Iyeyas is divided against itself. It is stated that 'Stotsbashi is truly a "man of peace." It may be remembered that his sole alleged reason for accepting the perilous office of Shiogoon was for the special object of bringing to a peaceful conclusion the Chiosiu war—he appears to have been forced into action at Osaka against his will—he fled, much to the disgust of many of his friends and supporters, rather than fight against the Mikado's sacred standard, and it is certain that he has been in constant negotiation with agents of Tosa and Geyshiu since his return to his capital. Our latest intelligence leads us to the belief that the sentence of outlawry, originally pronounced against him, has been rescinded, and that he is allowed to retire from public life by a less unpleasant route than the hara-kiri. This concession, it is said, has been obtained from the Mikado—really from Chiosiu and Satsuma—by Owari and Echizen, Stotsbashi's relatives. The prince of Kiishiu assumes the headship of the Tokugawa family, and Stotsbashi disappears from public life. Such is the programme as stated to us; its correctness we cannot absolutely vouch for. We can only say that we consider it highly probable that this will be the solution of the existing difficulty. Some of Stotsbashi's friends are highly indignant however at the suggestion, and want to fight for the restoration of a chief who won't fight for himself. But this is a sort of enthusiam that must soon burn itself out. One of the Wakadoshiyori or Second Council, however, has shown he was in earnest, by committing hara-kiri.

YOKOHAMA.

Our advices from this port are brought down to the 27th February. The outward mail of Dec. 26 was delivered on the 20th February. The following items of local news are from the Japan Times:—

It is rumoured among the Japanese that Yedo will be opened to foreign trade almost immediately. We are in a position however to contradict this. A native company has bought the Enakawa, a small screw steamer of very small draught of water, for a ferry boat to ply between this and Yedo. She will make the up and down trip every day, which will be a great convenience. Our Japanese speculators, however, must strengthen their "line"—for they will assuredly never be able to work it with only one boat.

A meeting has taken place of subscribers to the new hospital. The way in which the election of Dr. de Meyer was secured the other day confirms us in our impression that the whole thing is a cleverly executed job, and as a couple of Dutch men-of-war are expected here immediately, English subscribers may probably have an opportunity of seeing what we predicted —English patients turned out of the beds to make room for Dutch sailors.

Mr. Goodwin, the Assistant Judge of the Shanghai Court, returns by this steamer, after having decided several cases locally important, but of no great interest to outside readers. A great case is shortly coming on in the American Court to decide which of two vessels was in the wrong—the Herman or the Osaca—in a recent collision, in which the latter was almost destroyed. The damages claimed are $85,000.

The weather is getting much milder, but is still a great deal colder than is pleasant. We look for a few weeks' rain, after which the charming Japan spring will come to delight and comfort us. The health of the Settlement is moderately good.

The appearance of the Mikado's officers here is not expected immediately. We mentioned in our postscript last mail, that detachments of troops were being made against Daimios in the South who were friendly to the ex-Shiogoon. Hashimoto Shosho, one of the Sanyo or second council under the new system, and a special commissioner, Yanagawari, attended by a number of officers and a large force of picked troops, are proceeding through the South, receiving the submission, or degrading and making inkio chiikiyo, of a number of the Fudais who have hitherto been so useful to the Shiogoon in those parts, by overlooking and holding in check the Kokushi Daimios. It is evident that the work must take some time, and equally clear that it would be folly for the Southerners to march on Yedo until they had made all safe behind them. And time appears to be doing their work for them. Dissatisfaction and disaffection will probably exist for some time, but after their appearance among many we doubt any resistance being made when the Mikado's officers arrive.

Great complaints, says the Gazette, are made by the Yokohama community about the doings, or rather want of doings, of the municipal director, Mr. Dohmen, a Dutch gentleman, formerly in the British Consular service, who draws the nice little income of $7,200 for his municipal services, which, it is alleged, are most inefficiently performed. By taking the action he has done (which transpired at a meeting of land renters) Mr. Dohmen has created a great gulf between the community and the governors of Kanagawa, and rendered his office an object of public opprobium.

The foreign ministers are soon expected back to Yokohama, and the officers of the new government will probably follow in their train. His Excellency the French Minister left on the 25th for Hiogo with Admiral Ohier, and the whole French squadron; so that it would appear that even M. Roches is at last convinced that Stotsbashi has really thrown up the sponge. How the matter of the French contracts has been arranged has not transpired; an attempt will probably be made to compel the Mikado to take them over. To use an expression more expressive than elegant—he will be a great fool if he does.

The man Bryers, of H.M. 9th Regiment, who was the unfortunate cause of the death of his comrade Gibbons, was indicted on the 17th February for wilful murder, before Mr. Goodwin, Assistant Judge of the Supreme Court. The prisoner was found guilty of manslaughter, and sentenced to two years' imprisonment, with hard labour. The provocation received was excessive; the deed was certainly not premeditated, and it is hard to believe that a man would really have the intention to kill another with a penknife: so that probably, taking into account the reproaches of the man's own conscience, a couple of years in Hong Kong jail is sufficient punishment to exact for the crime.

NAGASAKI.

The latest date from this port is March 5. The newly acquired boon of regular mail communication seems to be fully appreciated by the community here, and it is expected to have a very beneficial effect on the development of trade. The residents, however, complain of the very short time mail steamers are detained there. On the last trip of the Cadiz she is stated to have arrived at 10 P.M., and sailed next morning at 8, many of the inhabitants having no notice of her arrival. The same grievance is complained of with reference to the Pacific mail steamer which, having arrived at dusk, was despatched at 2 A.M. A circular appears to have been issued about 10 P.M., warning passengers to get on board at once; but several of the residents did not see the circular, and had their correspondence shut out.

A letter from this port says:—"The Princes have taken the government of the place, and given their bond for the security and well-being of the foreign settlement; and from the stringent manner in which they carry out their promises it seems to be an improvement on the old Government. The Shiogoon has been declared to be a rebel by the Southern powers, as having executed treaties with foreign Powers without the consent of Daimios, members of the Gorogio, and what Satsuma is now doing he declares to be by orders of the Mikado. We also further learn that, instead of marching for Nagasaki as intended, he has with his armies gone on to Yedo, to fight the Government in their own tertitory. His forces are stated to be 200,000 strong. We have dispensed with our nightly guard from the men-of-war, and the night patrol has also ceased.

"The steamer Adeline (formerly the Confederate cruiser Rappahannok) is purchased by the Government, and goes up from this to Yedo with troops. The price I have not heard; I presume, however, it was not in Government bonds. Consequent on the death of Mr. Myburgh, H.B.M. Consul at Hiogo, Mr. Flowers, acting here, will be transferred to that port, and Mr. Annesley promoted to the vacant appointment."

CHINA.

HANKOW.

The impression gains ground that the stoppage of the Customs' Bank at this port, by which foreigners lose heavily, is a planned thing, in revenge for the losses inflicted on natives by the bankruptcy of Mackellar and Gordon. An important despatch on the subject has been sent by the U. S. Consul at Hankow to the Viceroy, with reference to the failure of the Customs' Bank. Mr. Medhurst, H.B.M. Consul, has addressed a similar letter, and the French, Russian and Portuguese Consuls have also written on the subject. We extract the following paragraphs.

Consulate of the United States of America, Hankow, February 16, 1868.

His Excellency Li, Viceroy of Hupeh and Honan, &c., &c., &c.

SIR,—The Superintendent of Customs, Chung, met all the foreign consuls by appointment at the British Consulate on the 12th inst. Their object in inviting him to a conference was to ascertain, in the first instance, the conditions under which the Shan-yein-tai Bank originally received its authority to collect customs' dues on account of the Chinese Government; the grounds on which the bank had been temporarily closed shortly after the Chinese New Year, and the actual amount of its assets and obligations; and it was their intention, in the event of the position of the bank not proving so disastrous as to be beyond remedy, to propose to the Superintendent of Customs new arrangements by which the bank might be permitted once more to receive customs' dues, and renew its usual business, under competent supervision, so as to give it an opportunity to recover itself without serious loss to foreign holders of its orders, and the derangement of public credit, which must inevitably follow upon its present prescribed condition.

The Superintendent of Customs proved most impracticable, although every effort was made to obtain some information from him, and to urge the expediency of an amicable adjustment of the question. He declared that he could not tell who were the partners in the bank, what the conditions were on which it was established, what assets or liabilities it has beyond his own department; he professed his inability to procure for the Consuls a sight of the books or statement of the accounts, and he persistently declined to suggest or entertain any proposition whatever, with a view to tiding over the present difficulty.

The Shang-yein-tai Bank was established by a former Taoutai, under the instructions of Viceroy Quin, at the first opening of the port, for the express purpose of receiving customs' duties on foreign trade, when it was designated as the Government or Customs' Bank; it has ever since been employed by the superintendent of customs, not only in this capacity, but likewise to effect and repay public loans, and to conduct various other monetary transactions on the part of the Government. The profits of the bank in the shape of meltage fees and difference in scales has so far been appropriated by Government; its orders have passed current, and have been received and used by the authorities in preference to those of any other banking-house. He declared the bank unable to receive dues without the slightest warning.

You will please furnish the names of the partners in the bank, of their assets and liabilities, and, if need, all assets subject to a pro rata share.

I have to request, with a view to the protection of the citizens of the United States, that I may be distinctly informed under what conditions the Koon Yew Bank, at present authorised to receive duties, is to be permitted to represent the Government, &c.

SHANGHAI.

From Shanghai we have advices to the 5th March. The outward mail of January 10, with the London telegrams to January 25, was delivered on the 29th February. From the North China Herald we gather the following items:—

Messrs. Rundle and Russell, telegraphers of the East India Telegraph Company, quitted China by the last Pacific Mail steamer from Hong Kong, having been recalled by that company on the ground that the project of connecting Hong Kong and Shanghai by a submarine cable had been indefinitely postponed, by which they probably mean abandoned. Dr. Macgowan, the commissioner of the company, did not encourage the company to undertake submarine telegraphy on the coast of China. He held that not only would such a cable be exposed to peculiar peril from the innumerable fishing vessels that are ever dredging the coast—a peril which, it seems to us, might have been easily averted by sinking it in deep water—but that a submarine line is likely to be superseded as soon as land lines are constructed, a work which, according to Dr. Macgowan, the Chinese Government proposes to undertake when, by means of their own scientific schools, they shall be provided with competent engineers. We fear this result is remote. They are disinclined to commit the construction of railways and telegraphs to foreigners, save as they do their docks, arsenals and steamers, as the exclusive property of the Government. In a word, they aim to secure all the appliances of foreign service, without incurring any avoidable subjection to the foreigner. Their decision might be held wise, if they showed any intention to forward the projects from which they reject foreign aid.

A meeting of shareholders in the Shanghai Steam Navigation Company has been held, at which the report and accounts were read and passed. The shareholders have every reason to congratulate themselves on the success of the year's working, which has resulted in a profit of tls. 806,000, and has enabled them to wipe off the whole of the cost of the new steamers whose purchase was authorised at the last meeting. It was resolved to declare a stock dividend of 50 per cent., and to re-issue the capital of the company in tls. 100 instead of tls. 1,000 shares. The steamers Manchu and Warrior were purchased from Messrs. Russell and Co. The following directors were elected for the ensuing year; Messrs. Cunningham, President; Porter Forbes, Bryans, and Overweg.

A meeting of subscribers to the Chinese Hospital was held on the 28th Feb., at which it was explained that the expenditure during the past year had been $1,181, and it was resolved to repair and improve the building. The noise of the performances at the Peking Theatre was complained of as injurious to the patients.

The Rifle Club have held a prize meeting, which was thinly attended. The programme comprised a novelty in Shanghai—a skirmishing prize, designed to test quickness as well as accuracy of aim.

The extensive alterations to the new premises in Nanking-road, which have been jointly taken by the English and local post-offices, have been completed, and the offices were removed thither on the 1st February.

A meeting of members of the Gymnasium was called on the 21st instant, but sufficient members did not attend. We are glad to see that the institution still appears to flourish, comprising over one hundred and fifty members, and possessing a considerable cash balance. We presume measures will soon be taken to get up the Spring Athletic Sports meeting.

We hear that a pension has been conferred upon one Hsing ta-sheng, who has been employed in H. B. M. Consulate as messenger since 1843, and who has really proved himself during that time "an honest man."

A Consular Notification has been issued, describing a flag to be shown by vessels in distress off Formosa, to secure protection from the natives, under the agreement lately concluded with the latter by the U.S. Consul at Amoy. It is red, oblong in shape, 2 ft. 9 in. long and 1 ft. 7 in. broad.

A great fall in steamer freights to Tientsin has taken place, through the break down of a combination to keep them up. It is hardly likely, however, that the competition will last.

The barques Kew-kee and Tales have been sold for tls. 9,450 and 11,000 respectively.

The Shanghai Recorder says:—"A strange rumour has within the last few days obtained currency in the settlement, to the effect namely that Tseng-Kwo-Fan will visit Shanghai, in order to settle a question which has arisen from a claim instituted by the French missionaries on a piece of land within the city of Shanghai. The ground in question is at present occupied by the Confucian Temple, but was, our informant tells us, some two hundred years ago the site of a Roman Catholic chapel. If this be the case, the clause in the French treaty which yields back all the lands formerly ceded to the Catholic missions will give the right to this piece; but it seems that the overseer of the Temple, an important class of men, resisted the claim, and referred the question to Peking, whence in return it was re-referred to Tseng-Kwo-Fan, as coming under his jurisdiction. If this story be true we imagine that Tseng will scarcely relish the business that has fallen to his lot, and which involves so much risk of on the one side producing hostility with France, and on the other, disgracing him in the eyes of the Peking authorities, should he make what no doubt appears to be a dangerous concession. The recent visit of H. E. Anson Burlinghame to the Viceroy, followed by the visit of Vcte. Brenier and Mr. Dillon to Nankin, without any stated object, would appear to lend colour to the rumour."

The Shanghai Recorder contains the following, with reference to the growth of native opium:—"A feature in the present native coast trade has been brought to our notice which is of no little interest to the foreign merchant—namely, the notable increase both as to quantity and quality of the Chinese opium grown in the northern provinces. We are informed, upon authority in which we have confidence, that in some parts of the empire it is considered equal, if not superior, to the best drug from India, and it is even surmised that if the cultivation and manufacture continue to improve at the same pace they have latterly, the Chinese opium may very seriously compete with that imported by foreign houses."

We are glad to hear that the party of gentlemen who we recently noticed had started on an overland journey to Foochow arrived there safely on the 14th February, having met with no trouble or inconvenience on the way. They may be expected back in Shanghai by the steamer Fusiyama.

A Tientsin correspondent, writing under date February 1st, mentions a report that the Mahomedan rebels have commenced their threatened campaign against Shanse, and captured three towns. Very heavy falls of snow had taken place.

From the North news has been received which bears out the statements already made to the effect that the Nienfei rebels contemplate making a junction with the Mahometans. The intelligence is to the effect that the Nienfei have penetrated to Kwang-ping-foo, on the borders of Chili, and that Li, the Commander-in-Chief of the Imperial Forces, has received orders to march there at once. A correspondent of the Friend of China at the seat of war speaking of the state of the army says :—

"When he (a certain General Ko, in command of thirty-four stockades) found out that so many of his men were running away, he ordered his column to march in square, and placed officers on each side of the square to watch the men more closely. But still they ran away. He then gave orders to more officers that if they saw any man running away, to behead him at once; and as they have carried his orders out to the point, and beheaded in large numbers, things are coming to a pretty pitch. I don't blame those men for running away. We have got no commissariat, and the troops have to trust to getting provisions at whatever town they may chance to halt. Fancy travelling without provisions! It is most absurd! Of course the men being without provisions, pay, or clothing, it is enough to make them run away, or even do worse—to rebel, in fact. It is not only this general's column that is in this state. The remainder, five in number, now before the rebel lines, are as bad. But General Ko has told Lee that he can finish this Nienfei rebellion in three months. I have heard this morning that the rebels have captured said General Ko. He has been fighting very hard for the last fortnight, the Imperialists gaining the victory; the rebels' loss in killed and wounded being about 4,000 men, and this during the last fourteen days only. The rebels have got very much disheartened since they lost their second in command. The Imperialists are licking them in every battle. Their second Wong was killed the third day of the eleventh month of the Chinese year. I think Lee will finish this rebellion."

FOOCHOW.

The following interesting information concerning the Chinese Arsenal at Foochow appears in a local paper :—The Chinese Arsenal is progressing rapidly. The houses for Europeans, two small schools and one ship slip are already completed, the ground (before rice fields inundated at high water) is very nearly filled in, and the foundations of the workshops are completed. This last was an extensive operation. The ground had to be filled in all round five feet high, and the foundations of the buildings had to be secured by enormous piles and a thick layer of ballast. The Arsenal was officially inaugurated on the 18th January last, when the keel of a steamer was put on the blocks and the foundation stone of the workshops was laid, the Imperial Commissioner deputed by the Peking Government to take the general direction of the arsenal presiding at the ceremony, and the native authorities doing their best to make the proceedings imposing. Troops and gunboats were posted around, with the usual firing off of muskets and guns, accompanied by gongs and crackers. The Commissioner so far conformed to European customs as to himself lay a piece of the keel, and he gave the ship the name of the Wan-nien-Tsing (the ten thousand years' Tsing dynasty). He then visited the machines which have lately arrived and were set in motion for his inspection. Afterwards he laid the foundation stone.

The Chinese Manderins have great confidence in the success of the undertaking, and co-operate heartily with the Europeans. The schools, which each number thirty pupils, have already given satisfactory evidence of progress, and in another year and a half the pupils will be able to attend lessons delivered in French or other foreign languages. At present Mons. Giquel is the sole manager at the arsenal. He has with him half of the foreign staff (about twenty people); Mr. D'Aiguebelle is expected to leave Europe with the other half in the course of the present month.

HONG KONG.

From this port we have dates to the 11th March. The London mails of January 17 were delivered in Hong Kong March 10. The most important item of news is that a rumour was afloat that, under the influence of Mr. Hart, Sir Rutherford Alcock had been induced to consent to a postponement of the revision of the treaty for eighteen months. We give below some extracts from an article in the China Mail on this subject. The following items of news are from the same paper :—

The gunboats Drake and Bouncer have been doing good service against the pirates. They left on the 28th February for Castle Peak Bay, and thence went to Deep Bay, where they landed a company of small-armed men and captured two junks, one of which was unusually well found in warlike stores, even for a Chinese pirate. The crews jumped overboard on the approach of the gunboats. They then went on to Tye Ho Bay, and thence to Chung Chow, but learned nothing of importance. We understand that Mr. Deane, Acting Superintendent of Police, accompanied the expedition.

There is, we believe, a project under consideration by the colonial Government, which if carried into execution would add very materially to the general safety of the colony. Some time since it was proposed by the directors of the Hong Kong and Whampoa Dock Company to establish a telegraphic wire between the superintendent's office at Aberdeen and the secretary's office in Victoria. A complete apparatus had already been ordered and arrived per the Serica, but for some reasons, with the details of which we are not fully acquainted, the idea was abandoned, and the apparatus and wire (consigned to the care of Messrs. Falconer and Co.) remain upon their hands. The existence of this apparatus in the colony has been brought to the knowledge of his Excellency Sir R. MacDonnell, and a proposition has been made to connect by wire the police stations of the island, and thus place such out of the way places as Sowkewan, Aberdeen, &c., in instantaneous communication with the Central Police Station. The advantages of thus having the power of immediately placing every policeman in the island on the alert at the first alarm, no matter at what point that alarm may be given, are too obvious to require any discussion. The additional feeling of security which would be engendered by knowing that the perpetrators of any outrage would almost inevitably be detected, and that crimes would therefore become more and more rare, would amply justify the expense of placing a telegraphic apparatus.

All Mr. Dent's racehorses were offered for sale by public auction on the Parade Ground, but no bids were made by the public, and the horses were evidently bought in, one after another, for the owner. A considerable number of persons were present.

The Overland Trade Report says :—"The new Hong Kong Hotel was opened on the 29th February in a highly auspicious manner, the launch of the enterprise being celebrated by a splendid tiffin, to which about one hundred and fifty guests sat down, and at which the Governor, Lady MacDonnell, and other distinguished persons were present. Since then the establishment has gradually been getting into working order, and on the 7th the American bar on the lower story was opened. Almost all the available bedroom accommodation has been taken up, and the large dining-room is crowded every evening. High hopes are naturally entertained for the future."

Nothing has yet been decided on regarding the Mint, but there is a very strong feeling against its being altogether abandoned. It is suggested that if the banks decline to avail themselves of the Governor's offer to take it over, a company should be formed to purchase and work it.

A new local publication, illustrated with photographs and entitled The China Magazine, has been started. The first number is thus reviewed in the Daily Press :—"The first number of the new China Magazine, which was published on Saturday, promises more than favourably for the series thus commenced. When the project was first announced, it was easy to foresee that a photographic periodical of the nature intended would furnish an admirable means of giving one's friends at home an idea of what Hong Kong is like. Now that the magazine is actually in existence, this is no longer a matter of conjecture. Of the three photographs which it includes, two are distinctly of a kind which will be worth preserving as mementos of the colony, or sending home to England. The frontispiece is a view of the Public Gardens, Government House, the Cathedral, the Barracks, and that part of the town generally, taken from the first bridge on the path up the Peak. It gives a good and correct idea of the best part of Victoria. The other is a view of the Racecourse, taken by the instantaneous process, on the third day of the races. The view is apparently taken from the hills on the eastern side of the valley, and includes a distant glimpse of the town and harbour, over the ridge through which the Gap-road passes. A very attractive list of photographs in course of being printed for the magazine is advertised at the end. From this we see that there are to be portraits of Stotsbashi and Prince Kung, besides all manner of views in Hong Kong, Canton, and Macao. In reference to the articles of the magazine, the necessity for lightness has been kept properly in view, and there is nothing heavy or dull in the whole number."

Digitized by Google

In our last we noticed the favourable finding of the Court of Inquiry held to investigate the loss of the P. and O. steamer Niphon, but the document itself was excluded by want of space. It runs as follows:—

The loss of the Niphon was owing primarily to unusually strong indraught, and inaccurate and deceptive bearings, partly owing to the wrong delineation of land to the westward on the chart; and, secondly, to a mistaken estimate of the distance of the land visible before the ship struck, and the existence of an uncharted reef, projecting from House-hill, the description of which place, in the China Pilot, as steep to, is also, therefore open to misconception.

After long and careful consideration of the circumstances of the case, it is held that the commander of the Niphon is exonerated from all blame for her loss, which was an accident incidental to the night navigation of this coast at this time of the year; that after the vessel struck there was no possibility of getting her off, or saving her from loss, and that the best means were taken for saving the lives of passengers and crew. That the commander was well supported by the officers of the ship in this service, the chief officer and carpenter remaining on board with him to the last—till the ship was about breaking in two. And, that the commander was warranted in leaving the wreck in the steamer Fungshuey, as there was apparently nothing left to be saved from it with any means at his disposal.

The Court desires, in conclusion, to express its high opinion of the praiseworthy conduct of Lieutenant Anson, R.N., a passenger, who at great personal risk made many and successful attempts to save the lives of the people on board.

REMARKS APPENDED TO THE ABOVE FINDING.

The discovery of a reef projecting eastward and south-eastward from House-hill (hitherto considered steep to), should lead the commanders of coast steamers to think less favourably of the channel between that land and Lamtia, for navigation in the night, than they have hitherto considered it.

The security of the navigation of this coast would be promoted by the fitting of all steamers employed in it with wheel-houses and chart-rooms, in the fore part of the vessel. Such conveniences would have materially aided the careful system of navigation which the evidence, in this case, shows to have been observed on board the Niphon.

THREATENED POSTPONEMENT OF REVISION OF THE TREATY.

The following remarks on this subject are from the China Mail:—

The announcement that a postponement of the Revision of the Treaty might, so far as the Minister's intention was concerned, be looked upon as certain, will probably take our readers by surprise. We must ourselves confess to considerable doubts as to whether the postponement will actually take place, as the united remonstrances of British residents in China—if indeed a capability for general combination towards a political end exists among them—are pretty sure to prevent the accomplishment of his design. There is, however, one uncomfortable possibility to which we cannot shut our eyes, and of which (having in view the recent history of our diplomatic relations with China) we suspect the existence, although with no tangible proof before us of its being a fact. This possibility is that the Foreign-office have left in Sir Rutherford Alcock's hands the power of postponement, if he considers it to be conducive to (not British but) Foreign-office interests. The eminently pacific state of matters at the present moment is too much in accordance with that prevailing diplomatic desire not to make a stir, which is the curse of our official system in China, to have its continuance risked by the injudicous zeal of a merchant-goaded Minister. We may, however, hope, and will assume, that the idea is at present confined to Peking. If such be the case the mercantile public should lose no time in arriving at a clear understanding of what is officially intended. There is, we take it, a general and decided conviction that at all risks the numerous outstanding questions with China should be definitely settled, or at least negotiations to that end commenced within the current year; that delay will be dangerous, less from the absolute evil inflicted by a delay to remove disabilities touching firms and individuals than because it will afford a species of triumph to the astute Chinaman, and a pretext for assuming that the violations of treaty rights and other matters complained of do not press very heavily on foreign trade, if we can afford to let another eighteen months elapse without redress. We have been contented to wait till the period stipulated for a revision of the "commercial articles" to obtain the more important alterations in the existing agreement which experience has proved to be just and necessary. But if that date be once departed from, if it be held that the matter is of such trifling importance that an adherence to time is of no matter, we must emphatically protest not only against the threatened delay, but unhesitatingly assert that immediate action is called for. The "lambiness" of the Minister (to coin a word for the occasion) has indeed become a bye-word in China, whether as regards great matters or small. The Minister who quietly takes a snub from a provincial viceroy, as did Sir R. Alcock at Shanghai, is not likely to be the most efficient representative of the only policy which can possibly succeed with an Asiatic nation—rather that of aggression than of conciliation. If it be indeed true, as we believe, that he has been persuaded into a step so injudicious as a postponement of the revision, the evidence of his unfitness for the post of British Minister will (our theory of home inspiration aside) have become so overwhelming as to justify strong representations for his recall on the part of the British community in China. We trust that at all events every effort will be made by those who are bound to take the initiative in such matters—the Chambers of Commerce—to sift the truth of the report, and, if it be founded on fact, to take immediate action. No possible reasons which can be urged in favour of Sir R. Alcock's idea can outweigh the undoubted evils which may result from its being carried out. We await with some impatience detailed news from the North upon the matter.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

—o—

SINGAPORE.

We have advices from this port to the 18th of March. The London mail of Feb. 10 arrived on the 14th of March. The Straits Times gives the following summary of news:—

His Excellency the Governor, accompanied by Lady Ord and some of his councillors, has been taking some relaxation from the cares of office, by a sporting trip into the wilds of Johore, to shoot elephants, tigers, bears, deer and other game. The Peiho and Mohr took the party up Johore river on the 10th instant and returned on Monday morning. What success the party met with, or what fierce encounters and hair-breadth 'scapes by flood and field, has not yet transpired. His Highness the Maharajah of Johore, with whom his Excellency is on the best of terms, afforded the adventurous sportsmen every facility in his power.

A new postal contract, ending 31st December, 1872, for mails between Calcutta, the Burmese ports, and the Straits, has been concluded by the Governor-General of India with the British India Steam Navigation Company. There is little difference between it and the old contract. The Straits contribute Rs. 1,000 per month to the subsidy as before. There will be a mail once every fourth week instead of every month as hitherto, and the speed is increased one half mile an hour. The Governor-General politely requested the opinion of the Straits Government in regard to the contract, but at the same time rather coolly intimated, that it would not signify much what that opinion might be, as the contract was already signed, sealed, and delivered, and no alteration could be made in its terms.

When the Legislative Council meets a Bill will be introduced modifying the constitution of our municipal bodies. The changes are briefly to make the municipal commissioners entirely elective (excluding Government officials) under their present title, or as lord mayor and aldermen; to restrict their jurisdiction entirely to the towns—they to collect assessments as at present, and after appropriating the funds necessary for municipal purposes, to pay over the balance into the Treasury.

An effort is being made to put some life and vigour into the volunteer corps of Singapore by the formation of an artillery branch, with what success remains to be seen.

The Siamese war steamer Impregnable arrived a few days ago from Tongka, en route to Bangkok, having on board the Siamese Commissioner, sent to quell the disturbances caused by the Chinese secret societies in Tongka. She takes to Bangkok the leaders in the commotions for trial.

His Honour Sir P. Benson Maxwell, the Chief Justice of the Straits Colony, arrived from home by last mail. The Chief Justice's presence is a source of great content and satisfaction to a good many folks in Singapore, who have imbibed great distrust of the despotic and taxative proclivities of Sir Harry Ord.

The formation of an association to look after the interests of the Straits Settlements, by old Straits residents at home, advice of which came by last mail, is viewed here with considerable interest and curiosity.

The Peiho started suddenly off for Penang on the 4th March, in the afternoon, without word or warning to our merchants, and without taking any mail. It is now known that she went with a reprieve to the Toh-Peh-Kong convicts. She stayed only two hours in Penang, and so neither took a mail to Penang nor allowed the merchants there time to make up a home mail. Of course a considerable deal of growling has been the result. It is felt that there was no occasion for the hot haste to Penang, as the convicts were not to have been executed till the 16th, and as the P. and O. steamers do not now call at Penang, some time might have been given to the benighted islanders to make up their home letters.

We have not heard of the preliminary steps being taken for the annual "China Dinner." It is about time that the committee were bestirring themselves, as old residents in China and Japan are scattered over England and the Continent.

Commercial Report.

CHINA AND JAPAN IMPORTS.

YOKOHAMA.—Cotton Yarn: Sales of 16—24s. and 28—32s. had been made at $45 and $55 respectively. The market had, however, since declined, and prices were almost nominal. No inquiries for 38—42s. Grey Shirtings: Good Eagle Chops 8lbs. 4—6 had been taken to some extent at $3.10 to 3.20 Buyers appeared, however, to have supplied their immediate wants and the demand had weakened. Black Velvets continued fairly saleable at quotations. All other cotton goods were nominal, with scarcely any inquiry. Woollens continued generally neglected, and the prices of most descriptions must be quoted nominally lower. SS Camlets: Scarlet were quoted $19 to 20, and Black $16 to 16.50. Blankets continued in demand. Metals were dull, except Lead, for which there was some inquiry.

SHANGHAI.—Grey Shirtings: There had been rather less inquiry, and prices had not been so well maintained. This was partly owing to the arrival from London of the Taitsing with a fair supply of goods, and partly to the absence of demand among the Northern dealers. 8¼lbs. Cloth was quoted at 2.17 to 2.20 taels per piece—prices at which neither sellers nor buyers could agree to operate largely. 7lbs. Cloth had been in fair request at slightly higher prices, sales having been effected at 1.87½ to 1.89 taels per piece for ordinary makes. Sales of all weights of Grey Shirtings, since the departure of the last English mail, may be estimated at 125,000 pieces, exclusive of those placed to arrive. T-Cloths: Finest goods were much wanted, and the prices offered for this class show a marked contrast to the current rates for commoner descriptions. Heavy Cloth continued in request at improved figures. White Shirtings were asked for at low rates, and moderate sales were reported at quotations. Woollens.—Camlets had slightly improved in value, but the demand was not extensive. Long Ells: Spanish Stripes and Lastings continued very dull of sale. Metals.—Iron: This market remained without change; there had been nothing doing. The Taitsing brought about 50 tons Rod and 23 tons Bar. Lead: In good demand; W. B., tls. 5.90. Coals: Market without change. Cardiff nominally 11 tls.; English, 10 tls.; Anthracite, tls., 13.50; for Australian, which is becoming scarce, advanced rates were demanded: Japan, 7 tls.; Formosa, 6 to 7 tls.—sales of the latter from ship's side, the cargo being Keelung lump coal. Quotations (duty paid in Shanghai sycee) were:—Grey Shirtings: 7 lbs., tls. 1.8.7 to 1.9.2 per piece; 8¼ to 8½ lbs., 2.1.7 to 2.2; 9 to 9¼ lbs., 2.6 to 3. White Shirtings: 56 reed, 2.1 to 2.1.5; 60 reed, 2.2.5 to 2.3; 64 reed, 2.3.5 to 2.4.

HANKOW.—The demand for manufactured goods had been checked by heavy arrivals causing large additions to stocks and consequent depression in prices. Dealers were acting with caution.

FOOCHOW.—Sales were reported of 400 pieces T-Cloths (6lbs.) at $2.10 per piece, and of 800 pigs Lead at $8 to $8.25 per picul.

AMOY.—A fair inquiry had existed for imports, but holders being anxious to realise, and forcing sales, prices had further declined.

CANTON.—A few trifling sales in metals only are reported during the fortnight, at prices showing no alteration on last quotations.

HONG KONG.—Cotton Yarn: The demand had been active, but stocks were too large to admit of any material advance in prices, and only a slight improvement can be noted, though, at the close, holders exhibited a fair amount of firmness, and in some cases were demanding rates above our quotations. A sale of 300 bales to a foreigner was reported, but had not been confirmed. Piece Goods: Telegraphic advices of a decided advance in the Manchester markets led to an immediate display of firmness on the part of holders of staple goods, and asking prices for Grey Shirtings were advanced 10 to 15 cents per piece, and some small sales made at this advance to native dealers who had vessels on the berth for Tientsin and orders in hand; but, these once filled, demand ceased, and there were no buyers at any thing over our quotations. Other descriptions were generally without any change of moment, but thirty yard English Drills were markedly lower, considerable quantities having been sent hither from Singapore. There were no American manufactures, the small stocks having been shipped northwards. Woollens:—Most descriptions were again lower and very difficult to move. Small sales of Camlets, however, had been made on former terms, and Blankets were enquired for at an advance. Stocks (excepting of Blankets) were large, that of Lastings being about equal to a year's requirements, and as the season advances we look for even less disposition to purchase even at the low currencies ruling. Metals: Nail Rod and Hoop Iron were again lower. Bar, steady. Steel, in more request at enhanced values. Lead, in demand by foreign buyers, and prices had further advanced. There was no Tin on offer. Tin Plates unchanged. Quicksilver dull of sale and declined $1 per picul. Coal: Sales had been 700 tons Sydney "to arrive" at $11.75, and 300 tons Welsh at $13.15 from ship's side—the latter a very low figure. Holders were firm at quotations, but there were no buyers, and positive offers might lead to some concessions.

CHINA AND JAPAN EXPORTS.

TEA.

YOKOHAMA.—A moderate amount of business had been done. The demand continued good, and the merchants show anxiety to clear their stocks, anticipating that the war commenced in the South may be carried to this neighbourhood. Prices were without change, but remained firm. Arrivals during the first part of the fortnight were heavy, but only about 350 piculs having come forward since stocks were not so much increased, and were estimated to be about 2,300 piculs. Settlements principally for the California market are computed to be 900 piculs. The quotations were:—common, $17 per picul; good common, $18 to 22; medium, $22 to 25; good medium, $25 to 28; fine, $29 to 31; finest, $32 to 35; choice, $36 to 44.

SHANGHAI.—Black: Shortly after the departure of last mail rather large transactions were reported in Hankow descriptions at an advance on previous rates. Later on a quiet and restricted business was transacted, principally in common to medium kinds of Ningchow, of which the stock mainly consists, at prices similar to those which existed a fortnight previously. The market closes quiet, with an easier tendency, occasioned in a measure by the disinclination of people to operate with the uncertainty of any vessel (other than those already on the berth having their cargoes nearly completed) obtaining despatch this season. The advance in Oopack teas must be taken as fully two taels per picul. Settlements for the fortnight, 9,350 chests; reshipments on owners' account, 350; stock, 9,700. Quotations, duty paid, exchange for credits, at 5s. 9¾d. per tael, and freight at £3 per ton; Hohow, Shanghai-packed low, 11½d.; Oonam, common to fair, 1s. 0½d. to 1s. 1½d.; Ningchow, common to fair, 1s. 1d. to 1s. 2½d.; Oopack, common to fair, 1s. 1d. to 1s. 4d. Green: An unimportant business had been transacted on American account at prices a shade easier. Supplies had come forward sparingly, and the stock was rather reduced. The following purchases had been made: Moyune, taels 38 to 45; Shanghai-packed, taels 32. A few thousand packages were expected to complete the season's yield. One vessel remained on the berth for New York. Settlements for the fortnight, 3,900 half-chests; reshipments on owners' account, 300; stock, 4,200.

HANKOW.—The tea season at this port has been closed at an earlier date than usual.

KIUKIANG.—Black: 300 chests common Hohow at the equivalent of Shanghai 16.7.5 taels was the only settlement, 600 chests having passed through on their way to this port. Green: 800 half-chests had arrived, and were awaiting transshipment, no business having been done on the spot.

FOOCHOW.—The only business had been the settlement of a few hundred packages of Oolong on native account. The one vessel on the berth for Australia had sailed, as had the two for London—these without being able to complete their cargoes—and the season at this port is at an end.

AMOY.—There had been no settlements, but the market was cleared, the stock on offer at date of last report having been forwarded to Hong Kong for shipment to New York on native account.

CANTON.—Owing to the lightness of stocks of all descriptions and their generally undesirable quality, business during the fortnight had been of trifling extent, and there was nothing whatever of interest to note. Settlements for the interval are reported as follows:—Canton Congou, 600 boxes at 18 to 19 taels; Scented Orange Pekoe, 2,100 boxes at 14.5 to 22 taels; Scented Caper, 2,700 boxes at 12 to 20 taels; Gunpowder, 600 boxes at 23 taels.

SILK.

YOKOHAMA.—The eager demand for fine silk had caused prices for the best sorts to rule firm at last quotations, and it is only on some common grades that there was any weakness. Arrivals had been on a fairly good scale, and stocks show little change. Settlements for the fortnight were about 800 bales, 300 of which went forward by the French mail on the 18th February. The quotations (laid down in London all charges included at exchange 4s. 3¾d.) were:—Hanks: Mybash, Sinchu, &c., 1, 2, 34s. 8d. to 36s.; ditto, 1, 2, 3, 31s. 10d. to 33s. 8d.; ditto, 2, 3, 4, 28s. 1d. to 29s. 11d.; ditto inferior, 25s. 4d. to 27s. 6d.; Oshu: best, 31s. 10d. to 33s. 6d.; ditto, medium, 27s. 2d. to 29s. 11d.; ditto, inferior, 23s. 6d. to 25s. 4d.; Coshu: 1, 2, 29s. to 30s. 11d.; ditto, medium, 25s. 4d. to 27s. 2d.; ditto, inferior, 22s. 6d. to 24s. 5d.; Sodai: 1, 2, 26s. 5d. to 29s.; ditto, inferior, 23s. 6d. to 25s. 4d.

SHANGHAI.—Mr. Holdsworth's circular, dated March 3rd, states:—"We have experienced a very inactive fortnight, and the Settlements amount to about 220 bales. The transactions reported consist of—40 bales Chop Tsatlees, 103 bales Medium and Common Tsatlees, 22 bales Karshing Taysaams, 20 bales Throwns, 35 Re-reeled Tsatlees and Hainings; total, 220 bales—only a small portion of which have been in barter. Prices paid have been about the same as those ruling during the previous fortnight. Several purchases were made at the close of the last English mail, and also for the French steamer which left this port on the 25th February, estimated at fully 600 bales. There having been but few arrivals, the unsold stock is reduced to 500 bales, nearly all common and second crop Silk. Owing to the limited business transacted, I make no change in my quotations, which are the same as those of last mail, viz.:—Tsatlee, chop No. 3, 28s. 8d. to 29s. 2d. per lb. Market, No. 3 and 3½, 25s. 6d. to 27s.; No. 4, 23s. to 24s. 6d.; No. 5 and common, 20s. 1d. to 22d. Karshing Taysaam: Chop No. 1, 23s. 6d. to 24s. 6d.; No. 2, 21s. 6d. to 22s. 3d.; No. 3, 20s. 1d. to 21s. Chin Cum Taysaam: Nos. 4, 5, and common, 18s. 1d. to 19s. 7d.; No. 2, 19s. 7d. to 20s. 6d; No. 3, 18s. 10d. to 19s. 7d. Yuenfa and Hainings: No. 1, 24s. 6d. to 25s.; No. 2, 23s. to 24s; No. 3, 21s. 6d. to 22s. 6d.; No. 4 and common, 19s. 1d. to 20s. 6d. Hangchow Tsatlee, 20s. 1d. to 21s. 6d. Throwns, 25s. 11d. to 27s."

CANTON.—After the departure of the mail the market declined considerably, and prices were quoted $15 to 20 under last advices, but transactions were very limited and the inquiry small. Subsequently settlements of Tsatlees and Kowkongs had been made to a fair extent, which has again caused prices to advance, and holders to become more firm. Buyers operate with a considerable degree of caution, and little desire to effect purchases is shown by any but those buying for the Indian market. In Re-reeled Cumchook we do not hear of any positive contracts having been made, although one for 40 boxes is reported at $650. Settlements have been as follows:—Tsatlee, $510 to $530 per picul; sales, 150 bales. Loongkong, $530 to 540 per picul; sales, 80 bales. No. 3, Kowkong, $480 to 490; sales, 50 piculs. Re-reeled Cumchook, $530 to 560; sales, 40 boxes.

FREIGHTS AND CHARTERS.

At YOKOHAMA.—To London there is no vessel on the berth. To New York, £3 5s. to £3 10s. per ton.

At SHANGHAI.—To London the rate is £3 per ton of 50 c. ft., and to New York £3 per ton of 40 c. ft. Tonnage continues scarce. For coasting purposes the demand is less active.

At FOOCHOW.—There is no vessel on the berth for Europe.

At HONG KONG and CANTON.—To Saigon and Bangkok, for Europe, the demand for tonnage continues good, at £3 15s. to £4 per ton. To London, via Canton, the two vessels on the berth are loading at £4 per ton. For New York, the Mathilde has been chartered at £3 5s. The Circular of George Holmes estimates the number of disengaged vessels in harbour (exclusive of Siamese) at twelve, representing 4,807 tons.

At MANILA.—The supply of tonnage continues much below the wants of the market, and the demand for handy sized vessels is steady, notwithstanding the recent charters in Hong Kong. The following settlements are reported:—Spanish barque Esperanza, 479 tons: to London direct, 500 tons, wet sugar at £4 10s., and 400 tons dry sugar at £4 5s. per ton of 20 cwt. British Barque Felix, 402 tons, to Liverpool direct, 300 tons, dry sugar at £4 5s., and the remainder hemp, at £4 15s. per ton of 20 cwt. British ship Coringa, 884 tons, to New York, taking sapanwood as dunnage at $4.50 gold per ton, 100 tons dry sugar at $12 gold per ton, and about 6,500 bales hemp, at $14.50 gold per 4 bales.

At SINGAPORE.—Rates for Europe have declined to £3 per ton, dead weight and light freight; for coasting purposes there is less demand.

At PENANG.—The Margaret Falconer is loading for London at £3 to £3 15s. for sugar and tin, £3 to £3 10s.—for light freight, £3 15s.—for measurement and 4d. per gallon for rum. The Zephyros is also loading for London at £2 15s. per ton all round.

At BATAVIA.—Rates have undergone no further decline, but produce is very scarce and heavy arrivals of tonnage would probably be followed by a fall. The current figure for sugar to Holland is f.70 per last, equal to about £3 7s. 6d. per ton, E. I. Company's conditions. To the Channel for orders £3 10s. has been paid and is still offered.

DANGERS OF THE CHINA COAST.

THERE is still work for our surveying ships to do on the China coast. Much has been done of late years towards perfecting our knowledge of the Japan islands and the more remote parts of the China Sea; but the surveys of the coast of China itself, at least that part of it north of Hong Kong, seem to have been regarded as quite complete, and to all intents and purposes, perfect. The loss of the Niphon shows that this is not the case. The "inner passage" habitually used by steamers going from Hong Kong to Amoy in the north-east monsoon has, it seems, always contained a hidden danger in the shape of an uncharted reef, whose surroundings, moreover, are misdescribed in the "China Pilot," on which coast navigators place so much reliance. This reef has hitherto escaped notice by captains of merchant vessels, owing to their custom of keeping more in mid-channel, a course from which the Niphon was diverted by an unusually strong indraught; but how has it come to be overlooked by the surveying-ships? The sooner this passage—evidently a useful one—is visited by the Rifleman or the Sylvia (both of which vessels we observe are on surveying duty in those waters) the better; and there are, doubtless, many other parts of the coast, slightly out of the usual course of vessels, but likely to prove dangerous under exceptional circumstances, that would be the better for a careful examination. While on the subject we may observe that the finding of the naval Court is, as regards Captain PEAKE, not only an acquittal, but an honourable one. Probably from a feeling of compassion, shipmasters are sometimes let off easily and allowed to escape with their certificates, when far from blameless, although perhaps not guilty of culpable neglect; but the present is no such case. The finding of the Court enumerates three causes, any one of which would have sufficed to exonerate Captain PEAKE, namely, a wrong delineation of land on the chart, a reef not laid down in it at all, and an error in the "China Pilot;" and it concludes with a commendation of the "careful system of navigation" proved to have been observed by him. The loss to the P. and O. Company is a heavy one, but their fleet is stronger now than ever, and the Niphon will soon be replaced.

THE LABUAN COAL MINES.

WE recently announced the sale, for the sum of £7,500, of the entire property and plant of the LABUAN COAL COMPANY. It is now owned by the ORIENTAL COAL COMPANY (Limited), whose manager, Mr. LUMSDEN, left by last P. and O. mail to take possession, and took with him a small but efficient staff. The company consists of some fifteen or sixteen gentlemen already connected with collieries and steamers, whose previous experience in similar undertakings will thus give them a great advantage in utilising their newly-acquired property, and they expect to conduct their business with all the economy and efficiency of a private concern. They have entered into a contract with the ORIENTAL SCREW COLLIER COMPANY (Limited,) to provide as many steamers as can be employed in carrying their produce to market, and the pioneer of this fleet, the Vine, Capt. MANN, sailed from Plymouth on the 18th ult., for Annealey Bay with Government stores, whence she will proceed to her destination. She was built last winter by Messrs. RANDOLPH, ELDER and Co., and will, it is expected, be able to load at the company's jetty at Port Raffles during the south-west monsoon. The owners, we understand, are substantial but careful men. It remains to be seen whether they are destined to pick up the fortune which we have all along believed to exist in the coal-fields of Labuan.

THE REVOLUTION IN JAPAN.

THE tenour of recent advices from Japan goes far to confirm the belief we have long held, that the combined movement of the southern Daimios has been prompted mainly by jealousy of the SHIOGOON'S monopoly of foreign trade. A widespread idea has long existed in this country that the series of assassinations of Europeans that commenced with the opening of the ports, had its origin solely in an unreasoning hatred of foreigners; and that the internecine warfare that ensued was due to the indignation of the other Daimios against the SHIOGOON for having afforded facilities for their intrusion by contracting the Treaties. That the active hostility of SATSUMA, CHOSHIU, TOSA, and their supporters has been developed since the admission of foreigners, and that foreign interests have suffered grievously by it, there can be no doubt; but then, who could have been more anxious to reap the advantages of foreign intercourse than these very princes have proved themselves? Their blows were aimed, not at foreign trade, but at the SHIOGOON'S monopoly thereof. Had they been permitted to do so, SATSUMA and CHOSHIU would have thrown open their ports years ago, and the example would have been generally followed. But not being allowed a share of the trade, they determined at least to obstruct the SHIOGOON'S enjoyment of it by all means in their power, and the outrages committed or instigated by them were doubtless intended to embroil him with his foreign allies. In many cases they were successful, but one—the affair on the Tokaido—recoiled on the schemers, and was heavily punished. It must be owned, moreover, that the punishment was nobly borne. Had there really existed that unreasoning hatred of foreigners to which we have alluded, the destruction of Kagosima, and again, the bombardment of Simonoseki, must have made it doubly bitter, at any rate on the part of SATSUMA and CHOSHIU; but there has been no trace of any such result. On the contrary, both of them evince an increased desire to come to a good understanding; and when a proper system of Government is again organised, in which these and the other principal Daimios have their due share of influence, we shall probably find in them our best friends.

A more embarrassing position than that of the foreign Ministers can hardly be conceived. The treaties they have to uphold were originally entered into with the SHIOGOON, then the assumed sovereign. Subsequently, the SHIOGOON having proved—not to put too fine a point on it—an impostor, a ratification of them was procured from the real sovereign, the MIKADO. Now these two powers are at open warfare, and of the ports at which our trade is carried on, some are held by one party and some by the other. At each port we are compelled to deal with the de facto Government, so that a foreign representative is under the awkward necessity of recognising two Governments in the same country, and under the same Treaty! Of course no one can blame Sir RUTHERFORD ALCOCK and his colleagues for the strictly neutral course they have adopted. They have done precisely what they should have done, namely, nothing at all. It would have been preposterous to side actively with either party, though there can be little doubt as to which deserves our true sympathy. STOTSBASHI is certainly an able and intelligent man, and to all appearance well disposed towards us, but even should he succeed in reinstating himself in the office of Shiogoon, either by cunning or by force of arms, he will still be an usurper. Trade is of course our primary object; still, whatever commercial facilities he might have been inclined to afford us at his own ports, we should never rest satisfied to be restricted to them alone. But probably we shall not be placed in this position. The latest telegrams tell us that there existed every prospect of a peaceful abandonment of STOTSBASHI'S claims, and the formation of a stable Government, and such a termination of this distressing imbroglio cannot be deemed otherwise than favourable. In this new Government the great Southern Daimios must necessarily have no inconsiderable share, and if matters are well managed, we shall eventually obtain at their hands far more liberal treatment than the narrow, cramped policy of the Shiogoons would ever have permitted.

M. OUTREY, the new French Plenipotentiary to Japan in place of M. Leon Roches, left by the last French mail. He is accompanied by the Comte Gustave de Montebello, son of the Duc de Montebello, as second secretary; by the Comte Tasher de la Pagerie, third secretary; the Comte de Béarn, attaché; and M. Paul Rousset, retired officer of the Marine, interpreter.

THE RED SEA TELEGRAPH ROUTE.

In the article on Telegraphic Communication in our last issue we omitted to notice a letter that recently appeared in The Times under the signature "ÆGYPTUS," embodying a needless attempt to throw cold water on the aspirations of those who assisted at the meeting lately held at the Mansion-house. ÆGYPTUS says :—

The representatives of the interests of the East were singularly silent as to one great difficulty in the way of telegraphic communication with India which meets us at the very threshold. There was much complaint as to the delays caused by the negligence of Turks, Arabs, and other foreign barbarians, and Government was urged to lend its help towards remedying these evils by the construction of a new cable down the Red Sea to Aden, and thence to Bombay; but, curious to relate, not one of the speakers cared to inform the meeting in what manner, and by what route, they mean to get from England to Egypt. It is a notorious and irksome fact that our telegraphic communication with Alexandria is of the most uncertain and disappointing character possible, that the present Malta cable, which by a circuitous route of 1,600 miles is supposed to keep up this communication, is every now and then out of order, owing to its faulty construction, and that just now it has ceased to work for many weeks past. Repairs are constantly going on at an expenditure of nearly £20,000 per annum, but nothing that man can do will ever put to rights this unfortunate and most important link in the chain of telegraphic connection with the East. We tinker at it and tinker, and when one mile is patched up, another will go to pieces, and ever and anon Egypt is beyond our reach. It appears perfectly plain, therefore, that gentlemen who hint that Government ought to enter into partnership with them to establish telegraphic lines between Egypt and India ought to set out by stating how they mean to reach Egypt, as surely they cannot intend to raise a splendid superstructure on a rotten foundation.

This sounds very plausible, and is calculated to impress an unthinking reader with the idea that a serious and almost insuperable difficulty has been overlooked by everybody—except ÆGYPTUS. Such, however, is not the case. ÆGYPTUS is evidently ignorant of the fact that the plan of the ANGLO-INDIAN Company includes two distinct routes to Egypt. Besides leasing the present Malta and Alexandria cable, they intend to provide an alternative line from Sicily to Tripoli, or some other point on the African coast, and thence to Alexandria. It is most unlikely that both these cables will be out of working order at the same time. The present cable is certainly in a deplorable state, but then it was laid years ago, when submarine telegraphy was in its infancy. The steamer Hawk has been occupied some two months in futile attempts to restore it to working order; it has been repaired in a dozen places, no less than five fractures being found within one mile. All these were in shallow places; and the only remedy seems to be the immediate laying of another cable in deep water. So much the better for the new company. Such a cable, constructed and laid at the present time, will remain in an effective condition for many years. The proceedings at a recent meeting of the TELEGRAPH CONSTRUCTION AND MAINTENANCE COMPANY throw some further light on this subject. The report presented contained the following :—

During the past year the directors have spared neither time nor labour in endeavouring to extend eastward, between Europe and India via Malta and the Red Sea, a system of submarine telegraphy which would afford to our commercial community the same perfect means of telegraphic intercommunication as that effected by this company between Europe and America. Owing, however, to the great financial and commercial depression, not only in this country, but abroad, the appeal to the public for support was inadequately responded to; although the profits of the proposed lines would most certainly far exceed those from the Atlantic Cables. Every day's experience tends to prove to your directors the certainty of the Red Sea Telegraph route being speedily reverted to, and, in the meantime, they have taken steps to consolidate and improve the company's very valuable property in Italy, the Mediterranean, and Egypt. With this object, in order to obviate the delays arising on telegrams passing through continental countries, the company are erecting a land line connecting Susa in Italy with Modica in Sicily, which will greatly facilitate the transmission of despatches over the Malta and Alexandria Telegraph, and secure traffic for that line which now goes by other routes. This line, it is hoped, will be opened in June next.

The Chairman (Sir DANIEL GOOCH), in a very able speech, gave some more detailed information regarding the proposed undertaking. He said :—

We have endeavoured to get a company formed for the purpose of establishing a direct telegraph communication with India. The length of such cables would be about 3,000 miles if we took the distance from Suez down the Red Sea, calling at Aden, and then crossing the Arabian Sea. A company was formed and a certain amount of capital subscribed; about £300,000 or £400,000 was obtained, but through the panic we were unable to complete the full subscription of one million, which was the amount required, and it was considered better by those connected with the company to return the subscriptions, still keeping the company together, in hopes of better times being in store. I believe better times are coming now the Abyssinian war has forced on the Government of England the necessity for direct communication between England and India, and I think we may now hope that the Government will themselves stir in the matter. We have every reason to think that the work will be done. The Government did at our request send a vessel to survey the route of the line between Aden and Bombay. It has just been completed, and as far as the survey is concerned it discloses to us that the soundings are of a most satisfactory character; there are soundings of about 2,000 fathoms, which are quite within our power of dealing with. The lines unfortunately have not been laid in very favourable positions, for they are too near the coast, and consequently subject to fracture; but a company of capitalists are now desirous of laying new and extended lines between Italy and Alexandria, and if possible combine these existing lines with new routes so as to cover the Mediterranean by a system of cables which will be under one management and be perfect in its character.

It thus becomes evident that at no distant date there will be an efficient land line via Susa to Modica, and an improved system of Mediterranean cables, giving at least two independent routes to Alexandria. It is equally clear, from the result of the Hydra's survey, that the laying of a cable from Aden to Bombay will be an easy matter. To complete the chain thus far, then, the only link presenting any serious difficulty is that of the Red Sea. Sir DANIEL GOOCH confidently alludes to the certainty of the Red Sea route being speedily reverted to, but says nothing further regarding the submersion of a new cable in its bed. Doubtless, with the experience gained since the first attempt, a new cable would be far more durable than the old one proved. But—and we will conclude our remarks with this suggestion—why not carry a land line down the Abyssinian coast, and cross the Red Sea at its mouth, to Aden? It is admitted on all hands that land lines are cheaper, both to construct and to maintain, than submarine ones. The nature of the country offers no greater obstacles than have been overcome elsewhere. The only difficulty arises from the lawless habits of the Arabs, but this could surely be overcome by buying their adhesion. Subsidise the chiefs of those tribes that command the coast; pay them a stipulated sum, monthly, as long as the line remained unmolested and in good order; and stop it the moment anything goes wrong. They are a wild people, certainly, but fond of money, and a very small sum would suffice to secure their co-operation—a less sum, we will venture to say, than would be annually expended in maintaining the efficiency of a cable laid among the rocks and coral reefs of the Red Sea. Whether this suggestion be of any value or not, there is at least good reason to hope for the speedy completion of an efficient line of telegraph to Bombay; let us hope that it will be extended to China at no very distant date.

THERE exists in London a body styled "The London Free "and Open Church Association," which has for its avowed object the abolition of the pew system in the metropolis, in favour of entirely free sittings. A paragraph that has lately gone the round of the morning papers seems to indicate that the members of this association are anxious to extend the sphere of their labours to China; for it is said, that having discovered that a new Protestant Church is being built in Shanghai, they have determined to make an effort to have it declared "free and unappropriated." The interference of the association is doubtless very well meant, but it had much better mind its own business.

THE Rev. Walter Chambers, Senior Missionary at Borneo, has been nominated to the Bishopric of Labuan, vacant by the resignation of the Right Rev. Dr. M'Dougall. The Bishopric is worth £360 a year from the Colonial Bishoprics' Fund, and £300 a year for missionary work from the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel. Mr. Chambers was first engaged in Borneo in 1851 as a missionary to the Sea Dyaks on the Banting-Lupar and its branches, and has since acted for some time as commissary and examining chaplain to Bishop M'Dougall.

THE Pacific Mail Co.'s steamer China reached San Francisco on the 31st ultimo, with advices from Shanghai to Feb. 27, and Yokohama to March 8, thus placing us in possession of twenty-three days' later news from Japan than that brought by the last mail. The China is said to have been detained at Yokohama four days on account of severe weather. She had eighty passengers and 17,000 packages of merchandise. Among the former were Mr. BURLINGHAME and the other members of the Chinese Embassy.

THE estimates now before the House of Commons propose several votes for embassy and consular buildings abroad. They include a second sum of £40,000 towards £179,382 for consular buildings in China, and £15,000 for consular buildings in Japan.

THE BRINDISI ROUTE.

WE are glad to observe that the Italian Government has come to an understanding with the administration of the railway companies to allow the travellers entering Italy at Susa, and leaving it at Ancona or Brindisi, to have their luggage exempted from any examination by the Custom houses, either on coming in or going out. The main object of this measure is to avoid any stoppage or delay to travellers on their way to India and the East, who may wish to embark at Brindisi in preference to Marseilles. A proposal is made to prepare a summary of news on board the steamers from Alexandria to Brindisi, and telegraph it immediately on the arrival at the latter port, and thus anticipate by several hours the telegrams sent via Marseilles. It will be necessary, however, to accelerate the Mediterranean voyages very considerably. Mr. Carnegie has written a letter to The Times pointing out the possibility of making use of the Susa and Brindisi route independently of any delay in France. He says :—

"I wish to point out the fact that the Brindisi route to India is easier than is generally supposed, and that we are independent of France in the matter. The route to Brindisi through France has the fatal objection of a mountain carriage journey of some twelve hours between St. Michel and Susa, besides the obstructions thrown in the way of this route by the French authorities to compel us to continue to use Marseilles as the starting port for our steam packets for Alexandria. Now, from Calais or Ostend there exists uninterrupted and direct railway communication to Bologna, an important junction on the railway between Susa and Brindisi, where the Middle and Eastern European meets that of the West, bound to the last-mentioned place en route for the Far East. The route is via Cologne, Munich, Innspruck, and Verona to Bologna, and the time for our daily mail from London for Munich is thirty-six hours, and from Munich to Bologna twenty hours, in all fifty-six hours, precisely the same time as is required via France, besides avoiding a mountain journey, and for mails a delay of twelve hours in Paris. I would add that, with the completion of the various link lines now under construction in Germany, the time to Munich will be reduced eight hours, and from there to Bologna the express trains to be soon commenced on the Brenner line will do the journey in about fourteen hours, thus materially shortening the time required. Now, as we have a daily mail to Munich, why cannot the postal authorities forward through Munich by the German postal officials a supplementary mail (to be sent on by the mail packets from Brindisi), made up and closed here in the same way as is done now twice a week for Constantinople via Vienna, Rustchuk, and Varna?"

It appears there is really every probability of the line over Mont Cenis being opened for traffic in the course of next month. The Florence correspondent of The Times writes :—

"A letter from Mont Cenis has just reached me. The Summit Railway is to be opened in May. Every arrangement has been made, and there seems no reason to fear a further postponement of the long-expected event. The exact day is not yet fixed. Out of twelve new engines ordered of Gouin and Co., of Paris, seven are now at St. Michel, in which the rocking shafts, the defective part, have either been replaced or are on the point of being so. One of these engines was tried a few days ago, and took the chief engineer to Lanslebourg and back, a distance out and in of forty-eight miles, and worked very satisfactorily. It is hoped that all the difficulty of the French engines is now overcome. In a former letter I mentioned that a trial engine (No. 2, built in England), which took Captain Tyler over the mountain on the 26th of August, worked afterwards for months on the Italian side, carrying iron roofing for the covered ways, doing its work perfectly well and giving no trouble. It seems doubtful whether the new engines will ever be so effective in proportion to their weight (they weigh twenty tons, and No. 2 only about sixteen tons), but the engineers on the line apparently entertain no doubt of their performing regular and good service. The French law prohibits the introduction from foreign countries of any machinery patented in France, and the penalty for transgressing this regulation is forfeiture of the patent. Mr. Fell's invention having been patented in France, the company had no choice but to order their machines in that country. The consequences have been considerable loss of time, and that they have got heavier and less efficient engines than if they had been at liberty to get them where they got the English engine No. 2."

CEYLON AFFAIRS.

IN the Daily News of the 11th inst. there appeared a letter on the affairs of Ceylon, signed by Mr. FERGUSON of the Ceylon Observer, which is so full of good sense, and so interesting moreover to the inhabitants of all colonies governed by sham Legislative Councils, that we regret our space does not admit of its being reprinted in these columns. The letter fills more than two columns of the Daily News, but what Mr. FERGUSON had to say could hardly have been said in less. He commences by remarking on the apathy displayed on the occasion of the recent debate in the House of Commons ; and, indeed, on all occasions when colonial affairs are under discussion. We ourselves have too often had occasion to make similar observations :—

When Mr. Gorst rose to put the question regarding Ceylon, of which he had given notice, the benches on both sides rapidly emptied, until I could count only six members on the Conservative side of the House, including Mr. Adderley, as the sole representative of the Ministry, and eighteen in the seats supposed to be occupied by Liberals. An increasing attendance and all the cheering were reserved for the period when Mr. Adderley on the one side of the House, and Mr. Cardwell on the other, attempted to show that the whole question at issue resolved itself into—first, an attempt on the part of the inhabitants of Ceylon in general to foist pecuniary burdens on to the shoulders of the British taxpayers, which ought to be borne by the Ceylonese; and, secondly, an attempt by a small but powerful minority of British planters to override for their own selfish purposes the interests of the native inhabitants, and the authority of the Government, local and imperial.

Mr. FERGUSON then goes on to show how entirely unfounded these charges are ; how Ceylon does what no other colony does, by paying the whole cost of the military deemed necessary for her defence in time of peace, and how, in less than a generation British enterprise and British capital have raised Ceylon from the position of an often disturbed and very expensive military post to that of the third coffee-producing country in the world—Brazil and Java only standing before her. He next adverts to the Ceylon League, and rebuts the injurious charges brought against that body, especially that of hostility to native interests. Then we come to the Legislative Council :—

The resignation of the unofficial members of the Legislative Council has been most unjustly construed into the evidence of a determination on the part of the people in Ceylon to refuse to bear the military expenditure justly due from them. How such a charge could be preferred in the face of several passages in the published letter of resignation it is difficult to conceive. For instance :—"We, as members of the Legislative Council, have ever expressed our sincere and earnest desire to meet the question (military expenditure) in a fair and liberal spirit, and to contribute cheerfully whatever amount should, on a full and fair inquiry by the Council, be considered due by the colony." The Secretary of State (Mr. Cardwell) sent out a despatch directing the Governor to pass through Council a Bill, fixing on the colony a largely enhanced and annually increasing burden for military expenditure, promising that after this was done he would grant the inquiry (into the force necessary for defence against internal disturbance, or piratical attack), which surely ought to have preceded the introduction of the Bill. Such an invasion of their privilege the unofficial members resented in the only effectual way within their reach. Had they remained in Council they would have been outvoted, for the official members were (at the risk of their position and means of livelihood) compelled to vote for what many of them (including the Colonial Secretary and the Queen's Advocate) considered as much of an injustice as did the unofficials—and so it would have been said that all had been done in due legal form, and "by the Legislative Council."

The writer here points out that the petitioners never even breathed a wish to exclude the native element from the Council, and observes that to suppose that on any occasion the whole of the unofficial members should vote together and against the GOVERNOR is to conjure up a very extreme case. Neither did the petitioners ask for a Council enlarged in numbers. Mr. FERGUSON then shows how the difficulty may be met without any ruinous concession on the part of the Government :—

Seeing that the Governor has a casting vote in cases of an equal division on any question, and that should a measure be carried against him he can veto it, and refer the whole case to the Secretary of State, there surely would be no danger in such a compromise as is involved in equalising the official and unofficial element in Council ; giving all the members full power to vote according to their convictions, and power also to bring in money Bills, or add items to the Bills already before the Council. I venture to submit that, now we have provided amply for our military expenditure—and those who best know the pacific character of the native races (Sir Hercules Robinson included) best appreciate how ample the provision is—we are entitled to such a concession as I have indicated. In proposing that the number of unofficial members should be increased from six to ten, I may be met with the objection that it is now difficult to obtain the services even of six gentlemen of talent and weight. The answer is that such men object to occupy the position of ciphers. Concede the real power I suggest, and I believe a position in the legislature would be an object of honourable ambition to the ablest and best men of all classes.

And finally, with regard to the constitution of the non official half of the Council, he says :—

Giving due weight to the superior intelligence of the European settlers, and to the vast capital of which they are the representatives, and remembering also that such Englishmen as Mr. Wall (the president of the League, and chairman also of the Planters' Association) would be regarded by the natives of all classes with much confidence, I would suggest a body of unofficials, composed of equal numbers of Europeans and of the settled inhabitants. The Governor (who, with his nine official members, would always recognise the duty of watching native interests in the council) might be instructed generally to consult the various classes whose opinions and interests it is desirable to have represented in the council. The Chamber of Commerce might submit for the Governor's approval a leading merchant and the manager of one of the banking institutions. The Planters' Association could be asked to name two representatives of the great planting interest, and a fifth European member might be found by the Governor amongst the young English lawyers of talent who occasionally join the Ceylon bar. English capital, enterprise, and talent would be thus fairly represented.

We next turn to the mixed race, called "Burghers," from the fact that many of them are of Dutch descent. Like the European people, those Euro-Asiatics are limited in number (6,000 against our 3,000 to 4,000), while in regard to capital and mercantile or agricultural enterprise they do not as yet occupy a very prominent position. But they are the educated middle class of Ceylon, possessing keen intellects, and, as lawyers, displaying very great ability. While gentlemen of this class are European to a great extent in origin, and almost entirely so in their habits, they are yet from birth, knowledge of the vernaculars, and constant association with the people, eminently fitted to be the exponents of native sentiment, and the representatives of native interests. I should feel, therefore, that no injustice, but the reverse, would be done to the numerically great native races were the Burghers asked to submit the names of two of their body for the governor's approval as members of the council. Both would probably be lawyers. In selecting two Singhalese members an effort should be made to give a representative to the Kandyans, as well as to the maritime section of the race. From amongst the Tamils, the second native race in Ceylon, one member might be chosen, as at present.

Such a council as this, Mr. Ferguson justly observes, would strengthen the hands of an able and sagacious ruler, while it would constitute a wholesome check on a governor whose wisdom and experience might be inferior to his ability and energy. No really conscientious governor would object to a council which, without overriding his authority, would keep him well informed as to the state of public feeling, and share with him the responsibility, though not the ordinary rewards of a government well administered. Unfortunately the present is by no means a favourable period for the discussion of such a question as this, and the well-wishers of both Ceylon and Hong Kong will probably have to exercise some little patience before they get a chance of a fair hearing in Parliament.

Monetary and Commercial.

The prospectus of the Indo-European Telegraph Company, to which we have so frequently referred, has just been issued, and the undertaking is shown to be supported by eminently practical men. The share capital is placed at £450,000, in 18,000 shares of £25 each, of which only 17,000 shares will now be issued. The deposit on application is £1 per share; and the payment on allotment will be £4 per share; calls of £5 on each share being made at intervals of not less than two months. The objects of the enterprise have been already sufficiently explained in our columns. The proposed new route will also connect Europe with Asia, and will pass from London through the North Sea, Prussia, Southern Russia, and Persia, and thence by the lines of the Indian Government to India. Exclusive concessions have already been granted for this purpose by the Prussian, Russian, and Persian Governments to Messrs. Siemens Brothers, and an agreement has been concluded by the concessionaires with Reuter's Telegram Company and the International Telegraph Company for the exclusive use of one wire, and when necessary two wires between London and Norderney. By this arrangement the valuable co-operation of the latter company has been secured for the collection and distribution of Indian and other messages. The bona fide character of the project is, as we have already said, beyond all doubt. Half the capital is already subscribed, and the line is to be completed within the year 1869.

The annual report of the Oriental Bank Corporation was adopted at their meeting held on the 16th inst. The net profit for the year, after providing for all bad and doubtful debts, is £175,539, which, with the addition of £13,687 from the last account, gives an aggregate of £189,226 for distribution. An interim dividend of £90,000 was paid in November last, and it is now proposed to distribute a like amount, both free of income-tax. This will make 12 per cent. for the year, and leave £9,226 to be carried forward.

In another part of our paper will be found the balance-sheet of the Bank of Rotterdam, which was passed at the meeting noticed in our last.

Biddings for £350,000 in bills on Calcutta and Madras were held at the Bank of England on the 15th. The amounts allotted were—to Calcutta £319,400, and to Madras £30,600. The minimum price was fixed, as before, at 1s. 11¼d. on both Presidencies, and tenders at that rate will receive about 23 per cent. Those above will be allotted in full. No tenders on Bombay were invited. These results show a further reaction in the demand for means of remittance to the East, the price obtained being about 1 per cent. below that on the last occasion.

Much indignation has been excited by the announcement that of the bills of India offered on the 1st instant, about £130,000 was tendered for at high rates by some speculators, who, finding the market going against them, failed to fulfil their bargain. Strange to say, the names of the defaulters have not been published, and there is a strong feeling that concealment in such a case is most unjustifiable. So glaring a case of bad faith cannot be too strongly condemned, and those implicated should be held up to public reprobation.

ARTICLES OF IMPORT.

TEA.

Owing to the intervention of the Easter holidays, there has been but little business doing during the past week; but the sales that have been made maintain the advance quoted in our last, and importers are firm holders. Messrs. W. J. and H. Thompson's circular is as follows:—Foochow Congous: In siftings and broken leaf there have been a few transactions at higher prices. Some parcels of common to fair quality out of recent arrivals are offering from 1s. 3d. to 1s. 4¼d. Medium kinds are firmly held for an advance. In good and fine, no business. Black Lea Congous: In dust and siftings no sales reported; common has been sold at 1s. 3d. per lb., and there is very little now offering at that price. There is still inquiry for the better sorts from 1s. 4d. to 1s. 6d. per lb., without, however, resulting in much business, owing to holders requiring advances for these grades; good and fine are firm at former quotations. In Souchongs and Oolongs there is nothing doing. Scented Teas: Foochows are firm at previous rates, and Canton kinds, ex Southern Cross, are selling freely. In Green Teas there is no new feature, invoices out of recent arrivals not having been yet put on the market. There will probably be a small China sale held on the 21st inst., but as yet there are no catalogues issued. The United Kingdom stock was, on the 31st ult., estimated at 88,000,000 lbs. against 99,500,000 lbs. in 1867.

Silk.—The market has been fairly active since our last report, and prices have slightly stiffened during the last two days, particularly for good No. 4 Tsatlees and low Taysaams, the latter of which seem at last to be coming into demand. Deliveries of silk generally continue good, and render the position of the market very satisfactory. Clearances from 1st to 16th inst. were:—China, 1,454; Canton, 246; Japan, 323; Bengal, 290; total, 2,313 bales.

Cotton.—The London Market since our report of the 10th inst. has been dull, the demand becoming daily more and more restricted. Prices remain for the most part without alteration, but show a tendency towards decline. The current quotations are:—Oomrawuttee, 11¼d.; Tinnivelly, 9¼d.; Western, 9⅛d. to 10⅛d.; Salem, 10⅛d.; Coconada, 9⅛d. to 9⅝d.; Bengal, 9⅛d. to 10d.; Rangoon, 9⅛d. to 9⅜d. In Liverpool the market has also been uninterruptedly quiet. Prices on the spot are in the buyers' favour, and a decline of ⅛d. per lb. has been established upon sales for arrival. The quotations on the spot rule as follows:—American, 11d. to 18½d.; Pernam., 12d. to 12½d.; Santos, 12¼d.; Egyptian, 12½d. to 15d.; Smyrna, 11¼d.; Surats, 10⅛d. to 11d.; Madras, 10¼d.; Bengal, Scinde, &c., 9⅜d. to 10d. For arrival the following prices have been paid:—American, basis of middling.—Ship named, from Savannah, 12⅛d.; Mobile, 12⅛d.; New Orleans, 12⅛d., and due 12⅜d.; New York, low middling, ship named, 11⅞d. Broach.—Fair, March sailing, 9⅛d. Dhollerah.—Fair, February sailing, 10⅜d; middling fair, ship named, 9⅛d. Oomrawuttee.—Fair new merchants, at sea, 10⅛d.; March sailing, 10⅜d., 10⅛d.; February-March, 10⅜d.; ship named, 10d., 10⅛d. Bengal.—Fair new merchants, at sea, 8⅛d.; ship named, 8⅜d.

Coffee.—The quantities of Ceylon offered for sale are still limited, but there is a fair inquiry for both Plantation and Native, and prices are steadily maintained at the following rates:—Plantation, triage and ordinary, 81s. 6d. to 59s.; gray, low middling and middling, 64s. to 70s. 6d.; colory, low middling and middling, 70s. to 78s.; good middling, 80s. to 85s.; fine middling, 87s. to 90s.; pea-berry, 81s. to 91s. 6d. Native, ordinary small, 45s. to 46s.; good ordinary, 49s. to 51s.; fine ordinary, 53s.; good bold, 54s. to 56s. 6d.; pea-berry, 60s. to 61s.

Cutch.—Prices are lower, 52s. 6d. being the current quotation for fine Pegu.

Cocoa-nut Oil.—We have still to report a quiet market. Small transactions are reported in Ceylon at £49 per ton.

Manila Hemp.—There have been no transactions of any importance since our last report.

Pepper.—Small business only has been done in Penang and Singapore at the rates last quoted.

Rice.—The only sale of importance has been two small floating cargoes—viz., 800 tons Rangoon early March sailing quality guaranteed at 12s. landed, and 360 tons Siam arrived at 11s. 8d., ex ship, without guarantee.

Spices.—Cinnamon: Of Ceylon 21 bales were taken, first quality, at 2s. 3d.; seconds, 2s. 2d. to 2s. 8d.; thirds, 1s. 10d. Cloves: Nine cases Penang of old import were bought in at 10½d. to 11d. Mace: Four boxes medium bold red Singapore sold at 8s. Nutmegs: Of Singapore 7 boxes realised as follows:—78 to the lb., 2s. 2d.; 95 to the lb., 1s. 6d.; and 124 to the lb., 1s. 3d. per lb.

Sapanwood.—Steady; 27 tons Siam at auction sold at £11 10s. to £12 per ton, and of 101 tons Manila half sold at £10 17s. 6d. to £13 5s.

Shells.—At the auctions 12 chests Manila mother-o'-pearl realised £6 2s. 6d. to £6 7s. 6d. per cwt. for good small descriptions.

Sticklac.—The market is steady, and of Siam a few cases middling blocky sold at 45s. 6d. per cwt.

Sugar.—An active demand has prevailed since our last report, fully maintaining the increased rates, and prices are now 6d. higher than those last given. The following private transactions are reported:—28,000 bags clayed Manila (8s. duty) 31s., (9s. 7d. duty) 32s. to 32s. 6d.; 20,000 bags unclayed 28s., and the following floating cargoes, viz., for near ports, two of Havannah, 2,691 boxes at 27s. to 27s. 9d., 3,000 bags Maceio at 22s. 6d. (invoice weights), and for the United Kingdom, two of Havannah, 6,075 boxes 26s. 9d. to 27s., 400 hhds. 160 boxes Cuba 24s. 3d., and 200 tons unclayed Manila 28s. per cwt. duty paid.

Tin.—The current quotations are—Banca, £96 10s. to £97; fine Straits on the spot and afloat, £93 10s. to £94. Any further advance in foreign appears for the present arrested. There are some speculators who bought at £3 to £4 per ton below present quotations, who wish to realise their profit, but as the quantity thus offered is but small, we think there will again be a strong market. Deliveries go on with activity.

For Chili Bars £76 is paid. English is better also. The smelters ask £83 for tough and £87 for manufactured. Tin plates very firm. Lead rather easier. Spelter dull.

MANCHESTER MARKETS.

Mr. Sam Mendel's Circular of the 14th says:—"The position of this market is scarcely altered since the 7th instant; the demand has been very limited, yet prices have shown little weakness; there is a slightly better feeling to-day, with more disposition to place orders at prices not materially under spinners and manufacturers' prices." HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS.—

Instant Relief.—Sores which are daily extending, ulcers which are hourly deepening, may be arrested in their torturing progress, and induced to take a healthy action by applying this healing ointment and taking these purifying pills. It soothes all distempers of, and extracts all morbid humours from, the skin. Old ulcers of the legs, inflammations caused by varicose veins, and cramps of the lower limbs, can sensibly be eased and shortly cured by Holloway's never-failing ointment, which represses excessive, and stimulates sluggish, vascular and nervous action. In constitutions breaking down under piles, fistulas, and other similarly painful maladies, a few applications of this cooling ointment will give comfo rt and a persistence in its use will effect a cure.

Summary of News from the Far East.

HIOGO AND OSAKA.

By this mail, which brings dates from the new ports to March 11, we have full confirmation of the telegrams already received announcing the massacre of a boat's crew belonging to the French war steamer Dupleix. It appears that on the 12th of March ten or eleven French sailors and one officer of that frigate, who were in a steam launch awaiting the Minister's return from a walk, landed some seven miles from Hiogo, on the Prince of Toza's territory, and were immediately shot down. The officer was found with his ears and fingers cut off, his tongue cut out, and otherwise mutilated.

A local journal says, "We regret to have to record another catastrophe, which, added to those from which the English and Americans have already suffered (we allude to the sudden death of Consul Myburgh and the upsetting of the boat which cost the lives of Admiral Bell, his flag-lieutenant and ten seamen), will cause the opening of Osaka to be remembered as a national calamity by three, at any rate, of the Treaty Powers. This time it is our French allies who are the sufferers, and instead of nature and the elements being the assailants, savage and brutal murderers have struck the blow. Several versions of the unfortunate affair are in circulation to-day, but all agree in the main point that a French officer and ten seamen have met their deaths by treachery on the part of some Japanese soldiers, said to belong to Prince Toza's retinues, and that the attack made on them was made designedly and without the slightest provocation. Rumour says that as reprisal some forty of Toza's men have been seized by the French authorities, who have given notice that if within fourteen days the actual criminals are not forthcoming, the whole of the prisoners shall be hanged at the yard arms of the French men-of-war. The Japanese Government, it is said, have expressed their horror at the unfortunate affair, and have promised all the amend it is in their power to make; but the French naturally require 'deeds not words,' and unless they promptly get the amplest satisfaction, there is very little doubt they will carry out the oath of M. Leon Roche, solemnly sworn over the bodies of his murdered countrymen, in the name of France and the Emperor, that they should be bitterly revenged."

The following letter from a correspondent at Hiogo gives further details of the sad affair, and of the funeral of the murdered ones:—"You will be very sorry to learn that a fearful tragedy has been enacted six miles from Osaka, in the bay. A boat's crew from the Dupleix was sent to wait for the French Consul and the captain, who were expected overland; but they were stopped by some fellows, and told they could not pass; so rather than run any risk they turned back. In the meantime the boat had been waiting for them some two hours, and the men were lounging about on the beach unarmed, when, all of a sudden, some Japanese (about 200 in number) opened fire on them, shot them down as you would shoot pigeons, killing several, and taking the wounded prisoners and putting them to death. The French authorities recovered eleven bodies, and I attended the funeral of the poor fellows this afternoon. The midshipman, who was killed, was the only one who had a revolver, and he fired off all the barrels before he was killed. All the ministers, residents, &c., attended the funeral; also officers from the different men-of-war, and the band of the Ocean. The captain of the Dupleix made an oration over the poor fellows' graves (there was no priest); he was very much excited, and told the Frenchmen to look on the graves of their shipmates and countrymen, who had been foully assassinated, murdered in cold blood; that their deaths must be revenged, or they were all cowards and not Frenchmen. The Minister, Leon Roches, spoke next; he was so cut up that he could hardly speak, and the tears choked him; in fact all the sailors present were shedding tears. He told them to have confidence in their officers and minister, and he solemnly swore over the bodies of his murdered countrymen, in the name of France and the Emperor, that they should be bitterly revenged."

It was a most sad scene, and even the most thoughtless were much affected. There are several more men severely wounded, and I think two officers, who happened to be near in another boat. The Japanese authorities admit themselves that it was cold-blooded murder, and that there was no excuse or provocation for it. They offer to make all amends in their power. All seems quiet again now at Hiogo."

YOKOHAMA.

Dates hence are to the 16th March. The P. and O. mail of Jan. 10 arrived out on the 7th March, but was anticipated by the Pacific Mail steamer China, which intercepted it at Hong Kong, and reached Yokohama on the 4th March.

From Yokohama we learn that the officer of the Prince of Bizen, whose retainers came into collision with the foreigners at Kobé, was executed on the 2nd March, in the presence of a member of each Foreign Legation. The unfortunate man was allowed to commit harakiru first, and was then decapitated. The Japan Times comments very severely on this "judical murder," as it terms it, on the grounds that the first provocation was given by foreigners, a couple of insolent troopers of the French Legation guard, who persisted in attempting, what in no city of Europe they would be permitted to do, to cross the line of a procession immediately in front of the chief personage in it. The Japan Times winds up its remarks on this subject as follows:—"But the fact is that Japanese law has been violently wrested to satisfy the wounded dignity of a mushroom minister. It is not the first time that we have had reason to write thus indignantly; we trust that it will be the last that such notice will be taken of this crime—this error—in the English House of Commons as will make it the last. Sir Harry Parkes has stained the British name." The Japan Times adds a great deal more to the same effect, but public opinion seems to endorse the reparation exacted.

Mr. Satow, of the British Legation, has returned from Kioto, leaving Dr. Willis still in that city attending to the wounded. Osaka is reported as quiet, and presenting much the same appearance as before the troubles. The Custom-house at Hiogo has been officially notified as reopened for the transaction of business, but the U.S. Consul has stated his intention of not recognising its existence until more satisfactory assurances than have yet reached him are made that the new Government will carry the treaties into effect.

The Japan Times says, "The civil war is virtually over, and the northern Daimios, without a head and divided in opinion among themselves, will submit to the new regime without a struggle. Stotsbashi has finally retired from public life, has announced to the Mikado that he is become inkio and, shut up in the Ooyeno, one of the cemeteries of the Shiogoons in Yedo, awaits the further orders of his Imperial master. The Gorojiu is disssolved, and its members gone no one knows whither. The only representative of the late Cabinet is the Minister of the Interior, who reports himself sick, and will see no envoy from the Foreign Legations. The French and English missions of military and naval instruction are both withdrawn from Yedo, and, until the arrival of the foreign ministers and the assumption of the native executive government by the Mikado's officers, diplomatic relations with Yedo are suspended. The Prince of Kiishiu, on whom, when we last wrote, the hopes of the northern party appeared to centre, has declared for the other side; Aidzu is proclaimed an outlaw, and his neighbour, Sendai, is under orders to confiscate his territory; other northern chiefs, conspicuous in the late unsuccessful attack upon Kioto, are also named rebels and placed under the ban. Throughout the south the adherents of the extinct Shiogoonate are submitting to fate and the Imperial Standard; and unity among themselves and a show of moderation towards the vanquished are only wanted now to consolidate the power of the southern Daimios and settle permanently the constitutional rule of the Mikado. We have to hope that, having accepted in their entirety the treaties made in error with his subordinate officer, the Emperor will carry them out—not grudgingly, or in the letter only, as has hitherto been done—but in the spirit and with a desire to increase the power and wealth of his empire by the teaching of foreign civilisation and the enterprise of foreign commerce."

Yedo is quiet, and daily assuming a more deserted appearance; but disbanded soldiers are doing mischief in the surrounding country. We hear of a body of some seven hundred having mutinied, killed their officers, and, divesting themselves of European arms and accoutrements, spreading themselves over the Hatchoji district, where they are giving a good deal of trouble. In Yokohama we remain in perfect quiet and security, and have enough to do in buying the silk which is being hurried down from the interior rather faster than usual, holders being anxious to realise in such uncertain political weather.

NAGASAKI.

From this port we have advices to the 16th March. The news of the outrage at Hiogo had caused great excitement at Nagasaki, where H.I.M.'s ship Forfait kept up steam, with the intention of preventing any Japanese vessels from leaving the harbour. Foreigners after dark objected to leaving their houses, and even in the day-time went about armed and in parties. A great number of unemployed Japanese soldiers were loafing about the place, apparently bent on mischief, and a short time since a French officer had to beat a forced retreat for a distance of about four miles, closely followed by armed natives.

A Nagasaki correspondent, under date 28th February, says: "The gunboats Eugenie and Hinda have been sold, the former to Hizen, and the latter to Chiosiu, for something like 100,000 to 110,600 dols. each. The trade in fire-arms still continues, notwithstanding the ministers' prohibition.

TIENTSIN.

The rebel news from Tientsin has occasioned some anxiety of late, chiefly in consequence of rumours running counter to telegrams. The dates by this mail are to the 11th March, and the intelligence is to the effect that the disturbances had so far disorganised business that steamers from Shanghai with cargoes of cotton goods could not land them. This state of things, however, we must conclude had ceased, for the telegram of the 19th March, which we published in our issue of 6th April, announced that the rebels had been defeated and dispersed. This telegram was eight days later than the present mail, and as telegrams from Tientsin now reach to the 6th April, we may conclude that with their defeat the business in imports would be resumed, but no doubt on a small scale only.

It will be remembered that we mentioned in a late issue that Li had been directed to turn his arms against the Mahomedan rebels of the north-west, who were threatening an invasion of Shanse. This invasion has now actually taken place, and, as usual, found the Imperialists unprepared. The Mahomedans seem to have concluded an alliance with the Honan Nienfei, and burst across Shanse into Chihli at the same time that the latter entered these provinces from the South. Frequent engagements have taken place between them and the Imperialists, who have been quite unable hitherto to overcome them. Large bodies of troops, however, are being massed, and we shall probably hear of a more decisive engagement before long. An Imperial edict has disgraced several high officers for not preventing the irruption. The foreign residents at Tientsin have formed themselves into a volunteer corps for the defence of the settlement, in case of emergency; and the ramparts of the city are being put in order. As the Imperialist forces are between Tientsin and Paou-ting, which is the rebel head-quarters, no immediate danger seems to threaten the former. It would be well however that some further protection should be given to foreign residents there, besides the solitary gun-boat on which they now rely. In the meantime, the new outbreak is seriously affecting trade, as communications with the interior are cut off; and the Chinese, partly from panic, partly because there is no outlet for their goods, are shipping them away from Tientsin to Chefoo and Newchwang, and intend directing new shipments from hence to those ports. Nothing in this news affects the accuracy of our intelligence regarding the defeat, by Li, of the Shantung Nienfei. On the contrary, it fully confirms our previous information.

The Tientsin Arsenal is to be at the Hai-quang-sze, Tientsin and Mr. Taylor, the engineer in charge, has made good progress with the works intended to be erected. Canton workmen are at present employed making lance heads, after the English regulation pattern; said lances to be used by the Chinese cavalry (about 500), at present drilling in Tientsin under the command of Major Brown, assisted by two foreign drill instructors of experience. The regular work of the arsenal, the making of large guns, will be commenced about the end of March, the machinery in course of erection being nearly completed. His Excellency Chung-H'ou pays frequent visits to the works, and the Chinese take a great interest in the machinery.

Peking coals only will be used for foundry purposes at this arsenal. It is anticipated that this establishment will be the means of influencing the Chinese in Peking to a greater regard for the value of foreign machinery, and will also be a step towards the working of the valuable coal-fields in Si-shan.

HANKOW.

A Hankow correspondent writes :—"I am happy to be able to state that the reports circulated as to the losses that foreigners were likely to sustain through the suspension of the Haequan Bank were much exaggerated. The Tauotai, I am informed on good authority, told the Consuls that the total liabilities of the bank were taels 90,000, of which taels 40,000 were due to the Government and a like sum to foreigners. Part of the latter amount will, I believe, be recovered from the persons who paid the orders into foreign hands. It appears that the bank was established by the late Viceroy, who granted a licence to fictitious persons, that the two late Taoutais, now in high office at Woochang, appropriated the profits of the establishment, and now that it has got into difficulties ignore all responsibility." We had heard the losses to foreigners fixed at 40,000 dols., which is less than the amount mentioned by our correspondent. We are glad to learn that Mr. T. T. Cooper had reached Chunking, on the Upper Yangtze, on the 13th February. This city is near the centre of Szechuen, and not far from the capital, Ching-tu, for which he was making. He has changed his intention of crossing the Snowy Mountains at Li-chiang, and intends to attempt them one hundred and fifty miles further to the northward. This will take him into the southern portion of Thibet, and will not, we fear, lessen the difficulty of his journey. A programme of the Spring Race Meeting has been published, comprising two days' sport, with six events on each day. An unusual number of Griffins are said to have been purchased for the occasion. An attempt has been made to rob the iron-work of the Cemetery. The Consular constable was wounded by the thieves, who escaped.

A report of the case of John Mackellar, bankrupt, appears in the Hankow Times of the 7th March. Mr. Mackellar read out to the Court various correspondence showing that he had not contributed or approved of the reckless trading of the firm. No opposition being made to the grant of discharge, and no notice of appeal being filed, the Court ordered the issue of the discharge unconditionally, and in handing the discharge to the bankrupt, Mr. Medhurst (the Consul) expressed himself as satisfied that Mr. Mackellar had entirely vindicated his character from the charges of reckless and irregular trading which had been brought against the firm generally.

The following paragraph announces a curious literary "strike" at Hankow :—The Sheaw-kan candidates for the "little-go", of the B.A. degree, have beaten the district magistrate of that place, and refused to sit at their examinations. This last is called pa kaw, or the literary "strike," by which the matriculating or graduating students express from time to time their sense of disapprobation of some offending mandarin, whose connection with their examination they thus indignantly resent. It appears that in addition to minor offences against the Confucian code, this blue-buttoned officer has been a kind of Bluebeard, having ill-treated his former wife and married another, more equal in rank and condition. He is of the military school, like the majority of the present holders of civil offices. Between such and the literary body there is perpetual feud and fight, in resentment of this usurpation of offices primarily the reward of literary excellence.

SHANGHAI.

Dates by this opportunity are down to the 18th March. The outward mail of January 17 arrived on the 15th March, and that of the 27th on the 15th. Telegrams via Kiachta had been received up to February 19.

At a meeting of shareholders of the China Fire Insurance Company, the minutes of the previous meetings were confirmed, and the report and accounts submitted by the directors accepted. Messrs. Iveson, Probst, Cunningham, Hayes, Bell, and J. T. Brand, were elected directors for the ensuing year. At the request of Mr. Lavers, a letter asking the directors to call a special meeting for the 7th April—for the purpose of considering whether it might be desirable to terminate the business of the company—was read. The chairman announced that the directors had resolved that no more risks should be taken in the meantime in Hong Kong, Foochow or Japan, and their action was approved. Mr. Carter proposed an amendment, that business should be stopped altogether, but the chairman declined to put it to the meeting, on the plea that it amounted to winding up the company, which the present meeting had not power to do.

The poll for municipal councillors for the ensuing year has resulted in the election of Messrs. Cunningham, Probst, Michie, Baker, Maccall, and Yates.

We presume the municipal accounts are now being made up for the past year, and trust a resolution passed at the last meeting—to the effect that tls. 2,000 should be set aside annually towards erecting a free bridge over the Soochow creek, will not be forgotten.

We are sorry to hear that the Inspector General of Customs has ordered the discontinuance of the monthly returns of trade at the treaty ports. These have been much appreciated, and will be much missed. It is not improbable, we hear, that quarterly returns will be substituted.

From a rough calculation lately made, it appears that the import of Grey Shirtings from England and Hong Kong, taken from 6th December, 1867 (at which time the stock in Shanghai was reduced to a mere bagatelle), was about 1,380,500 pieces. The re-exports from 6th December, 1867 to 3rd March, 1868, were about 637,250 pieces, and the local deliveries about 85,000, leaving an estimated stock in all hands on the 5th inst. of 658,250 pieces. The above statistics include the estimated cargoes of the Magellan, Tailsing and Aurora Australis, and are, of course, open to correction. It is believed that of the present stock the greater portion is in second hands.

The leading topic of interest was the approach of the Nienfei to Tientsin, which is noticed under that head. The North China Herald has the following items of news :—

Mr. G. F. Seward, U.S. Consul General, has returned to Shanghai and resumed charge of his office.

The entries for the Shanghai Derby closed with thirty-four subscribers, or six less than last year.

The Taotai has caused vaccination-halls to be opened in the Tea Gardens, at which Chinese children are inoculated gratis on the afternoon of every third day.

Prices for Griffins are certainly not on the decline, for at a recent sale one pony realised tls. 220, another tls. 125, a third tls. 110, whilst six or seven others were sold at prices ranging from tls. 60 to 100.

The Bishop of Victoria has lately been visiting Ningpo and Hangchow, and is enthusiastic on the subject of missionary success in those neighbourhoods. He is anxious to get funds to build a church at Kwun-hoe-we, a city in the San-poh plain near Ningpo.

A Chefoo correspondent writes :—"One good effect of the Mahommedan irruption has already been to start any amount of goods inland, via Chefoo, which would otherwise have gone from Tientsin. By the way, has it ever come out from what source the salary of the Chinese Embassy is to be paid? Is it true that, like everything else except lighthouses, it is to come out of tonnage dues?"

HONG KONG.

Dates by this mail reach to the 25th March. The outward mails of 10th February arrived on the 21st March, with telegrams to 28th Feb. The French mail was to leave on the 31st March, and may be expected in London on the 6th inst. The news by the present mail is very meagre. The census for 1867 shows an increase of 2,373, the total being 117,471 souls.

The Postmaster-General's report for 1867 shows a colonial revenue of $51,865.63 ; excess over previous year from all sources, $1,575.32. From the returns appended it appears that during the year 1867 great improvements have taken place in the arrival of the British contract mails, and that 19 mails have arrived before their due date, one on its due date, and only four arrived after they were due here ; and that 41 days were gained on the voyage and 12 lost in the transmission of the mails via Southampton, and 42 days were gained and 10 lost in the transmission of those via Marseilles, against 31 days gained and 25 lost in the year 1866 ; and that the quickest time in which a mail was brought from London to Hong Kong via Marseilles was 38 days, against 37 in 1866. The most important subject to which the report refers is the announcement that arrangements are in progress to fit up the packets running between Singapore and Hong Kong, and Hong Kong and Shanghai, with the necessary appliances to admit of the mails being sorted on board the packets.

A somewhat queer story, says the China Mail, reaches us from the Kowloong side of the water, and one which, if true, will materially affect the opium trade. It is confidently asserted by the Chinese of that not very important part of the empire that the Governor-General of Kwantung has, aided by the Consular authorities at Canton, obtained the permission of the Colonial Government to establish a Custom-house at British Kowloong, by way of enforcing the payment of duty on the opium which finds its way by this channel into China. It is further stated that his Excellency has promised his aid to the Chinese authorities in the prevention of smuggling. We do not of course believe that any permission to establish a Chinese Custom-house in British Kowloong has been or will be granted by the Colonial Government. If the Chinese choose to establish fifty Custom-houses on the Chinese side of the boundary line we do not know of any regulations which will prevent their doing so. The only reason for attaching any importance to the rumour we have noticed is the very persistent manner in which the Chinese assert the truth of their version of the case. It is highly desirable that some authentic information on the subject should be forthcoming.

The same paper says :—" It is with no small gratification we record that amongst the various designs submitted for the Hong Kong Challenge Cup that which has been selected is the result of local enterprise. Eight patterns were, we believe, sent in, four being from the celebrated Hancock, two from another English house, and two from the establishment of Mr. Falconer. It is to one of these latter that the palm has been awarded, the design being by an English artist, Mr. Armstead, and the subject the 'Battle of Ashdune,' at which King Ethelred inflicted so decided a defeat upon the Danish leader Bagsig. The other and rejected design by the same artist represents 'St. George returning after slaying the Dragon,' and would most probably have been preferred had there not been a cup already in existence, consisting of a somewhat similar group. Much credit is due to Mr. Falconer for the trouble he has taken, the more so as the carrying out of the design selected is not likely to be attended with any pecuniary profit. The drawing has been photographed by Mr. Floyd, to avoid the danger of its being lost or spoilt. It is rumoured that some of the designs to be presented to competition will be Chinese in character ; but of this we cannot speak positively."

The troop steamship Tamar arrived at Hong Kong on the 12th March, with the 1st battalion 10th Regiment from the Cape. There are altogether 27 officers and 652 non-commissioned officers and men, 64 women, 103 children, and five horses. The following are the list of officers of the 10th Regiments on board :—Colonel Normane, C.B., Major Crow, V.C., Captains Battye, Barnet, Carleton, Strong, Fraser, and Denny ; Lieutenants Scott, Robertson, Malard, Armstrong, Blake, Huntley, Orton, Hood, Lang, Hinxman ; Ensigns Hodgson, Elliot, Evans, Tottenham, and Dale. Paymaster J. Murphy, Lieutenant and Adjutant Helme ; Assistant Surgeons Scanlan and Purcel. She brings also the following naval supernumeraries : Midshipman Treffry, Navigating Midshipmen Rowton and Roach. Capt. Sweeney, of the 32nd Regiment, being on leave, also made the passage up from Mauritius for the benefit of his health. There were four births and five deaths on board, the latter being four children and one private 10th Regiment at Singapore.

The China Punch of March 19 contains an amusing skit on the return of Mr. Pollard ; the Chief Justice is in the distance with open arms ready to perform the father's part in the parable of the Prodigal's Return.

In the form of a neat pamphlet, printed at the Daily Press office, we have received a " Report of the Trial of the Acting Attorney-General versus Robert Grant Webster, known as The Praya Case."

A special meeting of the Chamber of Commerce was held on the 17th March to discuss the provisions of the Stamp Act, and for the purpose of suggesting such amendments as might be considered necessary.

The Hon. P. Ryrie, who presided, proceeded to explain the objects of the meeting. Every one knew, no doubt to their cost, the inequalities that had been found to exist in the present schedule attached to the ordinance. The Governor had become convinced of this, as experience was gained in the practical working of the ordinance, especially as to the imperfect nature of the schedule, and accordingly had placed the matter in the hands of a commission, with the view of having it thoroughly revised and its imperfections sifted, as also with the idea of getting more generally the views of the mercantile community upon any alteration and amendments that might be considered desirable. A very material reduction was suggested by the commission on the present tax on bills of exchange, but that in order to make up any loss that might thereby ensue to the required amount of revenue necessary to be raised, viz., 110,000 dollars, it had been thought advisable to make some additions to the present schedule in the items or documents to be taxed. These proposed additions he would now proceed to read. First, a small tax on average statement. Second, a small adhesive stamp to godown orders. Third, an impressed stamp of two cents on all bank cheques. Fourth, an adhesive stamp of say 10 cents on inward bills of lading (several present said such a thing was quite unknown in any part of the world). Fifth, on treasure bills of lading to ports out of China the same stamp as upon bills of exchange. (Renewed laughter.) Sixth, on policies of insurance a tax of about 10 cents for every thousand. (Prolonged laughter.) These were only the additions that had been proposed, in view of the reduction of the tax on bills of exchange, but if it was the opinion of the Chamber that the very large tax now imposed on bills should remain, well and good, but it had been very generally understood that this had been found to be burdensome, especially in the case of those drawing for small amounts. The generally expressed feeling heretofore had certainly been that the present rate was most unequal, therefore a modification had been very thoroughly considered by the commission.

Mr. Kaye then proposed, " That the duty in the schedule on bills of exchange be allowed to stand as it is, but that all drafts on demand, irrespective of amount, and bills of exchange otherwise drawn for sums not exceeding 500 dols., be subject to a duty of two or three cents only." This resolution being carried by a majority of nine, Mr. Rowlett proposed the following, which was seconded by Mr. Macaulay and unanimously carried : —" That the only alteration which is desirable in the clause referring to bills of lading, is that the words " or acknowledgment of or for any goods or effects to be expected," be omitted, and the opinion of this chamber is entirely against any stamp on inward bills of lading, or to an ad valorem stamp on bills of lading for treasure to ports out of China."

Section 16, relating to letters of hypothecation, was next brought under consideration. Mr. Delbanco said he thought it was useless to say much on this subject, and he thought the small amount of revenue that had already been collected under this head was argument sufficient in support of the following proposition :—" This meeting is of opinion that the present tax is too strong, and that even in the interests of the revenue it ought to be reduced to $1 per letter." This resolution was also passed.

A resolution was then passed recommending the entire abolition of duty upon bank notes as was also one to the effect " That the Chamber think it ought to be conceded to the public to have documents stamped without fine for fourteen days after their date, as is done elsewhere."

The final resolution passed was as follows :—" That the revenue from stamps being sufficient for the requirements of the Government, it is undesirable to impose taxes on any other documents than those mentioned in the present schedule ; should, however, the alterations suggested by the Chamber affect the revenue, a small tax, say 10 cents each, on policies of insurance would be the least objectionable." Messrs. Helland, Duncanson, Jackson, and Macaulay were then deputed by the Chamber to wait upon the Stamp Committee, with a view of furnishing them with any further information they may require on the reference to this meeting.

A tabular statement was circulated at the meeting, showing the total amount of revenue derived from stamps from the opening of the Stamp-office to the 29th February. From this it appeared that $17,132 were from bills of exchange, $4,454 from bills of lading, $1,709 from charter parties, $1,240 from transfers, and $1,241 from letters of hypothecation, with other items, showing a total revenue of $40,322.80.

LABUAN.

A private letter received from Labuan, and dated the 22nd February, gives the following information :—

A grand fete and dejeuner, followed by an evening party, was given at the Government-house to commemorate the twenty-first anniversary of the colony. Europeans and natives sat side by side, without any distinction, and a number of local prisoners had their sentences remitted on account of the event. The 4th February was the day appointed for the marriage of his Excellency Governor J. Pope Hennessy with the only daughter of Hugh Low, Esq., the Colonial Treasurer. After the breakfast, which took place at the house of the bride's father, his Excellency the Governor and Mrs. Hennessy started in H.M.S. Severn for Brunner. His Excellency has made himself exceedingly popular, considering his short sojourn there, and is universally liked by all who know him. He has purchased the islands of Pappan, Burong, Usukan, and Kuranan. A paper has been started entitled the Labuan Gazette, but it is obliged to be printed in Singapore, which necessarily causes considerable delay. Matters are still very unsettled at Coal Point, and the steamer Mona is still under padlock at Singapore ; but the steamer Royalist runs between Labuan and Singapore via Sarawack.

There have been three fires. The first was in Flint-street, in the godown of Messrs. Virgin and Co., ship-chandlers, on the night of the 22nd March. It was discovered early, and extinguished before it had time to spread. Messrs. Virgin and Co's. stock, however, was all more or less damaged, but was covered in the Lancashire Fire Insurance Company for $12,000. Another fire broke out at Sandy Point on the 25th March, and proved a most disastrous one. All the timber, and ship-building yards there, with a good number of native houses, were completely destroyed. Fortunately, no lives are known to be lost, although two natives are reported missing. The loss of property has been estimated at $150,000. Messrs. Robertson and Milne, Ah Chong and Co., and the Patent Slip Dock Company are the principal sufferers. Another fire broke out the same day in some native houses in Sirangoon-road, but only one house was burnt, owing to the timely arrival of the fire-engine.

A special criminal session was held by the Chief Justice on the 26th March to try over again the Navarino case, resulting after a two days' sitting in the acquittal and discharge from custody of Captain James Young.

The new treaty with the Rajah of Quedah, rectifying his frontier with province Wellesley, is reported to have been ratified on the 21st March, but its text has not been published.

The sentence of death on the convicts belonging to the Toh-Peh-Kong Society in Penang has been commuted into transportation for seven years.

The half-yearly general meeting of the shareholders of the Tanjong Pagar Dock Company (Limited) was held on the 19th March, when the directors' report was approved, accounts passed, and a further issue of $150,000 debenture bonds, at 10 per cent. interest, and redeemable in three years, was sanctioned.

The Quarterly Criminal Sessions will be opened on the 9th April. Immediately after, the powder hulk question will be submitted for legal decision. Notices of two actions have been given to the owners of the sunk hulk, the Princess Royal, and to the owners of the Statesman, and counsel have been retained on both sides.

The British steamer Agamemnon, Captain Middleton, from Liverpool with dates to the 17th January, having called at the Mauritius and Penang, arrived at Tanjong Paggar on the 27th March. She brought 1,678 tons of cargo for Hong Kong, and 753 packages merchandise for Singapore. We are informed that the Dutch steamer Prins von Orange has been sold for the sum of $25,000 to an enterprising Chinese firm here, owners of the Fair Malacca, who intend running her between this port and Penang.

THE STRAITS SETTLEMENTS ASSOCIATION.

The Chamber of Commerce, after due consideration of a communication from the chairman of the London Straits Association inviting their co-operation, resolved that it was beyond their sphere, as a body, to be concerned in any political action. A public meeting was however called on the 28th of March, and a similar association called the "Straits Settlements Association" has been formed for the purpose of corresponding with, and supporting, the Home society.

The meeting above alluded to was held in the Exchange Rooms and was presided over by A. T. Carmichael, Esq. The following resolutions were passed :—

1. That an association be formed to co-operate with the Straits Settlements Association in London in the objects set forth in the minutes of their proceedings at a meeting held in London on the 31st January, 1868.

2. That the inhabitants of Penang and Malacca be invited to form branch associations, with the object of acting in concert with that of Singapore.

3. That the association shall consist of all those now present and of such other gentlemen interested in the prosperity of the Settlement who may desire to join.

4. That the Association should act through a chairman and deputy-chairman, with a committee of seven members, and that four members of the committee, together with the chairman or deputy-chairman, shall form a quorum.

5 That the committee shall have power to fill up vacancies in their body, subject to the approval of the first general meeting thereafter.

6. That a subscription of five dollars shall be paid to cover preliminary and current expenses, and a further subscription when necessary, as called for by the committee.

These resolutions having been passed unanimously, the election by vote of officers of the association was proceeded with—resulting as follows :—

Chairman—A. T. Carmichael, Esq. Deputy—H. W. Wood, Esq. Committee—Messrs. G. Lipscombe, F. von der Heyde, R. Baker, James Watson, H. Reme, J. Young, and J. S. Atchison.

CHINA AND JAPAN IMPORTS.

YOKOHAMA.—The business of the fortnight had shown no improvement whatever; a dull, dragging market, with scarcely any inquiry, had caused a further fall in prices. Grey Shirtings were difficult of sale at reduced quotations, and Yarn, even at extremely low rates, met with but little inquiry. Black Velvets and Blankets continued in some demand, but at easier rates. All other goods were unsaleable. The quotations were :—G. E. Grey Shirtings: 7 lbs. 38½ yds. 39 in., $2.40 to 2.50 per piece; 8 lbs. 4 to 8 lbs. 8 ditto, $3 to 3.10; 9 lbs. ditto 44 in., $3 45 to 3.55. G. E. White Shirtings: 56 to 60 reed 40 yds. 56 in., $3.30 to 3.60; 64 to 72 reed ditto, $3.70 to 4.10. T-Cloths: 6 lbs. to 7 lbs., $1.90 to 2.15. Cotton Yarn: Nos. 16 to 24, $40 to 41 per picul; 28 to 32, $47 to 50; 38 to 42, $40 to 42.

SHANGHAI.—Just after the departure of last mail advices were received from Tientsin of the approach of a large body of rebels, establishing a panic among the natives; this intelligence quite paralised the market, and caused a marked decline in the value of 8¼ lb. Grey Shirtings, which at one time could not have been sold at higher than tls. 2.1.1 to 2.1.6 per piece. Subsequent accounts having proved more favourable, a strong reaction had taken place, and the value of the above goods had advanced to tls. 2.1.6 to 2.2.3 per piece; 7 lbs. had remained steady at last mails' quotations. The firmness of holders had been strengthened by the favourable nature of the latest telegrams from England. White Shirtings had met with fair enquiry. T-Cloths, principally best makes, of 7 lbs. weight, had been wanted at former rates. Fancy goods had been sparingly dealt in. Woollens: Spanish Stripes, Medium, Broad and Habit Cloths, had continued neglected. Camlets had been in very little enquiry. Long Ells had been bartered to a fair extent against produce. Lastings had not been wanted. Metals.—Flat and Round Iron had been neglected. For Nail Rod the deandhad been slack, and prices had weakened. Hoop and Pig had been very depressed. Lead in good demand. Tin Plates, Steel, and Quicksilver have been dull of sale. Coals.—The market had remained unaltered for Cardiff Coals, part cargoes of which, via Hamburg and via London, had been sold at 10.7.5 to 11 taels per ton. English and North Wales without demand; sales of the latter kind had been made at 10.5 taels per ton from ship. Anthracite sold to arrive at 12.7.5 taels. Australian: Sydney kinds in fair demand. Arrivals from Newcastle without transactions. Japan: Sales of the very best kinds at 7.9 taels per ton from ship. Formosa without arrivals. Arrivals: 2,986 tons from Great Britain, 1,422 tons from Australia, and 1,340 tons from Japan; in all 5,748.

HONG KONG.—Demand fairly active, but values only slightly improved, the large stock militating against any marked or rapid advance. Piece Goods: Favourable advices from Manchester led to increased firmness on the part of holders, but buyers showed little disposition to respond. Increased business had, however, since been done in Grey and White Shirtings and T-Cloths at enhanced values, but the markel was weak at the close, many holders being anxious to realise. Drills and Fancy Cottons were not inquired for. Quotations for American manufactures quite nominal. Those by the John Norman had not been placed on offer, and would probably go on to Shanghai. Woollens: Blankets were still wanted at higher rates and Dutch Camlets firm, but in all other descriptions we quote a slight decline, and holders generally were quite willing to meet the market Metals: Iron finds more favour, and Nail Rod was a little dearer. Lead in demand, and prices show a material advance. Tin scarce, wanted, and dearer. Tin Plates a shade higher. Quicksilver showed further depreciation in value. Coal: One cargo of English had arrived to consumers, and one of Sydney—500 tons—which found a buyer at $12 ex ship. A sale of 300 tons English had been made at $13.50 to 13.75 ex godown, and over $13 and $14 ex ship, could not be had for English and Welsh respectively. Quotations:—Cotton Yarn per picul, No. 16 to 24, $112.50 to 122.50; No. 28 to 32, $140 to 145; No. 38 to 42, $145 to 150; Shirtings grey, 7 lbs. piece, $2.30 to 2.35; 8.4 lbs., $29 to 3; 9.10 to 9.12 lbs., $3.50 to 3.75; Shirting white, 52 to 56 reed, $2.20 to 2.40; 64 to 66 reed, $2.80 to 3; 68 to 72 reed, $3.40 to 3.60; T-Cloths, 6 lbs., 32 in., $1.90 to 2; 7 lbs., $2.20 to 2.40; 8 lbs., 36 in., $2.85 to 2.95; Camlets, S, $18 to 19; SS, $16; BBB, $21 to 22; Dutch, $25 to 26.

CHINA AND JAPAN EXPORTS.

TEA.

YOKOHAMA.—The market had been rather brisk, and operations had been on a larger scale than usual; as much as 2,000 piculs had been settled, including a portion of the shipments per P.M.S.S. Co.'s steamer China for San Francisco. The whole of these settlements had been made for the American market, and despite of the discouraging advices from the home side, prices had ruled steadily as last quoted, and the market closed firm. Arrivals not having been very large, stocks were computed to be not more than 3,000 piculs, consisting principally of medium and good medium grades, common and finest leaf being scarce. The quotations were:—Common, $17 per picul; Good Common, $18 to 22 per picul; Medium, $22 to 25 per picul; Good Medium, $25 to 28 per picul; Fine, $29 to 31 per picul; Finest, $32 to 35 per picul; Choice, $36 to 44 per picul.

SHANGHAI.—Black: Transactions since the departure of the last English mail had been quite unimportant, and no new feature had presented itself in the market. Supplies had been very trivial, and the stock was slightly reduced. The purchases consist of six small chops of Ningchow and one of Hohow. Prices show no quotable alteration, but they were perhaps a shade weaker. Settlements for the fortnight, 1,350 chests; reshipment on owners' account, nil; stock, 15 chops, or 2,800 packages. Quotations, duty paid, exchange for credits, at 5s. 9½d. per tael, and freight at £3 per ton. Common Hohow, 1s. 0¼d.; common to fair Ningchow, 1s. 1¼d. to 1s. 3½d. Green: A small business had been transacted, principally on American account. Prices of common descriptions were a little easier, but one or two chops of better quality had been taken at very full rates. Shanghai-packed tea had been bought at 28½ taels to 30½, and Fychow and Moyune at 30 taels to 42½. The stock was rather reduced, and supplies for this season had nearly finished. The range of price was many taels over what it was at the fall of last year. Settlements for the fortnight, 4,950 half-chests. Reshipments on owners' account, nil. Stock, 9 chops, or 3,600 packages.

CANTON.—There is no change to advise, only a few trifling settlements of Canton-made Teas having taken place at about former rates. Some small quantities of the new season's leaf are reported to have been taken in the country for native consumption at an advance of 2 taels over last year's prices. Little idea, however, can be formed of what the opening rates will be for the coming season. Settlements are reported as under:—Canton District Congou, 450 half-chests at 18 taels; Scented Orange Pekoe, 2,200 boxes at taels 14.50 to 18; Scented Caper, 1,000 boxes at 11.75 taels; Canton Gunpowder, 500 boxes at 18 taels.

SILK.

YOKOHAMA.—A steady business continued, and the demand for finer sorts had kept prices firm. In medium and inferior kinds we notice a weakness, these being in less request; but we have no sufficient reason for changing our last quotations. A noticeable feature had been the free supply of Oshius, which had corresponded with the demand for this class of silk. Nearly half of both arrivals and settlements had been from the Oshiu districts. Settlements are difficult to compute, quite half of the silk submitted for inspection having been rejected. They may safely, however, be figured at 400 piculs. Arrivals were about the same, so that stocks remain as last quoted—500 piculs. The quotations (laid down in London at exchange 4s. 3¼d.) were:—Mybash and Sinshu: Extra, 36s. 1d.; best, 32s. 4d. to 34s. 2d.; medium, 30s. 4d. to 31s. 10d.; inferior, 25s. 10d. to 29s. 7d. Oshu: Best, 32s. 4d. to 33s. 5d.; medium, 26s. 10d. to 29s. 7d.; inferior, 23s. 1d. to 25s. 10d. Koshu: Best, 28s. 5d. to 30s. 4d.; medium, 25s. 10d. to 27s. 8d.; inferior, 23s. 1d. to 25s. Sodai: Best, none; medium, 25s. 10d. to 27s. 8d.: inferior, 22s. 8d. to 25s. Achezan: Best, 26s. 2d. to 27s. 4d. medium, 22s. 8d. to 24s. 7d.; inferior, 17s. to 20s. 10d.

SHANGHAI.—Mr Holdsworth's Circular dated 17th March is as follows:—"The latest dates received from England since my last Silk circular are by letters to the 26th January, and by telegrams via Kiachta to the 18th February, the latter reporting more favourably of the home market, and quoting higher prices for all classes of China Silks. The business transacted during the past fortnight has again been limited, the settlements being estimated at about 700 bales, inclusive of 150 bales settled at the close of last mail, and exported by that steamer. The small purchases made for the previous interval, coupled with a general determination evinced by foreigners to neglect the Silk market early in the present fortnight, caused the holders of Silk to become anxious to realise, and a decline in prices asked by the natives was the result. Since the arrival of the above-mentioned telegrams, however, the Chinamen have endeavoured to advance their rates, but such advance has not been accepted by the foreigners, who have continued their purchases at quotations showing a slight decline on rates paid at the close of last mail for common Tsatlees and Taysaams; but Hainings, Yuenfas and other kinds must be quoted unchanged. A few parcels of Re-reeled Tsatlees and Hainings have been sold at 580 to 600 taels, and these are the quotations asked for the few lots remaining on offer. The unsold stock, owing to the arrivals being on the same scale as the settlements, remain unchanged, and, as usual at this late period of the season, consists chiefly of undesirable and common silks. About 200 bales of Szechuen silk (chiefly common) have arrived from Hankow, and found buyers at 230 to 245 taels per picul." The quotations (all charges paid to England at exchange 5s. 10d. per tael) were:—Tsatlee, No. 3, 28s. 1d. to 28s. 8d. per lb; Taysaam, No. 2, 20s. 6d. to 21s. 3d., No. 3, 18s. 7d. to 20s. 1d.; Chin Cum Taysaam, No. 2, 19s. 7d. to 20s. 6d., No. 3, 18s. 10d. to 19s. 7d.; Yuenfa and Hainings, No. 1, 24s. 6d. to 25s., No. 2, 23s. to 24s., No. 3, 21s. 6d. to 22s. 6d.; Hangchow Tsatlee, 20s. to 21s. 6d.

CANTON.—No change has taken place in the market during the interval. Holders have, perhaps, shown a greater desire to dispose of their stocks, owing, probably, to the anticipations of a large first crop of new silk, the weather having been very favourable for the worms, which, combined with an unusually large supply of eggs, seem to promise a large yield, but it is yet too early to offer a decided opinion. The settlements reported have all, or nearly all, been made for the French market. Buyers for America do not evince any desire to operate, unless at a material reduction from present rates. We give the settlements as follows:—Tsatlee, No. 1, 130 bales, at $510 to 520; Do., No. 2, no sales, $500; Loongkong, 40 bales, at $530; Rereeled Cumchook, 30 bales, at $550.

THE TEA PLANT IN JAMAICA.—The following is from the Kingston Morning Journal:—"The Government received by last packet, from the Royal Gardens at Kew, a case of healthy tea plants, which are to be sent to the Cinchona Nursery in St. Andrew, and placed under the care of Mr. Thompson, the island botanist. The idea has been formed, we believe, on good scientific authority, that our soil and climate are so well adapted that the tea plant will flourish here."

At YOKOHAMA.—To London, Tea, £3 10s. per ton. Silk, £4 to £4 10s.; to New York, £3 5s. to £3 10s. per ton.

At SHANGHAI.—There is but little inquiry for tonnage either for Europe or the coast. The General Havelock and Magellan have taken the berth for London at £3 per ton, and for New York the Tavistock is loading slowly at £3 5s. per ton.

At HONG KONG and CANTON.—Tonnage remains unaltered; no fresh settlements have taken place. For London or New York. Homeward, via Manila, the Carmian and Lorton have been fixed at £4 and £4 5s. per ton, and the Abbott Lawrence for New York at $12 sugar and hemp. The Circular of George Holmes estimates the disengaged tonnage in harbour at 8,148 tons.

At MANILA.—The following settlements have taken place:—Dora, 379 tons, to Liverpool direct; 500 tons wet sugar at £4 10s., and 600 bales hemp at £4 15s. per ton. Gaspee, 990 tons, to New York; a full cargo of sugar and hemp at $10 per ton for dry sugar, and $12.50 per 4 bales of hemp. At SINGAPORE.—The demand for tonnage continues good for United Kingdom from the rice ports; for London and Liverpool direct produce is not plentiful, and vessels are waiting to take the berth at current rates, viz., £3 dead weight and light freight.

At SAIGON.—The following, from the Circular of Markwald and Co., are the latest settlements:—Magdalena, 11,000 piculs, Channel for orders, £4 5s. per ton United Kingdom or Continent. Ivy, 8,000 piculs, Channel for orders, £3 17s. 6d. per ton United Kingdom, £4 2s. 6d. per ton Continent.

NAVAL AND MILITARY.

The Avon, recently commissioned for China, is one of the new class of gunboats built of wood on an iron frame, with twin screws of 120 collective horse power. She is 464 tons burden, and carries 4 guns, viz., 2 20-pounder Armstrongs as bow and stern chasers, 1 64-pounder shunt gun, and 1 6½ ton rifled gun, besides a 24-pounder rocket; and the crew are armed with Snider rifles. She is intended for the suppression of piracy in the China seas. Her crew consists of 70 men, and the following are the names of the officers:—Commander, G. D. Fitzroy; lieutenant, John Hope; master, F. Williams; assistant-surgeon, J. Shawood; paymaster, M. Mooney; engineers, Mr. Hill, Mr. Shawyer, and Mr. Grant; gunner, Mr. Nightingale. The lieutenant, Mr. Hope, has seen a good deal of service in New Zealand.

The Mecance line-of-battle ship, fitted out as a hospital ship for service at Hong Kong, arrived at Spithead on the 3rd inst. from the Nore, on her way down Channel, in tow of the Medusa. The Meeanee has been ashore somewhere off Margate, and had to slip one of her anchors and a quantity of cable. The fault of getting the ship ashore is said to lie entirely with the Medusa, which had the line-of-battle ship in tow at the time, and two of her officers are under arrest in consequence. The Meeanee remains for the present anchored at Spithead.

On the 28th ult. an application was made in the Admiralty Court on behalf of Commander Morant and the officers and crew of Her Majesty's gunboat Grasshopper. It appeared that in a series of captures, commencing on the 19th day of November, 1865, twenty piratical vessels in the China seas had been seized by the plaintiffs, and that the estimated number of the crews of the piratical vessels was 483. The Court decreed for the capture, and pronounced for the estimated number of men. The Queen's Advocate appeared for the captors.

LONDON, MONDAY, MAY 4, 1868.

THE VOTE FOR CONSULAR BUILDINGS IN CHINA AND JAPAN.

THE sum required for Legations and Consular buildings in China and Japan was not obtained without a sharp debate. Every year, as soon as the Estimates are issued, they are fastened on by quite a little army of economy-mongers, who show a wonderful degree of perseverance in their determination to cut down every vote that they can't quite understand. They generally select for their attack some item to be expended at a distance from home—the greater the distance, they probably argue, the fewer defenders it will have. Last year it was the order for new gunboats for service in China that aroused the outcry; this year it is the cost of properly housing our representatives in China and Japan. The amount now asked for was £59,520, being the final vote to complete a total of £179,000, which however included a large sum for the Embassy-house at Constantinople; out of the remainder, £50,000 was required for the Supreme Court in Shanghai, £15,000 for the new buildings in Japan, and there were smaller sums set down against Canton, Foochow, Ningpo, Tientsin, &c. One clever financial reformer proposed to strike out entirely the vote for Japan. He could give no valid reason for the proposition, but seems to have thought that Japan must be of the least importance, as it was the most distant of the countries under consideration. Another did not see the utility of having Consulates at all, at the smaller ports, where but few British subjects resided. Lord STANLEY crushed these petty objections by showing that our treaties oblige us to maintain Consular establishments at all the open ports; that if we did not erect suitable buildings, we had to pay heavy rents, for (in most cases) very unsuitable ones; that the Supreme Court was a new and necessary institution, and must be provided for; and that at present there were constant complaints of insufficient accommodation. This last fact we are by no means surprised to hear. At many of the minor ports the Consular establishments have long been wretchedly housed. At Nagasaki, for instance, some years passed before our Consul had anything better than a small temple, which certainly had an imposing-looking high-pitched roof, as seen from without, but within was a mere hut. Something better than this is not only requisite for the comfort of the inmates and the convenience of the public, but is necessary to the dignity of the Consular flag.

THE following Consular appointments for the North German Confederation have been announced:—Mr. PAUL LESSLER for Bangkok, Mr. BAUER for Batavia, and Mr. L. VON ABERCRONE for Macassar. The Consulates of all the States that have been incorporated with the North German Confederation are now abolished, with the exception of those of Mecklenburg, which will exist until the 1st of April, 1869.

IT is rumoured that Mr. POPE HENNESSY, the present Governor of Labuan, is likely to be appointed to succeed Sir DOMINICK DALY, the late Governor of South Australia. We trust there is no truth in the report, for Mr. HENNESSY has only just made his debut as a colonial governor, and it is hardly fair to remove him from the seat of his first appointment the moment he has settled down in it. Besides, it would be a great injustice to colonial governors of longer standing.

IT is stated that the Messageries Imperiales Company is about to raise additional capital, "for the development of a supplementary service in the Indo-Chinese seas."

CEYLON AFFAIRS AGAIN.

THERE has been another debate in the House of Commons on Ceylon affairs. This time it originated from a motion made by Mr. WATKIN for a select committee to inquire into the condition of the colony. The hon. member made out an excellent case, and supported his arguments by reading a letter from Sir JOHN ELPHINSTONE, urging the necessity of a revision of taxation, quoting also similar opinions expressed by Sir EMERSON TENNANT and Sir HERCULES ROBINSON. Mr. ADDERLEY'S reply was nothing more than a rechauffé of his last speech on the same subject, evading some of the points at issue, and wilfully misconstruing others, for which he was taken to task in pretty round terms by Mr. GORST. Colonel SYKES pertinently asked the UNDER-SECRETARY for the COLONIES how he could expect any body of Englishmen tosubmit to a system of government which allowed them no voice in the expenditure of their own money, and Mr. CHILDER ssaid that really it was almost hopeless to discuss any colonial question in the present state of the House, alluding to the unpardonable apathy exhibited on all occasions when colonial matters are brought forward. The truth of his assertion was promptly verified. Mr. WATKIN would perhaps have got his select committee—for of the few members present, the majority probably were quite careless which way they voted—but in the general indifference some misapprehension took place, and the opportunity of dividing waslost, Mr. WATKIN actually saying "aye" to the question that involved the rejection of his own proposal! Truly, it does at present seem quite hopeless to obtain a fair hearing for the colonies. Nevertheless, we are glad to hear that Mr. WATKIN does not intend to be thus extinguished, but will bring the subject forward in another shape on the first opportunity.

DIPLOMATIC ESTABLISHMENTS IN THE FAR EAST.

The vote to be proposed this year for the establishments in China, Japan, and Siam amounts to £117,615, an increase of £16,632 over last year's vote. About £15,000 may be expected to be repaid by the fees and receipts from rent at the Consular ports. In China the Envoy receives £6,000 a year, and his suite £3,800; and there are 17 Consuls or Vice-Consuls, £16,450 being voted for them, besides £2,600 for special or temporary allowances. The vote for interpreters and assistants is £18,900. In Japan the Envoy receives £4,000 a year, and his suite £3,400, and there are seven Consuls or Vice-Consuls, for whom £5,800 will be voted, and £4,200 for interpreters and assistants. The Consular list for Japan is increased this year by the addition of a Consul at Hiogo and at Neegata, and a Vice-Consul at Yedo and at Osaka. The vote for the Supreme Court for China and Japan amounts to £7,622. In Siam we provide for a Consul with £1,200 a year, his suite receiving £2,050. The entire vote for salaries and allowances to our other Consuls and Vice-Consuls abroad, including the allowance for Chapels and Chaplains, amounts this year to £170,378, but about £17,000 will be repaid by fees. The ordinary salaries and allowances and pensions of the diplomatic body are charged upon the Consolidated Fund, and always reach substantially to the extreme limit—viz., £180,000, the Act of 1832 directing that no larger sum than £180,000 shall be charged in any one year.

HYDRAULIC MACHINERY FOR SIAM.

We have just inspected a curious piece of machinery constructed here for the purpose of supplying water to the palace of the King of Siam. The palace it seems, is situated at such a height above the river, and such a distance from it, as to necessitate some special device to procure a continuous and sufficient supply; and it was thought that this might be accomplished without erecting a regular "waterworks" with steam power. The problem was submitted to Messrs. S. Owens and Co., hydraulic engineers, of Whitefriars, and as far as we can judge they have solved it most satisfactorily, by means of an apparatus that will utilise the current of the river, to raise its own water to a height of about 150 feet. It is, in fact, a sort of floating watermill. The external appearance is somewhat that of a steam-barge, with a pair of gigantic paddlewheels — gigantic, that is, in regard to the size of the vessel, which does not exceed that of a large ship's long-boat. It is constructed entirely of iron; sharp at both ends, and intended to be moored "stem and stern" by four anchors, in the middle of the stream. The space that, in a steamer, would be filled by the engines, is occupied by a powerful pumping apparatus. The paddlewheels, instead of being driven by any internal power, will be carried swiftly round by the current (which is very strong), and keep the pumps in motion; and the power thus gained will be sufficient to raise a continuous stream of water to a height of 150 feet, and force it through some five miles of pipes, to the place where it is required for use. The idea is most ingenious; we had almost come to the belief that nothing was to be done without steam, and it is quite refreshing to find that so much may be accomplished by a clever management of water-power. The machine is now complete, and a successful trial of its capabilities having been made on the Thames, will be promptly shipped for its destination.

THE HONG KONG ASSOCIATION.—DEPUTATION TO THE COLONIAL SECRETARY.

The interview of the deputation from the Hong Kong Association of London with the DUKE of BUCKINGHAM, Her Majesty's Secretary of State for the Colonies, took place at the Colonial-office at noon on Saturday, the 2nd inst. The deputation, which was introduced by Alex. Matheson, Esq., M.P., consisted of the following gentlemen:—Mr. Jas. White, M.P., C. J. F. Stuart, W. H. Vacher, Thos. Sutherland, E. J. Halton, E. Gilman, Douglas Lapraik, and George Duddell, Honorary Secretary of the Association. Several gentlemen were prevented from attending.

The deputation, on being introduced by Mr. Matheson, was very graciously received. Mr. White recounted the general features of the memorial, and showed the injustice of the heavy taxation to which the residents were subjected. Mr. Sutherland followed, and gave a very intelligible and elaborate account of the colony and its condition, and having only recently returned from there his statements were of great value. The Duke asked several questions by way of ascertaining the views of the deputation, and to guide him in dealing with the memorial, the most notable being, whether the colonists were prepared to forego the European garrison if the military contribution of £20,000 per annum were cancelled; the answer being, that it was believed the colonists would be quite prepared to forego it. The interview lasted about an hour, and the Duke expressed his satisfaction, and promised early attention to the memorial.

The following is the text of the letter addressed by Mr. White to his Grace on behalf of the committee:—

"The Hong Kong Association of London,
"2, Cowper's-court, Cornhill,
"London, E.C., April 4, 1868.

"My Lord Duke,—As chairman of a meeting recently held in the City of London for the purpose of considering the condition of the colony of Hong Kong, and convened and attended by a large number of merchants and others interested in that colony, I have been requested to solicit from your Grace an interview, for the purpose of laying before you certain facts connected with the present position of the colony, which are of very grave and serious import.

"The circumstances to which I refer have given rise to so much apprehension and dissatisfaction in Hong Kong that an association has been formed, under the title of the 'Hong Kong Association for Promoting the Interests of the Colony,' and a petition has been drawn up for presentation to the House of Commons, representing the grievances under which the colony is now suffering. A copy of that petition accompanies this letter, and my object in now addressing you is to direct your attention shortly to the circumstances which are more fully detailed in the petition I have referred to, and to seek this interview before the petition is presented, in order to put your Grace in possession of the views entertained by the principal persons interested in the subject.

"The immediate grievance of which the petitioners complain, and which we would submit to your Grace, is the imposition in the year 1863, for a period of five years, of a tax upon the colony, by way of contribution towards the establishments for military defence in China, amounting to £20,000 per annum.

"It will be seen from the correspondence which took place between the late Secretary of State of the Colonies, and the then Governor, Sir Hercules Robinson, in the year 1863, that that tax was imposed under the impression that the colony was in flourishing circumstances, and possessed of revenues which would yield an average surplus over expenditure of from £30,000 to £40,000 per annum. These estimates were pointed out at the time by the governor to be fallacious, and the result of the intervening experience has shown that the revenues of the colony are barely sufficient to meet the expenditure, exclusive of the military contribution referred to, and it is now a question of imposing new taxes, in order to maintain the balance of receipt and expenditure.

"In the meantime the injury done to the colony by taxing it beyond its means, and by the apprehension of still further taxation, has been found to be very prejudicial to its interests, and there is great reason to apprehend a withdrawal of many of the Chinese inhabitants as well as the merchants who had establishments in the island.

"But upon referring to the correspondence further it will be seen that it was not alone on the ground of the inadequacy of the revenues of Hong Kong to support the military contribution that objection was urged against it. The attention of the late Secretary for the Colonies was also pointed to the circumstance that the troops for the maintenance of which this tax was imposed were not necessary for the purposes of the defence of Hong Kong, but for the general object of protecting British interests in China.

"It was urged upon the Colonial Secretary by the Governor that the troops in Hong Kong were sent out 'because England's share in the foreign trade was estimated at over thirty millions sterling, because that trade was mostly carried on in British vessels from the open ports in China, at each of which England had British settlements and British subjects, and because the presence of a small body of troops, somewhere nearer China than India, had an effect in averting difficulties, while they formed a base of operations if misunderstandings should arise.'

"In the year 1847 a Committee of the House of Commons reported, in reference to Hong Kong, "that it was not right that the burden of maintaining this, which was rather a post for general influence, and a protection of the general trade in the China seas, than a colony, in the ordinary sense, should be thrown in any degree upon the merchants or other persons who might be resident upon it.' In like manner the committee of the House of Commons, which sat upon the question of military defences in the colonies in 1860, included Hong Kong by implication among those military posts in which garrisons were maintained for objects altogether independent of, and distinct from, the defence of the particular countries in which they were situate, and the committee expressed their opinion that, 'as these garrisons were maintained without reference to the wants and wishes of the inhabitants, they should be dealt with exceptionally, and not be included in any general scheme of colonial contribution.'

"Again in 1861, the Select Committee of the House of Commons on Colonial and Military Expenditure, included Hong Kong 'in the class of military garrisons, naval stations, convict depots, maintained chiefly for objects of Imperial policy, the responsibility and main cost of the defence of which properly devolved on the Imperial Parliament.'

"But, beyond the circumstance already referred to, I am desired to point out to your Grace that the general expenditure undertaken by the Government in Hong Kong, and for which taxes have been raised, has been on a scale which involves an inordinate burthen upon the revenues of the colony, independent of that which is especially in question. The Government has thought fit to establish there a Mint, at a cost of between £60,000 and £70,000, with a view, in a great measure, of saving money lost in exchange by the Imperial Government. Although this was Sir Hercules Robinson's object, he stated in his letter of April 12, 1864, 'that he would never have recommended the establishment of a Mint at the expense of the colony if he had known that a military contribution of £20,000 a year was to be imposed,' and he urged, when his objection to the military contribution had been unsuccessful, that the sum necessary for the outlay should be considered as a payment in advance towards the military contribution. Unfortunately for the interest of the colony, this suggestion did not meet with favour.

"In the meantime a necessity for increased internal expenditure has arisen in the colony, especially in maintaining and supporting the quays which skirt the harbour for more than two miles, and which have been destroyed in a great measure by typhoons. It has been found necessary in order to meet this general expenditure, to impose taxes in the nature of stamp duties, which are very distasteful to the community in Hong Kong, and the whole Imperial arrangements in connection with the colony are producing apprehension and uncertainty on the part of the Chinese community and the mercantile interests, which endanger the commercial existence of the colony.

"The circumstances connected with these matters are stated at length in the petition and correspondence appended to it, which accompany this letter, and I do not, therefore, propose to trouble your Grace on this occasion with further details. My purpose in making this communication is limited to the object of directing your Grace's attention to the subject, and to the solicitation of an interview, at which a deputation from the parties resident here, who are interested in the trade and commerce of the colony, may be permitted to confer with your Grace, and to point out the objections which exist in their minds to the policy of the measures in connection with the management of the colony.

"I enclose your Grace the petition and extracted correspondence in a printed form for your greater convenience in perusal, and I will request your Grace to name as early a day as possible for an interview.

"I have the honour, &c., (Signed) "J. WHITE.

"To the Right Hon. his Grace the Duke of Buckingham, &c., &c."

THE LATEST FROM JAPAN.

The Pall Mall Gazette remarks that "the mission to Japan will soon come to be considered the most unenviable in the whole diplomatic service. According to a telegram from Hong Kong, Sir Harry Parkes has been attacked on returning from a visit to the Mikado and several of his escort wounded. This is the third time within six years that the British mission has been visited with these proofs of hostility, to say nothing of the assassination of Mr. Richardson, Major Baldwin, and Lieutenant Bird. We can scarcely venture to hope that our relations with the Japanese have improved by the lapse of time. It is not yet ten years ago since Lord Elgin obtained the treaty which opened Japan to British commerce, and since then our vessels have been fired upon, and our countrymen assailed or murdered. The Americans seem to have established a better understanding with the people. They have not only been well treated, but they even managed to get rid of a few odd useless vessels to the Japanese at highly favourable prices. It is true that the Japanese repented of their bargain, and tried to get their money back, but this was only an interesting proof of their inexperience in dealing with civilised nations. The purchasers of the far-famed wooden hams and nutmegs of Connecticut are not reported to have applied for the return of their money, and the Japanese will know better another time. The Americans preceded us in Japan, and that may be one reason why they are the favourites. But in China also it was the American Minister who was chosen for the post of special envoy from the Emperor. America has no Eastern possessions, and therefore nothing to excite the jealousy of Eastern Powers. This is the great cause of the favour in which Americans are held. The telegram does not make mention of any injury to Sir Harry Parkes, and we may therefore hope that he will not be obliged to relinquish a post which seems to be attended with more danger than honour."

MR. D. K. MASON, having returned to this country from Bangkok, has resumed the post of Siamese Consul in London, and his appointment has been officially recognised in the Gazette.

Social Life of the Chinese; a Daguerreotype of Daily Life in China. London: Sampson, Low, and Co.—To those of our readers who read the China Mail during the years 1861-64, the contents of this volume will not be entirely new. During those years the Rev. Justus Doolittle, a zealous and painstaking missionary, who during a residence of upwards of a dozen years in Foochow had acquired a deep insight into what we may term the inner life of the Chinese, contributed the results of his observations to that paper, in which they appeared from time to time under the heading of "Jottings About the Chinese." These jottings, with others not then published, have now been collected, re-arranged, and edited by the Rev. Paxton Hood, and in this form may be justly described as the most complete and readable book on Chinese life and character that has yet appeared. Works on China by ordinary travellers are necessarily superficial in their character; merchants are too much absorbed in their proper avocations to have opportunities of gathering any great store of knowledge; the books of diplomatists are generally crochetty and argumentative; mere sinologues are more pedantic than entertaining. Missionaries, from their opportunities of travel in the interior, and their more intimate relations with the natives, ought, as a rule, to be best of all qualified to furnish information regarding their domestic life; yet the writings of most missionaries have a peculiar colouring, and a want of breadth that makes them tedious to the general reader. Mr. Doolittle is not one of this class. He takes you, as it were, into Chinese society with him, and makes you feel quite at home there. All the details of their social life—their amusements, ceremonies, beliefs and superstitions—are not only graphically described, but ably explained and commented on. Theological subjects and missionary statistics do not obtrude themselves throughout, but two short chapters are devoted to them towards the end of the volume. There are few allusions to either the history, geography, or ethnology of China, and these topics having been often treated of by previous writers with more or less abstruseness, we do not miss them in a work devoted specially to domestic and social matters. The text—which is slightly abridged but scarcely at all altered from the original of Mr. Doolittle, is diversified by explanatory notes and by a profusion of well-executed woodcuts. Altogether it must be acknowledged that Mr. Hood has done good service in editing these papers; they are far too valuable merely to appear in a local journal, and then become lost to the reading public. The external appearance of the volume is very attractive and tasteful—thoroughly characteristic without being grotesque.

Russian Works Relating to China. — Amongst the works presented to the Imperial Geographical Society of Saint Petersburg at a recent meeting were:—A Dictionary of the Chinese and Russian Languages, by Professor Wassilieff, author of the Manchon-Russian Dictionary; and a manuscript map of the Russo-Chinese frontier in the eighteenth century, presented by M. Korsakoff, Governor-General of Eastern Siberia.

The authorities of the British Museum, we hear, are treating for the purchase of the large Japanese library of the late Mr. Von Siebold. The latter gentleman was long resident in Japan, and possessed the privilege, rarely accorded to foreigners, of collecting books in that country. During his lifetime he made a cession of a number of books to the Dutch Government. His remaining library consists of several thousand volumes, exclusively in Japanese, on literary, scientific and historical subjects, of which a French and English catalogue is being compiled, under the care of M. Fotheringham, Professor of the University of France, assisted by a learned Japanese, who has accompanied Mr. Von Siebold, jun., to Europe. This catalogue when completed will afford a key to the hitherto little known subject of Japanese literature.

It is announced that the South Italian Railway Company has undertaken to establish a first-class hotel at Brindisi. This will obviate one of the principal objections brought against the adoption of the Brindisi route by travellers proceeding eastward. The correspondence opened upon this subject in the English newspapers is operating beneficially upon public opinion in Italy, and there seems to be every probability that the question, once set on foot, will not be suffered to rest until it be completely solved.

The Gazette notifies that the Queen has been pleased to approve of M. Bosman as Consul at Hong Kong and District for his Majesty the King of the Netherlands.

HOLLAND.

ROTTERDAM, April 21.

The First Chamber, which met on the 14th, adjourned on the 19th inst. Several Bills of local interest having passed, the budget for India for 1868 was brought forward. The Liberals again refused to enter into a debate with Minister Hasselman upon colonial politics, and no one answered the recriminations of the Conservative members, so that the budget was approved of unanimously, after a very unimportant debate. The only item which will create interest in India appeared in the speech of the Minister, with regard to the "licentious" press in India, about which some of the Conservative members complained. The Minister said that he had addressed a letter to the Governor-General upon the subject. The Minister is of opinion that some restrictive measures ought to be taken, and states that the press operates to a great extent upon the native minds against the authority of the Dutch.

To-day the Second Chamber reassembles, and the question at issue between that House and the Ministry will now be decided in a very short time. The Cabinet has endeavoured to reconcile the hostile majority by laying a Bill before the members to alter the instruction law. It is, however, not very probable that the members will consent to deal with this Bill before the Budget is discussed. It is thought that with regard to the Budget for Foreign Affairs the Chamber will divide without discussion.

At the election at Appingadam the Liberal candidate, Mr. D. de Ruiter Zylker, has beaten his opponent. He obtained 1,062 votes, whilst Professor Gratema only had 660 suffrages.

On the 16th inst. a great festival took place in the Crystal Palace at Amsterdam. The medals awarded to our industrials at the Paris Exhibition were distributed by the Prince of Orange. The Ministers, some of the ambassadors, and a great many authorities attended the ceremony. In the evening the industrials gave a banquet to the Prince. On this occasion His Majesty conferred the knighthood of the Netherlands Lion upon the following gentlemen:—L. Alma van Tadema, artist; Dr. E. H. van Baumhauer; the industrials M. Coster, H. L. Enthoven; Chs. Faider at Brussels; A. Hohwu and A. A. G. Iterson.

To day, the King, Queen, and the Royal family arrive at Amsterdam on their annual visit to the capital.

The sitting of the Second Chamber of the States General to-day shows that the members will again enter into a discussion with the Cabinet. After Mr. Zylker was admitted and the declaration of Professor Vreede was accepted for notification the general discussions upon the budget were opened. Messrs. Dam, Moens and Van Bosse explained the motives which lead them to vote against the Budget. The Minister of the Interior entered into a long reply, supported by Messrs. de Bosch, Kemper, and Gesken. To-morrow the debate will be resumed. It thus seems that after a fortnight of suspense there will be another week of doubt and delay. For the general condition of anxiety which prevails throughout the country the Government are certainly responsible. By all the ordinary and conventional rules and precedents they were bound to consider the majority against them and to resign. Every day, however, it is proved more clearly that the Cabinet declines to surrender the lead to their parliamentary rivals, and that they do all in their power to remain in office.

CHARTERED BANK OF INDIA, AUSTRALIA, AND CHINA.

On the 22nd ult. the fourteenth ordinary general meeting of this bank was held at the London Tavern; Mr. T. A. MITCHELL, M.P., in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN, in moving the adoption of the report and balance-sheet, observed that they contained such full and accurate information in regard to the position of the bank, that it was hardly necessary to go into more particulars. The profits continued very large. Unhappily they had had to sustain the wind-up of the last three years of crisis in the East. Six months ago, when he advised the shareholders of only a five per cent. dividend, he warned them that there were two or three houses that at the previous half-year were considered of sound standing, one of them of almost European celebrity and extent, had since been compelled to wind-up, and further losses had in consequence arisen. Those losses, however, had been purely the results of the three years of crisis, no fresh losses having since occurred. The profits made were, as stated in the report, at the rate of twelve per cent., and having now passed through the crisis and maintained their credit and position in the East—he might say that in India they stood second to no bank—the directors hoped and expected that the profits would continue as large as they were at present, and in that case, as there would be no such bad debts to provide for, he thought, without being over sanguine, they might hope to pay a better dividend when they next met. Looking at all the circumstances, and bearing in mind how many banks in India had not only been compelled by the pressure of the times to trench upon their capital but to make calls, he submitted that having maintained the capital of the bank intact, sustained its credit and position unimpaired, and paid a dividend of five per cent. after making full provision for losses, the directors were entitled to credit. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. J. JONES seconded the motion.

Mr. COLES asked what was the full amount of the bad debts still outstanding.

Mr. CHAPMAN remarked that the directors in 1866 and 1867 had been guilty of a little want of frankness in not informing the shareholders that the probable losses would be greater than they had anticipated.

The CHAIRMAN was not prepared to give the information asked, not considering it desirable to state publicly the amount of the outstanding bad debts. Those who knew the nature of the crisis in the East would be aware how impossible it was for any body of directors to form an accurate estimate beforehand of what the bad debts would be. The board reckoned the bad debts now at some thousands less than they were calculated at in October last. They did not, however, recommend more than 5 per cent. dividend, as he objected altogether to paying dividends out of capital. (Hear, hear.) He was confident that with the revival of trade their profits and dividend would increase.

The motion was carried unanimously.

The dividend at the rate of 5 per cent., free of income-tax, payable on and after 27th inst., was likewise unanimously adopted.

The directors retiring by rotation, viz., Messrs. T. Lancaster and W. Macnaughtan, were re-elected.

On the motion for reappointing the auditors, an objection was taken to the name of Alderman Dakin on the ground of the multiplicity of his engagements, and his re-election was negatived by 26 votes against 19. The other retiring auditor, Mr. Thorp, was reappointed without opposition, and Mr. O. Lewis was elected as the second auditor.

The customary compliment to the chairman and directors concluded the proceedings.

Monetary and Commercial.

The general meeting of the Chartered Bank of India, Australia, and China was held on the 22nd ult. The balance-sheet shows a net profit for the year of over 12 per cent. on the capital, but further losses by bad debts, arising out of the disasters of the late crisis, prevent the dividend declared being higher than 5 per cent. The position and prospects of the bank are shown to be most satisfactory. The meeting adopted the report and account, which will be found in another part of our Paper.

The Chancery suits which have been pending for upwards of two years between the general body of creditors of Messrs. Watson and Co., Shanghai, and Mr. J. P. Watson, in reference to the well known property of "Foong Mow," were heard before Vice-Chancellor Giffard on the 17th and 20th ult. The counsel retained by the creditors were Sir Roundell Palmer, Mr. W. M. James, Q.C., and Mr. Rendall; those by Mr. Watson, Mr. Druce, Q.C., and Mr. Bedwell. When the arguments were concluded the Vice-Chancellor intimated his intention to deliver judgment on the 25th ult., which he accordingly did, decreeing that Mr. Watson could retain the property, not only for the balance of the purchase money, but also for the debts due to him by the firm of Watson and Co., owing to the verbal assurances of Mr. Coutts to Mr. Watson on several occasions that the deeds should remain in his possession for such purpose. All the costs of the suits to be paid by the creditors.

The official liquidator of the Blakeley Ordnance Company has ordered a sale by public auction to be held on the company's premises at East Greenwich on the 16th of June. The whole of the stock of guns, shot, shell, and ordnance stores will then be disposed of.

The extraordinary decision given by the Chief Justice of Hong Kong in the case of the Isca has invested all bottomry cases with more than usual interest to our readers. It is of the highest importance that the old, and undoubtedly just usage, that a bottomry bond includes the cargo as well as the ship, should be maintained in its integrity; otherwise vessels in distress at a strange port would often be unable to raise the funds necessary to enable them to prosecute their voyages, although they might have a cargo on board worth twenty times the sum required. A case in point was reported last week, where the validity of a bottomry bond on the Lizzie was contested by the owners of the cargo. The Admiralty Court justly pronounced for the bond, and condemned them in costs.

Mr. F. M. Page (3, George-yard, Lombard-street,) has published his annual Record of Prices of Bullion in London, with Corresponding Prices and Rates in Shanghai and Hong Kong, for the year 1867. This useful table shows the result of bullion operations during the past year. Owing to the low rates of exchange prevailing in China, specie remittances contrast most unfavourably with India bills. Bar silver and Mexicans seldom yielded even the bare cost, and in most cases resulted in serious loss.

The following, announcing the abolition of duty on certain articles of import into Manila, has appeared in the London Gazette:—

By a Royal decree, issued at Madrid, December 10, 1867, the following articles have been declared free of duty on importation into the Philippine Islands without any distinction as to flag—namely, olive oil, rice, bacalao, salted and dried meats, beef and mutton, hams and venison, peas, grains, vegetables and cereals—such as oats, rye, beans, maize, lentils, and the like—flour, green herbs, garlic, onions, potatoes, butter and lard, salted, dried, and pickled fish, sardines, hung beef, bacon, wheat, cattle, pigs and buffaloes, trees, plants and seeds, coals, and live fish.

Telegraphic communication between Malta and Alexandria was restored on the 25th ult. So defective, however, is the condition of the cable that a further interruption would cause no surprise. We now hear of a rupture of the Malta and Modica cable, which however was promptly repaired.

The approaching inquiry into the affairs of the Bank of Bombay promises to be searching and complete. The commission is armed with full powers, and the three gentlemen who constitute it will have no other object than to ascertain the whole truth, and satisfy the just demands of the public. The officers connected with the Bombay Government at the time of the bank's failure have as much cause as the shareholders to welcome an investigation which will, we trust, protect them from future misrepresentation or calumny.

At the meeting of the Singapore Gas Company held on the 20th ult. the report recommending a dividend of 7½ on the preference, and 4 per cent. on the original capital, was adopted.

CHARTERED BANK OF INDIA, AUSTRALIA, AND CHINA.

DIRECTORS' REPORT.

PRESENTED AT THE FOURTEENTH ORDINARY GENERAL MEETING, 22nd APRIL, 1868.

IT is now the duty of the Directors to lay before the Shareholders the General Balance-Sheet of the Bank, made up to the 31st December last, showing a net profit for the year of £97,288 11s. 3d., or at the rate of upwards of 12 per cent. on the Capital.

The Directors regret that they have to deduct from this sum £57,360 12s. 7d., which, on a fresh revision, is found to be the further probable loss on the bad debts of the past three years of Eastern crisis; but they must remind the Shareholders that they were warned of the greater part of this at the last half-yearly meeting in October, and the Directors can congratulate them on the total loss now falling so infinitely short of that of other similar institutions. The extent of the business and the credit of the Bank remain unaltered, as is proved by the Balance-Sheet, notwithstanding the serious fall in the Rupee Exchange which occurred during the last half of 1867; and the profits must, with reduced competition, gradually increase, without any further set-off of magnitude from old bad debts.

The Capital of the Bank being quite intact, the Directors have no hesitation in recommending a Dividend for the half-year at the rate of Five per cent. per annum, free of Income-Tax, which latter is deducted from the charges, leaving the sum of £1,062 17s. 5d. to be carried forward, besides the £10,000 Reserve Fund, which may, they hope, now in better times and free from a crisis which is not likely soon to recur, be gradually built up again.

Mr. T. LANCASTER and Mr. W. MACNAUGHTAN are the two Directors who now retire by rotation, and being immediately re-eligible, they offer themselves again to the choice of the Shareholders.

The Auditors, Mr. Alderman DAKIN and Mr. JONATHAN THORP, now complete their annual term of office, and present themselves for re-election.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS cannot be too highly commended for the favourable influence they exercise over the skin. In all eruptions, inflammations, and ulcerations, the detergent qualities of this unguent render it so efficacious in first cleansing and purifying the diseased part, then inducing renewed and healthy action, as to ultimately leave the surface in the highest health. Holloway's Ointment works the most wonderfully beneficial results in bad legs, chronic sores, &c., by improving and quickening the sluggish and imperfect circulation, removing all corrupt matters, and increasing the disposition to heal. Holloway's Ointment throws no deleterious drawback on the function of the skin; it manifestly augments its evaporation and perspiration, whereby softness and pliability supplant its previously harsh and dry state.

JAPAN.

HIOGO AND OSAKA.

The Japan Gazette publishes a letter dated Hiogo, 12th March, giving some particulars of the execution of Ikada Ise, the officer of the Prince of Bizen who instigated the outrage on foreigners at Kobè. The writer says:—

"For some time we have had no particular excitement until the 2nd inst., when it was reported that Ikada Ise, the officer who ordered his men to fire upon our people, was to be beheaded on the spot where he had given the command. Of course our citizens manifested a great deal of anxiety to know at what hour the spectacle was to take place, in order that they might witness it. The day passed, however, and we heard of no execution. On the following morning, to the surprise of everyone it was made known that the demand of the Ministers had been complied with on the previous night, at twenty-five minutes past ten o'clock, in a temple at Hiogo, in presence of seven Europeans and the like number of Japanese high officials.

"The unfortunate man paid the penalty of his folly with that coolness, without bravado, that has ever distinguished his countrymen. Out of consideration for his position he was permitted to commit Hara-kiru. Upon his making the cut across his stomach, the executioner at once, with one blow, severed his head from his body, thus closing the career of the would-be murderer of unarmed Europeans, and justice was satisfied. The course of this man is but an another proof of the animosity that is felt by Japanese towards foreigners, and I predict the sequel will show more of these attacks, and the final necessity for a general war against the whole race of Daimios before peace will be fully established."

YOKOHAMA.

Advices from this port are to the 20th of March. The massacre of French sailors was still the chief topic, and the Japan Herald publishes the following detailed account of the sad occurrence:—

"To commence at the beginning, it appears that Admiral Ohier, when leaving Kobe, left orders that the bar and different branches of the river upon which Osaka stands should be surveyed, and also to survey the coast as far as Sakai, a port distant about three miles from Osaka, and containing something like 80,000 or 100,000 inhabitants. Hitherto the only branch of the river upon which Osaka stands, traversed by us, has been that on which the Fort of Temposan is placed. Sakai is the natural port apparently for Osaka, that is to say, that ships anchored off there could always, however rough the weather, communicate with the town. There are two jetties at Sakai, running into the sea for some distance, and upon passing between these you enter into a large artificial basin. All these advantages induced the Admiral to order the place to be surveyed.

"In order to carry out the instructions of the Admiral, the Dupleix left Kobe for Osaka on the morning of the 4th March, and on her arrival immediately commenced to survey the bar. The following day they were enabled by the knowledge they had gained to tow the French Minister and his suite with their steam launch over the bar without getting aground. Amongst those who accompanied the Minister was the French Vice-Consul for Yokohama, M. Viault, who was going to Osaka on a visit. On the 7th, wishing to see Sakai, M. Viault and Commandant Roy, of the Venus, resolved to walk there on the following day. Orders were then sent off by Commandant Roy to the Dupleix to send her steam launch to meet himself and companion at Sakai at three P.M.

"On Sunday morning about 10 o'clock the two gentlemen above named started from the Legation, taking leave of the Minister, as it was the intention of the commander to return to his ship, and that of M. Viault to go back to his post. The two gentlemen, escorted by two of Prince Uwazima's men and two officers of the Osaka Municipal Government, proceeded on their way without obstruction. The road to Sakai is a fine hard road some twenty or twenty-five feet in width. At a place called Szmi-yo-shi their escort was increased by two Japanese officers, who seemed as if they had been waiting for them. After staying a short time to inspect the fine temple at Szmi-yo-shi, the party now went on quietly as before, until they arrived about noon within a hundred yards or so of a bridge called the Yama-to-bashi, crossing a large river called the Yama-to-gewa, at a point about two miles distant from Sekai. Their escort was now accosted by some Japanese officers, and upon the commandant asking what was the matter, M. Viault replied, 'It is not our business, we have only to go on," and was about to do so, when their guard stopped them and begged they would not go on. M. Viault, insisted on proceeding, when some officers came from the bridge, where there were several more armed men with flags. These officers entered into conversation with the escort, the result of which was that the latter strongly advised the foreigners to go into a neighbouring house. Seeing a mob gathering M. Viault and his companion did as they were requested, and awaited the result of the conference between their guard and the party occupying the bridge. After waiting a short time they were told they could not pass that day, the men on the bridge, who belonged to Prince Tosa, refusing to allow foreigners to pass. They now sent another messenger to explain that they must pass in order to meet the steam launch, which was ordered to be at Sakai at three o'clock, at the same time remonstrating, as strongly as their somewhat limited knowledge of the language would allow, upon the obstruction offered to their passing, as Sakai was a place which, by treaty, was especially mentioned free of access to foreigners. Messrs. Viault and Roy then returned to the Legation. In the meantime the steam launch and a whale boat got to Sakai; at three P.M. the latter went off to survey the harbour, and the launch waited an hour or so; some of the men went on shore and gave their bread to the children; they were well treated and returned. The boatswain and engineer of the launch then went on shore, when two Japanese officers came up to them, and, taking them by the arm, appeared to wish to show them something. They had gone but a few yards, when one of the officers shouted, and at once about forty armed men surrounded them. The boatswain thrust aside those holding him, and rushed on board the launch, the Japanese following to the water's edge, firing at the launch, shooting dead one of the engineers who was on board, as he was trying to start the engine.

"The first-mentioned engineer, carried to the water's edge in the rush, jumped in and was fired at, but dived under the launch, and remained hidden between her and a native boat twenty minutes; hearing the firing cease, he peeped out and saw that all the miscreants were gone; no doubt they thought that all were killed in the boat, and were fetching instruments wherewith to destroy the launch. All the crew that had jumped overboard were killed. As one sailor was clinging to the sea-wall a ruffian thrust the muzzle of a rifle against his head, and blew the poor fellow's brains out. Another man's head was so mutilated by means of one of their trident-shaped weapons as almost to prevent recognition.

"The engineer, the only one unhurt, climbed into the launch, but found that the engine was useless, the steam-pipe being cut open by a bullet. He then called upon the poor wounded wretches to assist him in getting the launch off; one man was shot through both arms, another had his intestines pierced from side to side by a ball, another was shot through the chest, and two were dead (two of the wounded men died soon after). Yet those brave wounded men took up their oars, so sweet is life, and managed to get outside the basin, where they were able to hoist sail and steer towards their ship.

"The surveying boat hearing the firing came up just in time to see the finish of the affair; but having no arms but revolvers, the officer hurried off to the Dupleix for assistance. On arriving on board and reporting the affair the captain immediately sent off all his boats fully manned and armed; when about half way to the shore they were met by the launch; putting fresh hands into her, they proceeded on their way to Sakai.

"It was bright moonlight and near midnight when they reached there; men were seen moving about in the forts. The commander of the boats, thinking that perhaps M. Viault and his companion had not kept their appointment to meet the launch, owing to their being made prisoners, hesitated to attack the place at night, thinking that the prisoners would be at once sacrificed, so resolved to return; on reaching the ship he found the missing commandant.

"The same night H. E. M. Leon Roches had a party at the Legation, and amongst the guests were several Government officials; while at table the news reached one of them. His Excellency then demanded the missing sailors, and by 8 A.M. on Tuesday morning their bodies were brought,—making in all one midshipman and ten sailors."

NAGASAKI.

From this port we have advices to the 23rd March. A letter dated the previous day says:—"It was currently reported on Monday last that there would be a disturbance here, and I believe the Consul issued a circular so late as eleven o'clock at night, calling upon all British subjects not to enter the native city but keep indoors. The Marines from the Pearl were brought on shore, with everything in readiness, about eleven or twelve o'clock, and remained all night, stationed principally near the Custom-house, although I understand some were moving about. They are generally ashore now every second or third day, marching about with their guns over the hill for exercise. So far as I can see, there is not the slightest chance of a disturbance."

Another correspondent writes, with reference to the position of Satsuma:—"Before the last mail had left Japan the reasons that had led Stotsbashi to abdicate the Shiogoonate had been made public. It appears that the Prince of Tosa pressed upon Stotsbashi a memorial from a number of the most powerful Daimios, urging his retirement and a radical change in the Government of the country. After a good deal of resistance Stotsbashi tendered his resignation to the Mikado, and continued to hold office only until a new administration should be formed. A reaction in his favour, however, seemed to be taking place in Yedo, probably fanned by French influence. By this revolution the treaties of 1858 are technically rescinded, and the opening of the ports is involved in doubt. With Stotsbashi's abdication the French influence in Japan receives a blow; it was owing to the French Minister that his retirement was so long concealed. The exclusive contracts for docks, arsenals, and fleets are likely to be repudiated by the new Government, and Stotsbashi's private estate will have to satisfy the French claims of the adventurers in his service."

CHINA.

PEKING.

The N. C. Daily News publishes the following intelligence from Peking:—"We are authentically informed that on the 11th March the Nienfei still held the district round Ho-chien-foo, about 120 miles from Peking, and within a much shorter distance of Tientsin. A town in the neighbourhood was sacked, and the Jesuit mission destroyed; the priests escaping most narrowly. Prince Kung is said to have been named generalissimo of the five armies now in Chih-li; and troops leave Peking for the south daily, in large numbers. No alarm is felt, however, for the safety of the capital; and the bannermen, who were all under arms a month ago, are no longer seen in full armour in the streets. The courier with the English mail, leaving Peking on the 20th Feb., was stopped, robbed, and murdered by Nienfei."

A Peking correspondent writes:—"The 27th ult. was the day appointed for choosing a wife for the Emperor. A hundred and twenty virgins went into the palace the evening before, as candidates for this honour; and seven of the most eligible were retained for closer inspection. We have not yet been informed who is the fortunate one. The Dowager Empress decides, but the Emperor has the privilege of having 'a look see' for himself. The ages of the ladies vary from eleven to nineteen. The Emperor is now fourteen according to Chinese reckoning."

A Chinkiang correspondent writes, under date 21st March:—"The road between this port and Peking would seem to be open again. Native advices just received report the Nienfei to have retired to a point some four hundred li from the capital; exact locality not mentioned. Tse-kung-pao, Le-kung-poo, and the Governors of Ganhwuy, Kiangse, and Honan are said to have arrived at Peking with considerable bodies of troops for the protection of the Emperor; but there seems to be a tolerably decided opinion among well-informed natives that he has fled to Jeho, though his departure may have been kept tolerably secret. The Empress Regent appears to have administered a very severe rebuke to Le-Hung-chang, for the tardiness of his movements in succouring the Imperial throne in the hour of danger. He is evidently in disgrace, as Tse-kung-pao has been appointed Generalissimo of all the armies operating in the North. General Lew, one of the ablest of Le's officers, is said to have point-blank refused to march to the relief of Peking. This was partly from pique at not being fairly treated in a recent distribution of rewards, and partly from his quarrelling with Le on various grounds. Rumour has it that this officer has disappeared, and no one knows his whereabouts. It will go hard with him if he chances to fall into the hands of the Imperialists, and it will be a bad thing for the latter if so energetic and able (as Chinese Generals go) an officer, has turned rebel.

TIENTSIN.

From Tientsin we have advices to March 12. Mr. Dick, the Commissioner of Customs there, is about to be transferred to Foochow, and will be replaced at Tientsin by Mr. Hughes.

A Tientsin correspondent says:—"I have very little additional news to send you respecting the rebellion, beyond the fact that we hear, every now and then, of fights having taken place between the Imperialist and rebel force. On the afternoon of the 29th February the authorities reported the rebels as having begun to retreat to the south-west, and that it was their intention to withdraw at once most of the soldiers from the ramparts of Tientsin, in order to give confidence to the people of the city and suburbs. For some days past many small bodies of people who have fled from their homes, in consequence of the approach or proximity of the rebels, have been arriving in the Tientsin suburbs. The magistrate has been endeavouring to persuade them to return to their homes, telling them the rebels cannot move further north. There was a rumour, early on the 5th March, that a considerable body of rebels was at Shinchow, about 400 li from Tientsin, and in the evening the authorities stated that they had gone west and were now at Holuh (pronounced here Hwaeloo), a district city 711 li from Tientsin, situated on the ground route from Peking and Tientsin to Shansi, thereby preventing the merchants coming from Shansi to Tientsin.

"During the forenoon of the 10th March there were rumours current in the town that a large body of rebels were at the district cities of Poye and Le, distant west from Tientsin 360. It appears to me, from the rumours amongst the people and news received through the Yamuns, that the rebel forces continue to occupy the same ground which they did on the departure of the steamers Shanse and Yingtzefee on the 29th February, except that they have spread themselves further west to Hwaeloo city. The Chinese merchants distinctly state that the rebels still occupy the centre of this province. Lately, 3,500 mounted Mongols, under the command of Poyang-ye, son of Sangko-linsin, have been brought between the rebels and Tientsin. Nearly the whole body are mounted on camels, and great deeds are expected from them against the rebel cavalry. I am still of the opinion that the Imperial generals are only biding their time in attacking the rebels, and that the Imperial cause will come out in the end victorious. The rebels, in the meantime, are doing a great deal of harm to the country, and will do still more till they are put down."

Altogether the intelligence regarding the rebellion in the Northern provinces is, as usual, very conflicting. On the one side it is said that Imperial arms have proved too much for the rebels to face, and that they have retreated from their position near Paouting-foo in consequence; while, on the other hand, it is asserted that they have merely abandoned their position temporarily, probably as a manœuvre to attract Li's forces southward, and then make a forced countermarch upon the capital. With respect to the Nienfei rebellion, which it was stated by a contemporary Li had completely crushed out, an explanation of a somewhat plausible nature has been given in one of the local papers, to the effect that the men who compose the present rebel forces are chiefly Mahomedan, and that only a very few Nienfei are among their ranks. If this statement is true, it saves Li's reputation, but it is questionable whether there may not after all be very many more of the original Nienfei in the ranks of the rebels than is represented.

We hear that a French missionary gentleman, who was one of three who were taken by the rebels in the North, but at once released on their explaining who they were, stated in Tientsin that the rebels are probably only lying in wait for an opportunity of making a renewed attack. Their departure south may, therefore, only be a ruse, and it may turn out that they will make a detour, and come upon the capital after having attacked a portion of Li's army southwards.

CHINKIANG.

PERMISSION GRANTED TO WORK COAL MINES.

The following letter from the Chinkiang correspondent of the Shanghai Recorder, under the date of 19th March, conveys some important intelligence:—"At last something has been settled with regard to the great coal mine question which has so long occupied public attention. I am informed upon undoubted authority that the Viceroy has expressed his willingness to grant licences to Chinese to work the mines, and to employ foreigners to assist them to do so. It is a thoroughly Chinese way of doing the thing, but upon the whole perhaps it is the best that could have been settled upon. The first idea was to ask the Viceroy to grant the licences for working the mines direct to a foreign company; and this proposition was made by Mr. Consul Markham to the Taoutai, who promised to lay it before the Viceroy, and went up to Nanking with this object among others. On his return, as I am informed, he told Mr. Markham that Tseng-Kwo-Fan would not listen to the proposal in any form, and that it was useless to think any more about the matter. As it happened, however, that the Taoutai was only one day at Nanking, and only saw the Viceroy for a couple of hours, this did not seem very probable, and I imagine this, among other things, induced Mr. Markham to take further steps to have the matter laid before the Viceroy, with the result which I have above mentioned. I have no doubt of the advantageous effects which this will produce to the port of Chinkiang, and I look to its becoming an important trading emporium, notwithstanding the untoward result, so far as foreigners are concerned, which has attended it. The views which you recently expressed in a leader concerning the advantageous situation of this port as a place of trade are very just and thoroughly to the point; and I am glad to notice that you have pointed out the unjust and dangerous attempt which has been made by the Chinese to undermine the foreign trade in opium. The corollary which you draw from the incident, as to the gradual extinction of foreign trade if such practice were not checked, is, in my opinion, perfectly just; and I am disposed to attribute no little of the untoward result of the trade hitherto, so far as foreigners are concerned, to underhanded working on the part of the Chinese guilds, aided and abetted as they are by the local officials. It will be well that too great hopes should not be raised by the step which has been taken in opening these mines. Of course, some additional employment by Europeans will be afforded, but not for a very large number, and there is nothing to warrant the idea that Nanking and its neighbourhood will become a black diamond El-Dorado."

SHANGHAI.

Dates hence are to March 27.

The North China Daily News says:—"We hear of the presence of pirates rather uncomfortably close to Shanghai. After the White Adder had been got off and had come up to Shanghai, a boat was sent down to recover some anchors which had been left in the bed of the river at the Spit. Three Chinese boats, however, were already on the spot, who fired at the Shanghai boat and drove her back at her best speed.

"Sir E. Hornby is likely to return from his southern tour early in the week, and will, we presume, at once hear the long-deferred appeal against the judgment of the Hankow Consular Court, in the matter of Mr. Gordon's bankruptcy."

The following items are from the Recorder:—

We hear that Dow's Wharf has been sold to a Chinaman for the sum of tls. 6,000. The purchaser has, we understand, bought it on speculation, in the hope of better times. We heartily wish him joy of his bargain.

We regret to record the total wreck of the Mary Francis, Captain Thomas, 800 tons burthen, with coals from Cardiff, which struck on Friday, 20th March, at ten o'clock, upon the shoals near the Two Fathom and a Half Bank, which bears S.E. from the Lightship, on to which she was run to prevent her sinking in deep water, it having become at once obvious that this was the only course to adopt. The captain remained by her until Saturday evening, when, finding that she made so much water that it was hopeless to save her, he started for Shanghai on one of the pilot schooners, and was met by the Titan off the Beacon yesterday (22nd) morning, and came on to Shanghai in her to consult with his agents, the Borneo Company. No pilot was on board at the time of the accident, but one came on on Friday night or Saturday morning. Previous to the catastrophe it was blowing very severely, and every effort, such as showing blue lights, &c., was made to attract any pilot's attention, and the captain also offered some junks a reward if they could take him to a pilot. The Titan had been chartered to save what she could from the wreck. When the captain left there were twelve feet of water in the hold.

The Shanghai Evening Express gives currency to a rumour that the successorship to Mr. Winchester—who, we hear, leaves for home shortly—lies between Mr. Medhurst, of Hankow, and Mr. Markham, of Chinkiang; but as the former claims the post on the score of seniority, it is generally supposed Sir Rutherford Alcock will nominate him. The same paper remarks, "Landed property in Shanghai does not seem to have reached its lowest value as yet, for at Messrs Maclean, Thorburn and Co.'s sale on 23rd inst. 'Alpha Farm' on the Soochow Creek, comprising seventeen mow of land, well laid out and planted with native and foreign trees and shrubs, with dwelling house, servants' offices, stables and farm steading, only realised Tls. 2,300, or say at the rate of Tls. 135 a mow for the land alone, all its improvements going for nothing. Why, about two years ago, when things were supposed to be at their worst 'Trefancha Farm,' in the same locality, with only twelve mow of land, realised half as much again! At the same sale some twenty-five mow of land at Sicawei, well raised and suitable for building, only sold at Tls. 6 a mow, and for a lot on the Woosung-road and Concession lot 44 at Hankow, there were no bidders at any price."

HONG KONG.

From Hong Kong the French mail brings advices to the 31st March, six days later. There is, however, no news of any interest.

With reference to the rebellion in the North, the Daily Press remarks, the present outbreak is not distinguished by any more political characteristics than those which have preceded it. The insurgents had not been overcome, and were still occupying the country to the south of Tientsin, of which they had already made themselves masters in the beginning of February. Here they were supposed to menace both Tientsin and the capital, but they seemed indisposed to carry their menaces into execution. They were reported as ravaging this or that district, and sacking this or that town, but their only object seems to have been plunder. China, in fact, suffers just now from brigandage on an enormous scale, but its Government is not threatened by any rebellion.

Some interest has been excited in Hong Kong by the publication of an anonymous reply to Messrs. Jardine, Matheson, and Co.'s recent memorial, or, at least, to that paragraph in it relating to the opium trade. The reply is in the form of a lengthy document, purporting to be addressed to the Governor, and the China Mail surmises that it emanates from either a medical man or a missionary. The Mail first quotes the offending paragraph in Messrs. Jardine's memorial, and then goes on to say:—

"Their opponent opens with some rather hard terms of abuse; 'self complacency,' 'superciliousness,' 'rashness' and 'ignorance,' being, he says, combined in the foregoing paragraph. He then goes on to consider the assertions seriatim, and firstly denies that the question has been set at rest in favour of the use of opium since 1860. An impartial consideration of the two assertions obliges us to admit that he is justified in his denial, in so far as the reports of the medical missions at Canton, Shanghai, Peking and Hankow for 1864, 1865, and 1866, which we have now before us, all lay immense stress on the alarming increase of opium smoking and the sad results therefrom. He calls upon Messrs. Jardine and Matheson to substantiate their assertions, and touches upon the ignorance of native life which prevails amongst many who pronounce opinion. He quotes the evidence against the opium trade laid before the House of Commons, and adduces high medical authority against the use of opium in any form whatever, except medicinally. After all, the unknown memorialist omits what we should take to be the strongest evidence in favour of his own view—the unanimous condemnation of the use of opium by all Chinese officials who hold any position as conscientious and honest men. And this would seem to be the greatest stumbling-block in the way of accepting the dictum that the use of opium is harmless. The respondent (we must use some term for the anonymous memorialist) disposes of the arguments in which opium is likened to tobacco or ardent spirits, by showing that in the former case a decided injury results from any use of the drug, while a moderate indulgence in the two latter is no practically injurious; and he makes a strong point of Dr. Medhurst's testimony respecting the unconquerable craving which attends the use of opium even in the smallest quantity—a craving not superinduced by a moderate use of tobacco or alcohol.

"We have not space to detail at length all the arguments used against the assertions of Messrs. Jardine, Matheson, and Co., but suffice it to say that the arguments deserve consideration. In common fairness, however, an opportunity must be afforded to Messrs. Jardine and Matheson to vindicate assertions which it is very probable they little expected to find attacked so vigorously or so publicly. We trust they will see the necessity of thoroughly ventilating the question, rather as a point of honour than of interest, and we reserve a more particular consideration of the arguments used by our northern contemporary's anonymous correspondent. When the largest firm in China stands out broadly and distinctly in its individual character, in an effort to influence the future course of foreign policy here, its action becomes a matter of public importance, and of public criticism, especially when, as in this case, its private interests are very intimately involved in possible results. The question at issue is that (to use Messrs. Jardine and Matheson's words) 'The use of opium is not a curse, but a comfort and benefit to the hard-working Chinese." Most of us know what Coleridge and De Quincey have said about it; but they were not Chinese, nor are they likely to be quoted as evidence on the point. But there can be no doubt that there is a remarkable difference between those who import opium and those who are not in the trade, as to its physical and moral effect on the native race. The anonymous contributor is not, we suspect, a dealer in opium. We should like to know with what authority he speaks, for the value of his argument is somewhat diminished by the absence of any signature to a production which is published as the effusion of an individual."

The China Mail remarks that although a good deal has been said and written about the sanitary advantages which would result to colonists if the south side of the island could be made a place of common resort, nothing has been done, and submits two propositions regarding the question:—"The first is that some party or parties, gifted with a fair share of dollars and a moderate amount of faith, should erect at the most eligible point between Stanley and Aberdeen an unpretentious but commodious bungalow, which should contain a public room and some four or five private rooms for the convenience of visitors—the person in charge being able to supply wines and stores at reasonable rates. A bar for "single drinks" might or might not be added, as found advisable, but the characteristic of the establishment should be rather that of a pic-nic house than of a liquor store. There are many who believe that such a house which might be constructed at small outlay would, in the long run, pay handsomely. To it might be added grounds of as large extent as possible, in which nature might be a little aided by the erection of summer houses and seats, but in the main left undisturbed. This finishes the first suggestion.

"The second and by no means unimportant proposal is that a tramway be laid down from the central Praya to Stanley. Were such an establishment as that we have described really started, the Government might fairly be presumed to render some assistance, and so lighten the expense to its projectors, the more so as a substitute so comfortable and speedy for the ever-bumping chair would find immense favour and materially raise the value of the land in the vicinity of the other side. The sanguine projector of this tramway, however, does not rest here. He assumes that in process of time it would become fashionable to have country houses exposed to the pure sea-borne sweep of the S.E. monsoons, and away from the parbaked city during the summer months. A telegraph along the line of tramway would therefore become a necessity, whereby the taipan could, in cases of need, transmit instantaneous orders to his clerks who were undergoing the roasting process in town. We are not quite sanguine about the said telegraph—unless indeed the Government aided or bore the cost primarily. But the Bungalow and horse tramway seem feasible. Whether other people will think so we can't say, but may be permitted to hope they will."

From various sources we (Daily Press) gather the following particulars relating to the pirates of the Canton river. On or about the 20th instant, a junk coming from Canton to Hong Kong, laden with 1,100 piculs of bricks, was attacked and captured in Deep Bay. Early on the morning of the 24th instant, information was received to the effect that a junk proceeding from Hong Kong to Canton was attacked the day before and plundered of 2,300 taels in silver. On the same morning, viz., 24th, Her Majesty's gunboats Bustard and Bouncer left this port and proceeded up the river, in order if possible to destroy the nest of pirates. Further information must have been obtained, for on the evening of Tuesday, the 24th inst., Inspector Daly left the water-police station with despatches, having instructions to find the gunboats and deliver the letters. The inspector arrived at Castle Peak Bay about one o'clock on Wednesday morning, but in consequence of the tide being contrary, and there being no wind, anchored for the night. The next morning at daylight, the tide being favourable and there being a light wind, he proceeded through Urmston-road to Deep Bay, where he found the gunboats and delivered his despatches. Inspector Daly, with a laudable view of discovering some of the piratical junks, went round the Lintin Island, and thence to Cum-sing-moon Bay, landing at various places, but without discovering anything that might lead to the capture of the Celestial buccaneers. The inspector then went down to Macao, arriving there on Thursday afternoon, and was towed from that place to Hong Kong by one of the Hong Kong, Canton, and Macao Company's steamers, arriving here yesterday morning. The junk laden with bricks, which was attacked about the 20th inst., has been discovered in the Canton river, with seven men on board, all of them seriously wounded by stinkpots. We further learn that on Thursday morning last a junk was arrested in Macao by the Portuguese authorities, with regard to whose piratical character there could be no question. Last night the two above-named gunboats returned without having accomplished anything, being unable to take advantage of the information conveyed to them by Inspector Daly, through their running short of coals."

CECIL C. SMITH, Registrar-General.

Registrar-General's Office, Victoria, Hong Kong, 29th February, 1868.

We understand that the steamer Yesso, some months ago chartered by Messrs. Douglas, Lapraik, and Co., has been purchased by that firm for about $90,000.

The China Mail publishes the following letter, sent to Messrs. Walsh, Hall and Co., Yokohama, by Capt. Joseph Thomas, giving an account of the loss of the Russian steamer Wolga :—

MIAKA-SIMA GROUPE, March 12, 1868.

Gentlemen,—I regret having to communicate to you the foundering of the Russian steamer Wolga, belonging to Messrs. Landstein and Co. of Hong Kong, on the evening of the 7th inst., when laying to in a heavy gale of wind, 30 miles W.S.W. of here. We landed on Sunday 10 persons (my wife and child included), the other boat and 13 persons are missing ; there were two Englishmen in the other boat. I hope they have reached one of the other islands. This is the first moderate day since, and the authorities here are going to send a boat to Cape Idsu to convey this. I hope you will be able to send a vessel to take us from here soon, as we fell very much for the want of animal food, which we cannot get here. Also we have no clothing, only as we stand ; all the fishermen here are on the lookout for the other boat. I hope to find some tidings of her by the time of our deliverance.—I am, gentlemen, your obedient and humble servant, J. THOMAS, late Master of Russian steamer Wolga.

LABUAN.

A letter from Labuan dated 26th March gives some interesting particulars of the progress of the colony. The writer says: —"When Governor Pope Hennessy began the Albert Wharf, the market, the school, the supply of fresh water, and the other public works, there were a few of the not over-active officials who went about whispering—'Where will he get the money to do all this ?' The Governor soon answered the question by passing a tobacco farm ordinance and a pawnbroking farm ordinance. These have sold remarkably well ; indeed, his tobacco farm is now twice as valuable as all the farmer taxes put together, except the opium ; and it is well known now that these new taxes will not only pay for all the public works he has in hand, but will leave a handsome balance in the local treasury. His tobacco tax is not heavy, being only ten cents a catty—and twenty cents on cigars. If you had a tobacco farm at Singapore, and it bore the same proportion to your spirit farm that it does here to our spirit farm, Governor Ord might still further increase his surplus by about twenty thousand dollars a month.

"Within the last few days we had a visit from the Governor at Tanjong Kubong. He went into the levels, worked some coal with his own hands, looked through all the account-books in the office, and inspected everything narrowly. So far our works are well maintained ; but then, unfortunately, the want of money prevents the manager from employing anything like the proper number of coal-hewers. In truth, only for the indomitable energy of our new Governor, and the confidence we all have in him, I believe this end of the island would have been at a standstill long since.

"A good indication of our trading prosperity was shown last week by the establishment of a Chamber of Commerce in the town of Victoria ; and the first step has been also taken to start a local bank in Labuan. That they are both wanted is evident from the fact that our imports now are over £120,000 and our exports over £100,000. The Governor has taken a step in the right direction also by founding a hospital for the poor. The Chinese and the respectable Klings have over and over again asked for something of the sort and offered to support it handsomely ; but as the only poor people here were Chinese, or Klings, or Malays, the European officials cared very little about it. Governor Hennessy, however, met them at once half way, and on condition that the inhabitants bear half the cost, which they do most willingly, he undertakes to bear the other half. He is also taking steps to light the town, with oil lamps at present, and gas when the coal company revives. You probably know more of our real chances of revival than we do ourselves ; but the spirit and success shown in the government of the colony at this present time fill us all with confidence even at this end of the island."

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

—o—

SINGAPORE.

The Straits Times has the following remarks on the proceedings of the meeting at which the Straits Settlements Association was organised :—

"At first sight the impression on one's mind on reading about the above meeting is, that it smacks somewhat of Fenianism, and that those who took part in it have very nearly rendered themselves liable to the pains and penalties of treason-felony.

Or, if this is too strong language to use, at all events the first impression is apt to be that the association has been formed with hostile intentions against the Government or its head. But on reconsideration this will be found a mistaken view. As from the constitution of a Crown colony Government no representative institution is possible to give effect to public opinion; and as a strong public opinion exists in the colony, with decided views founded on practical knowledge, such an association appears to be the only efficient means of supplying the want of representation in the Government. The sole object of the association is the commercial prosperity of the colony. A general belief exists that this has been endangered by our new Government, partly by its actual legislation and partly by unnecessary expenditure of revenue. It lies wholly in the hands of Government to dissipate this conviction by disproving it, and so to conduct the administration of affairs as to render the existence of the association nugatory and superfluous. No Government need, therefore, entertain any objection to the formation of such an association; but on the contrary it ought to be welcomed, as it may often have it in its power to strengthen the hands of the local Executive very materially; as, for example, in case of any difference of opinion with the noble Secretary of State for the Colonies, on any such such questions as military expenditure and a gambling farm. A struggle is bound to take place on these and other points very soon between the local Government and the Colonial-office, and if the former is supported by a unanimous expression of opinion on the part of the public it may make all the difference in the result.

"We are of opinion, however, that the association should have originated here instead of in London, and that that in London should be subordinate to, and act as the mouthpiece of the Straits one, to enlighten the Secretary of State by arguments, facts, and figures, as to the wants and wishes of the Settlements. There are always imperceptible changes going on in the state of affairs, and people at home are apt to get behind the age, while those on the spot are likely to be far better judges of the local situation."

The Straits Settlements Association in London has considered it necessary to address a letter to the Duke of Buckingham, containing an elaborate argument against the apprehended intention of Governor Sir H. Ord to impose additional taxation.

Commercial Report.

YOKOHAMA.—The revival of business in the import market had not been checked since the departure of the English mail, but there was no improvement to note in prices. Business had been almost entirely confined to Yarn and Grey Shirtings, and transactions, particularly in the former, considerable. No. 16-24 had improved about $2 per picul, while of the higher counts 28 32 had rather declined, and 38-42 was out of demand. Large sales had been made both for arrival and on the spot. Quotations were 26-24, $40 to 42.50; 28-32, $43.50 to 45; 38-42, nominally $40. In Plain Cottons, 8¼ Grey Shirtings had been most asked for, and at $2.80 to 2.85 a fair amount of sales had been effected. The market closed much firmer, and it was rather difficult to purchase at the latter rates, holders being more confident. All other descriptions of Cotton Goods were quite neglected, and with the exception of S. S. Camlets, for which there had been a slight inquiry, the same may be said of Woollens. The demand even for Black Velvets and Blankets had subsided, and quotations were more or less nominal. In the export market Silk remained as last advised; the only noticeable feature since being the purchase of an "extra fine" parcel Oshiu at $900. Arrivals had been scanty, and the market was swept quite clean of all fine silk. The remaining stock, computed at 350 piculs, consisted of common and inferior sorts, which holders were anxious to sell, but foreigners by no means so desirous of purchasing. Settlements were estimated at 300 piculs. In Tea the demand for the American market still continued, and fully 1,500 piculs had been settled. But little fine Tea was to be had, the natives mixing it with their common and otherwise most unsaleable sorts. The purchases had been in medium and good medium. Prices were very irregular, but closed a little firmer. A few parcels, finest to choice, were held for sale far above the quotations current ($35 to $36), without any buyers. Arrivals had been very small, on account of the disturbed state of the country, and had not exceeded 400 piculs. Stocks were accordingly reduced to, say 1,500 piculs, purchasable Tea.

SHANGHAI.—There had been some excitement in the market for Imported Manufactures, and rather large settlements had been made at slightly advancing rates. 8¼ lbs. Grey Shirtings were worth tls. 2.25 cash, and tls. 2.27 for arrival. Stocks small. The Andreas sailed for London on the 22nd March, carrying 980,980 lbs. Black, and 66,656 lbs. Green Tea, in all 1,047,637 lbs., 51.97 piculs Waste Silk, and 365 piculs Japan Tea. The following are the closing quotations:—Grey Shirtings: 5⅛ catty, tls. 1.9.5 to 1.9.8; ditto, 6¼ cy., on spot, tls. 2.2 to 2.2.5. White Shirtings: 64 reed, tls. 2.8.5 to 2.4. T-Cloths: 36 inches, tls. 1.7 to 1.9.5. Long Ells: H H Scarlet, tls. 6.5; ditto, Assorted, tls. 6.6 to 6.7; ditto, C P H Scarlet, tls. 6.6; ditto, Assorted, tls. 6.6 to 6.7. Spanish Stripes: Elephant, tls. 0.6.2 to 0.6.5; ditto, Tiger, tls. 0.7 to 0.7.5. Camlets: SS, tls. 12.5 to 18; ditto, SSS, tls. 10 to 10.5. Lead: tls. 5.6 to 5.8. Iron: Nail Rod, tls. 2.8 to 2.8.5; ditto, Bar, tls. 2.8 to 2.8.5.

HONG KONG.—The market especially for imported goods has remained quiet, with a very small business doing since the departure of the English mail. This is due in some measure to the occurrence of a religious ceremony, very strictly carried out, especially by the wealthier class of the Chinese, of visiting the graves of their ancestors. This always has a very marked effect on the market, on account of the absence of a large and important element of the native commercial community. The position of the market was much the same as that advised by the last English mail. Holders were very firm, and business of any amount would no doubt help prices up slightly. The majority of the business done had been on the basis of $2.90 to $3 for 8¼ lbs. Grey Shirtings. Some few damaged goods had been offered at auction, and fetched very good prices. The only sales reported include 500 pieces White Shirtings at $2, and 19 bales 16/24 Yarn at $120. There had been some speculative purchases of 7 lbs. T-Cloths by foreigners, amounting to about 9,000 pieces, at $2.80 to $2.85, and a few Mexican chop at $2.50. Raw Cotton continued very dull, with little or no demand. About 450 bales Bombay Staple had been placed at $17 to $19. Beyond these sales there was nothing doing in Produce.

SHIPPING REPORT.

SHANGHAI.

Phœnix, British ship, left Milford on October 6th; strong gales until clear of the Channel. Sighted St. Agnes October 8th; fine weather to the Equator, which was crossed on November the 7th. Light winds to the meridian of the Cape; strong westerly breeze from thence to St. Paul's Island, which was sighted January 1st. Made Sandalwood Island February 1st. Light winds from thence until received pilot on board. March 17th, at daylight, Saddles bearing S.W., distance about 12 miles. Arrived at Woosung March 19th. Unable to cross the Bar, draught of ship 20 feet. Spoke the following vessels:—December 12th, Lubeck ship, China, from Cardiff for Rangoon, and barque Pampero, from Hamburg for Shanghai.

The British ship Adelina left Penarth Roads on November 2nd. In lat 30.30 N., long. 19.30 W., experienced a very heavy N.W. gale; lost quarter boat and part of top-gallant bulwarks. Had very light winds inside the Cape de Verde Islands. Crossed the equator on December 6th, and passed the Meridian of Greenwich January 4th. Came through the Straits of Ombay on the 13th of February, and through the Gillolo passage on the 19th of same month. Light variable winds to the Pellews, thence strong E.N.E. and light Southerly winds to the Lewchews and Mino-Sima Islands. In coming between these islands had strong S.W. winds with much rain, afterwards very variable winds and weather. Off the Saddles strong N.E. winds.

HONG KONG.

The British ship John Norman, from New York on the 30th October, reports having experienced severe gales of winds from the S.E. and S.W. on the 2nd November, which lasted for two days. Passed the line in the Atlantic on the 6th December in 27 W. long., after which had moderate weather to the Cape, excepting in one gale, in which a good many sails were lost. Crossed the meridian of the Cape on the 7th January, in 39 S. lat., after which had strong N.E. gales for several days. Passed Sandalwood Island on the 14th Feb., came through Ombay Passage on the following day, and from thence through Bouro and Giliolo Passages. On the 19th February, when becalmed off the Catherine Islands, the vessel was found to be drifting in shore; the small anchor was then let go with fifty fathoms of cable, Catherine Islands at the time bearing E. by N., one mile distant; at 8 A.M., a light breeze came from the N.E., and the vessel was kept away to go to the westward of the island. About 10 A.M. same day passed over a rock close under the ship's bottom, which gave nine fathoms by the lead when thrown, immediately the rock was seen; after this steered north and found much deeper water. This rock is not laid down in the charts. Catherine Island is S.E. by E., and Shangee Island N.E. The John Norman spoke the following vessels, February 12th, lat. 14 S., lon. 115 E.: Golden Spur, London to this port, 84 days out. On the 24th February, British ship Leander, London to Shanghai, 80 days out; same day saw the Hamburg barque Catherina, Hamburg to Hong Kong, 117 days out. February 25th, the barque Charmiam, Sunderland to Hong Kong, 108 days out.

A GOLD CURRENCY FOR INDIA.—The Indian Currency Commission, as was stated in the House of Commons by Mr. White, the member for Brighton, some short time ago, has concluded its deliberations, and no doubt has sent in a voluminous report to the Government of India, yet nothing has been done, as is acknowledged by Sir Stafford Northcote. Fourteen months have elapsed since the inquiry was concluded; in the meantime the cry among the European community of India for a lega tender gold currency has almost died out, and the subject apparently reverts to its old phase of one too difficult to grapple with and legislate upon. During all this long period of delay, more gold is continuing to be added to the general stock of the world, and it knocks occasionally at the door of India as a half-obtrusive or unwelcome guest, simply because the Government cannot, or will not, see that the longer the free circulation of gold is denied to India, the more will the commercial and general progress of the country be retarded. The preponderance of enlightened financial and commercial opinion in India is undoubtedly in favour of the gold currency, and the native prejudice in favour of the silver rupee is described as not altogether insurmountable. Why, then, it may be asked, should this important question be allowed to lag and drop behind? To the Indian Government it must be palpable that where money has to be distributed over such vast territories as are comprised within our Indian possessions, a currency more portable and easy of transmission than silver is a great want. The recent attempt to make the English sovereign pass for ten rupees in India having apparently failed, it now only remains for the Government either to introduce a ten-rupee gold piece, under that or some distinctive title, making such coin a legal tender conjointly with silver, or to abandon the matter altogether. It has been suggested that such coins should be of pure gold, as in the days of Akbar and his successors, down to those of Lord Cornwallis; and, though the absence of alloy might be a disadvantage as regards the abrasion or friction of the coins, a pure coinage would be highly prized by the native portion of the community; or there might be a comparatively small admixture of alloy, in place of following to the letter the English standard of one-twelfth alloy to eleven-twelfths pure.

LONDON, WEDNESDAY, MAY 6, 1868.

THE TELEGRAPH TO INDIA.

NOTHING further has transpired regarding the renewed effort recently made to procure from Government some recognition of the necessity of improved means of telegraphic communication with India. The subject still continues to be discussed, and now the Ministerial crisis is to all appearance tided over for the present we may hope that Her MAJESTY'S Ministers will find time to attend to it. Mr. CYRUS W. FIELD, the eminent American electrician, has written to The Times to express his surprise at the indifference of the Government and people to the connection of England with India, China, and Australia, by reliable submarine cables. After adverting to the splendid success achieved in the laying of the Atlantic cable, he goes on to show that the twenty-four submarine lines now in operation are all earning good dividends, and continues :—"When England "shall be connected by direct cables with her great Indian "possessions, and also with China and Australia, we shall have, "I have no doubt, to record another dividend-paying line, quite "as remunerative as the Atlantic, if not more so." Our Government can now, in case of emergency, send instructions in a few minutes to our representatives in the United States or Canada, while days, if not weeks, must pass before they can exchange communications with India. "I see no reason," Mr. FIELD says, "why a year should elapse without efficient submarine cables "being laid from Suez to Bombay. It can be done ; it ought "to be done ; and I believe it would yield a good return upon "the capital invested."

The proposal of Sir R. A. GLASS to lay a submarine cable between Falmouth and Gibraltar, and thence to Malta, appears to have been quite lost sight of. From Malta a message would reach Alexandria by the existing route, and the Pasha of EGYPT has offered to place the line up the Valley of the Nile under the management of an English company, while Sir R. A. GLASS is of opinion that there would be no difficulty in reaching Kurrachee by laying a submarine cable (starting from the terminus of the Egyptian line) round the Arabian coast, touching at Aden and Muscat. We should thus have a line by which it is asserted that a message could be received from India in half an hour. Too much stress has been laid on the argument that a chain of submarine lines would obviate the risk of interruption from war or political complications that must exist with a land line traversing several continental countries. The supposed immunity from interruptions of this nature is, indeed, quite a fallacy ; for, in time of war, the Mediterranean cables might easily be fished up and cut. A far more cogent argument against continental land lines was lately brought forward in the Money Market Review, a writer in which journal reminds us that the French Director-General of Telegraphs openly claims the right, not only of keeping copies of all messages passing through the French system, but also of refusing to forward any of which he may disapprove, and that he actually sends copies of our Indian telegrams to such bureaux as he considers will be likely to take an interest in the subject-matter thereof.

ADVICES from India received by last mail announce that the question of granting a guarantee on the capital required for the Euphrates Valley Railway was engaging the attention of the Indian Government and the commercial community, in consequence of Mr. W. P. ANDREW having officially brought to the notice of the GOVERNOR-GENERAL a correspondence on the subject between himself and Her MAJESTY'S Secretaries of State for Foreign Affairs and for India.

THE MAIL SERVICE.

IF the outward mail service works as well as the inward, the directors of the P. and O. Company deserve to be congratulated in the degree of success they have so far achieved. The mail delivered on Monday last was the fourth in succession under the new contract that has arrived punctually according to the time-table ; and although we must of course expect occasional variations with the changes of the monsoon, this admirable beginning must be accepted as a guarantee that, in the absence of any unforeseen or unusually detrimental circumstances, the company is fully equal to the efficient performance of the task it has undertaken. The regular departure of the mails on Friday, and arrival on Monday, seems to give general satisfaction. At present the French service sometimes clashes rather awkwardly with our own, but this inconvenience will probably not be of long duration, for it is announced that the French Company is about to raise additional capital for the purpose of extending its operations in India and China, and whatever change may be impending will doubtless be framed with a due regard to the working of the P. and O. service. It is unfortunate that, although the mails have so far been delivered in London with unvarying punctuality, the benefit of this is in a great measure lost to the public by some mismanagement on the part of the Post-office, by which the delivery of the letters is unreasonably retarded. Thus, the last inward mail reached London considerably before the appointed hour on Sunday, yet the letters and papers were distributed by instalments, and many were not delivered until midday on Monday. This delay is surely as unnecessary as it is vexatious.

FRANCE AND JAPAN.

THE news of the massacre of the French boat's crew at Hiogo created an immense sensation in France, and, until the receipt of a telegram announcing that reparation had been made, there were considerable apprehensions of war. Orders were at once sent to the steam frigate Minerva, stationed at Reunion and Madagascar, and the iron-clad corvette Belliqueuse, now in the Pacific, to proceed to Yokohama to reinforce the naval division in China and Japan waters. The Patrie had an article in which it remarked, "Owing to the foresight of the Emperor's Government, our naval division in the Japanese waters now consists of the steam frigates Junon, Minerve, and Venus, the iron-clad corvette Belliqueuse, the steam corvettes Dupleix and Laplace, and the despatch-vessels Monge and Forfait. Moreover, the French admiral is authorised to avail himself of our establishment in Cochin China for all the resources of which he may stand in need, and particularly to take there as many marines as he may want. France, therefore, without having made any extraordinary armaments, and merely from the result of able combinations, finds herself at this moment mistress of considerable forces in Japan—forces sufficient for the protection of her national interests and the necessities of her policy in the extreme East." The Patrie also published an authoritative denial to a statement that the French military mission in Japan had taken part with the Daimios against the SHIOGOON. It now seems to be the general opinion that ample atonement has been made, and that peaceful relations will be maintained.

Our Paris correspondent says :—

"The semi-official statement in the Patrie has no doubt been induced by complaints made in the press that France had been of late ill-represented in Japan, and one of the results of its publication is a cry of coming hostilities in that quarter of the world.

"There is uncertainty here about what has become of Colonel Chanoine and his contingent. One party says that the colonel and his men were cut to pieces at the battle of Osaka ; another that the little army took care of itself somewhere in the neighbourhood of Yedo. Certain writers are very angry that the authorities here in Paris do not clear up the point, and one writer says :—'If Colonel Chanoine and his men still exist, they may have realised the project of recommencing the civil war.'

"The late despatch, by way of Kiachta, announcing that twenty Japanese had been decapitated, and an indemnity of 750,000 francs paid, for the murder of some French subjects, gave much satisfaction, and the new Government is patted on the back with much condescension. The facts are evidently (part of them avowedly) taken from the London and China Telegraph, but the comments are purely French, and puzzling in the extreme. Perhaps some of the writers did not quite understand what they were writing about."

THE AUSTRIAN EXPEDITION TO THE EAR EAST.

THE arrangements for the Austrian expedition to the Far East are at length complete. It will consist of the frigates Danube and Friedrich, and will sail next month, under the command of Rear-Admiral Petz. Consuls for Shanghai and Yedo, with a staff of interpreters, &c., will proceed overland, and join the expedition at Singapore. Treaties are to be concluded with Siam and Cochin China, as well as China and Japan, and the expedition will proceed from the latter country to Chili and other South American States. The following details are from our own correspondent :—

It is wonderful to think of the many difficulties that have been purposely or unintentionally thrown in the way of the long-projected Austrian Expedition to the Far East, and now again it has been subjected to the rigorous ordeal of the financial part of the question, from the first stage of which it has happily escaped to the surface. The subject of the latest difficulty was to solve the problem of the proportion of the expenses to be borne by the two Treasuries, for though Hungary has an equal interest in the expected advantages to be derived from the opening of trade with the East, her Minister of Finances flatly refused to bear one-half of the expense, and would only consent to pay a quarter, that being the proportion that Hungary has taken over of the Austrian national debt. A deputation, consisting of Ministerial Councillor Dr. von Scherzer and Captain Wipplinger, of the Imperial navy, was sent by the Minister for Commerce at Vienna to negotiate with the Hungarian Minister of Finance at Ofen-Pesth, and the result was the agreement to pay a fixed sum of 130,000 florins, Austria proper bearing all the other expenses. That part of the question being thus settled, the next step was to select a leader or commander-in-chief. It was originally intended to appoint Vice-Admiral Tegethoff to the command, and that officer would have readily undertaken the responsibility of the mission, but, having lately been appointed to an important function at home, he could not absent himself for two years—that is the period the expedition is estimated to last—without prejudice to the service. Baron Wullenstorff, of Novara memory, would gladly again have taken charge of the Embassy, but he is incapacitated from doing so, though more from ill health than old age, and the chief command is given to Rear-Admiral Petz. Two Consuls are to be sent out with the expedition —one for Shanghai and the other for Yedo. Dr. Von Scherzer, the historiographer of the Novara expedition, goes out as Consul-General, and is to organise the Consulates in the East, residing either at Shanghai or Yedo, as he may deem most useful for the interests of Austria. The second has not yet been appointed, but he will be a Hungarian learned in the law, as the Consuls will have judicial duties to perform, as now exercised in the Levant. There will be further sent out two Chancelliers-de-Consulat, a Secretary of Legation, and an Attaché—the two latter for the purpose of drawing up the international treaties, and two interpreters will be engaged at Singapore. It is considered an important improvement of the original programme that the expedition will be accompanied by no less than eight commercial gentlemen, three of whom will be Hungarians. On the other hand, the scientific department will be probably abandoned, as the time will not allow much to be done in the way of observations and mensuration.

The vessels selected for the service are the steam frigate Donau or Danube, and the steam corvette Friedrich, which are now getting ready for sea at Pola, and are under orders to sail from Trieste at the end of June, in the hope they will arrive at Singapore in four months. The civilians will leave Trieste on the 1st of August by the overland mail and meet the ships at Singapore in October. After concluding in the first instance treaties of commerce with Siam and Cochin China, the squadron will proceed to Tientsin, and endeavour to conclude the treaty with China before the end of this year, in which case they will go on at once to Japan. Some of the commercial gentlemen will remain for some time in China and again join the expedition in Japan, either at Yedo or Nagasaki as may be agreed upon.

After the successful termination of the mission to the East the expedition will cross over to South America, in order to negotiate similar treaties with Chili, Uruguay, and Paraguay, and then return after an absence of two years, if all goes well, to Trieste after a circumnavigation of the whole globe. The total expense of the expedition is estimated at between 520,000 and 550,000 florins. The foregoing gives a description of the present position of the affair according to the latest accounts received from Vienna, but I should be unwilling to undertake a guarantee that all the difficulties are overcome, and that the expedition will really start at the time appointed. On the contrary, reasoning from analogy with the past, there is much room to doubt even now if it will not be needful to postpone it till next year, or even sine die; for it has still to pass the double ordeal of asking for the consent and approbation of the House of Commons of Austria and of that of Hungary, and the jealousy existing between those two august assemblies is at present strongly excited by various differences of opinion and policy, so that they by no means present a pattern of harmony and brotherly affection.

SOME further details as to the recent progress of the Suez Canal Works have just been published. It appears that in the month ending March 15 the total extraction of earth amounted to 1,554,630 cubic metres, as compared with 1,466,428 cubic metres in the month ending February 15, and 1,130,386 in the month ending January 15. The quantity of earth remaining to be extracted, March 15, 1868, was estimated at 36,005,131 cubic metres. It is now calculated by the believers in the enterprise that the canal will be completed at the close of 1869.

THE MONT CENIS ROUTE.

We learn from Florence that on the 1st inst. the Franco-Italian Commissioners completed their examination of the Mont Cenis Railway, and authorised its being opened for goods traffic for a fortnight prior to the opening for passengers. On the return journey of the Commissioners from Susa to San Michel the time occupied was 5h. 30min., including 1h. 15min. stoppages. The average running speed was about twelve miles an hour. The Times, correspondent says :—"I learn from Mont Cenis that the trial trains began to run some days since between St. Michel and Susa. One engine, with a load of 25 tons, made the journey to Susa on the 20th of April, returning the following day. On the 23rd another engine performed the double journey from St. Michel to Susa and back (96 miles) on the same day, running the 48 miles in five and a-half hours, including an hour stoppages on the road. I am assured that the working of the engines was very satisfactory. The Government inspectors were expected on the line at the end of last month, and if they found all the necessary arrangements as to stock and stations sufficiently complete, no doubt was entertained that they would fix a day for the opening of the line for public traffic."

Continental Intelligence.

HAMBURG, May 5.

The Austrian expedition to the Far East has now arrived at such a stage of forwardness as to be ready for constitutional discussion by the two Parliaments of Austria Proper and Hungary. Herr von Gorove, the Minister for Commerce at Ofen-Pesth, has intimated at Vienna that the former offer of a fixed sum of 130,000 florins is withdrawn, and that Hungary will pay thirty per cent. of the expenses, but expressing a wish not to be called on for more than 100,000 florins this year. The despatch mentions the unanimity of all parties as to the value of the expedition, and the important benefits likely to be derived from it; and deduces from this that as the quota of the expenses cannot be calculated by the proportionate numbers of the population, but solely by the power of exporting goods suitable for sale in the East, it is but reasonable that Hungary should have to bear a proportionately smaller share than the more commercial half of the empire; and therefore, with a proper respect for the dignity of the Hungarian Crown, the Government of that kingdom are ready to abide by their present offer. The Austrian Government are now engaged in drawing up a Bill on the subject, to be immediately brought before Parliament as urgent, and proposing to grant a credit for the larger moiety of the expenses—because required for the fitting out of the squadron—as a supplementary addition to the Budget of 1868.

Another piece of Austrian news is the failure of the "First Export and Import Company" at Vienna, which was established not more than a couple of years ago with a great flourish of trumpets, and which I reported at the time in one of my letters in your columns. This unfortunate affair may interest many of your readers in the Far East, where several agencies were established. In the balance-sheet filed in the Court of Bankruptcy at Vienna, the debts and liabilities of the company are specified and amount to 446,268 florins; whilst the assets—some of which, moreover, are doubtful—are only 219,546 florins, showing a deficit of 226,000 florins. The managing director was a Mr. S. Auspitzer, and the other members of the board were, A. Wessenberg, C. A. Kohl, Felix Reuterer, Caspar Aufreiter, and J. Grillmayer.

In the North German Federal Parliament Count Bismark has been defeated for the first time. He proposed to contract a Federal loan for ten millions of dollars for naval purposes, and more especially for hurrying on the defences and arsenals at the future two great naval dockyards at Jahde on the North Sea coast and at Kiel in the Baltic. Parliament, however, refused to make any debts, and as the Budget for the army and navy for the present year has been passed some months ago, orders are already given for the greatest economy in both branches of the service. In the army fifteen men in every battalion are to be released from duty with their corps and permitted to return to their homes on furloughs of uncertain duration, though they are of course still liable to be recalled to active duty in case their services are required on a sudden emergency. In the naval department similar measures are being taken; no more expensive Konig Wilhelms are to be ordered in England, one thousand seamen are discharged, the works at Jahde and Kiel, commenced so energetically, are discontinued, and the proposed expedition to the Far East is abandoned for this year, so that the inhabitants of Formosa may for the present sleep in tranquillity, without fear of a sudden coup de main from the black, white, and red flag. The Hertha and Medusa, which were selected for the expedition and were being fitted out as speedily as possible, so as to be able to sail at the end of this month, have suddenly received counter-orders and are to be dismantled and laid up in ordinary.

THE SINGAPORE GAS COMPANY (LIMITED).

The half-yearly meeting of this company was held on the 28th ult., Mr. C. H. P. STEPHENSON in the chair.

The report and statement of accounts for the half-year ended 31st December, 1867, having been taken as read, the report and balance-sheet were adopted, and dividends at the rate of 7½ per cent. on the preference shares and of 4 per cent. on the ordinary shares were declared. The retiring directors and auditors were then re-elected, and votes of thanks were proposed to the following:—The Local Committee at Singapore; the Board of Directors; Mr. WELLS, the Engineer and Manager at Singapore; and Mr. KING, the secretary to the company. These having been unanimously carried,

The CHAIRMAN made the following remarks:—

Comparing the present balance-sheet with that presented at the previous meeting, it would be observed that the capital account had been increased by the amount of £100, being the stipulated payment to Mr. WELLS upon his completing the company's works in eight months from the arrival at Singapore of the necessary ironwork. This sum had been paid to Mr. WELLS in the form of twenty fully-paid shares of the company. On the credit side it would be noticed that cash at bankers, in hands of secretary, and bills receivable had increased by the sum of £258, while the works and apparatus account showed an increase of £180, including the sum of £100 to Mr. WELLS, and the expenses of laying additional mains at Singapore. The debit side of the profit and loss account showed about £100 less in the amount of coal carbonised against about £100 increase in the amounts paid for gas rental during the half-year. The remaining items in the statement of accounts exhibited but trifling variation from those of the previous half-year.

The CHAIRMAN went on to say that Singapore, in common with other places, had suffered greatly from the late general depression in trade, and although during the half-year 653 lights to private houses, two public lamps, and three stoves, had been laid on, yet on the other hand the gas cut off represented 284 lights, and the number of houses temporarily closed, and consequently not burning gas, represented 225 lights, and two stoves.

On account of the scarcity of vessels at Sidney, the rates of freight for coal to the East had ruled high, which of course had increased the price of coal delivered at the company's works. The termination of the Abyssinian Expedition would in all probability tend to reduce the rates for freight.

With reference to the retrenchments in the working expenses of the company effected by Mr. WELLS, the CHAIRMAN stated that the views of the directors had been carried out to the utmost extent consistent with the efficient conduct of the works. The saving it was estimated would amount to £300 per annum. The CHAIRMAM concluded his remarks with an allusion to the valuable services rendered to the company by Mr. WELLS, in whom, he stated, the directors continue to place every confidence.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS.

NAVROJEE V. THE CHARTERED BANK OF INDIA, AUSTRALIA AND CHINA.

This was a special case stated for the opinion of the Court, and raised a question as to what amounted to credit within the meaning of the 171st section of the Bankruptcy Act, 1849, which allows a set-off in cases of bankruptcy where mutual credits exist between the bankrupt and other parties.

Mr. Watkin Williams (Mr. J. A Macleod with him) argued for the plaintiffs; Mr. Joseph Brown (Mr. Cohen with him) for the defendants.

The plaintiffs were formerly merchants in London, trading under the style of Dadabhoy and Co., and used to send out to Bombay large consignments of goods, against which they drew bills on native firms in India. The defendants, who have a branch bank in Bombay, were employed by the plaintiffs' financial agents to collect the amount of their bills in India as they became due, and to remit the proceeds to England by draughts on a London bank in plaintiffs' favour. On the 29th of June, 1866, the plaintiffs' firm stopped payment, and executed a deed of inspection, which was subsequently duly registered. At the time of the stoppage the defendants had collected the amounts of certain bills drawn by plaintiffs against consignments to Bombay which had been handed them to collect, and they afterwards proceeded to collect others as they became due until they had received in all over £6,000. But at the time plaintiffs stopped the defendants were also holders of bills accepted or endorsed by the plaintiffs to the amount of £8,300; and as these were dishonoured when they became due, the defendants claimed to set off against them the £6,000 they had collected for the plaintiffs. It was strongly contended, on the part of the plaintiffs, that as they could have revoked at any time the authority of the defendants to collect the bills in India, and as, indeed, in the interests of the general body of creditors, such authority ought to have been revoked on the plaintiffs' stoppage, there was no credit given by the plaintiffs to the defendants, within the meaning of the Bankruptcy Acts, and therefore no mutual credits between the parties; and a case of "Young v. the Bank of Bengal" (1 Moore's P. C. Report) was relied upon to support this view.

The Court, however, held that this case was distinguishable, and that as a debt due from the defendants to the plaintiffs would be the natural result of employing them to collect the bills, there was a credit given to the defendants, and that they therefore had a right to set-off.

MISCELLANEOUS.

AN INGENIOUS INVENTION.

We have been favoured by Messrs. Murray and Dean, of Ludgate-hill, with a specimen of an invention for extracting what is in homely language called "all the goodness" of the tea, whilst using a much smaller quantity of the tea-leaves for infusion, which has lately been patented by Messrs. F. and W. Field, of Newcastle-upon-Tyne. This invention, called the Tea-float, may be roughly described, as follows:—A hollow cylinder of metal is divided into two chambers, the upper part of which is air-tight, and gives the required buoyancy to the whole. The lower chamber, into which the tea is placed for infusion, is perforated with holes so as to admit of the easy admission of water among the tea-leaves. It is a well-known principle in natural philosophy that the hottest particles of water always mount to the top of a vessel; and by means of the float referred to, the tea is always kept in contact with the hottest water in the tea-pot, whereas in the ordinary method of making tea, it remains at the bottom; in other words, it is surrounded by the coldest part of the liquid. Now, in brewing tea, as Liebig has pointed out, two points are to be observed. In the first place, the tea itself must not be allowed to boil, for then the active principle (theine) becomes dissipated, and much of the virtue of the refreshing beverage is lost. Secondly, in order that the theine may be fully extracted, it is requisite that the tea be exposed sufficiently long to the action of the water, at a temperature near the boiling point. The consequence, as the experiments fully established, is that the same strength of liquid can be obtained by using 25 per cent. less of tea by using the "float" than can be obtained without it. Here is a record of some experiments made to test its efficacy:—"A quarter of an ounce of tea was placed in a large brown ware jug, and a quantity, 25 per cent. short of that amount, was inserted in the float in another, both being covered with boiling water, and allowed to stand six minutes for drawing. At the end of this time the liquid was poured into cups and presented to the tasters, who had hitherto been absent from the room, for their opinions as to its merits; but after a severe consideration as to palate, flavour, and colour, they nearly all expressed their inability to point out a difference. Submitting equal quantities of tea to the same process, the strength of that in which the float was used was so much in excess of the other as to be easily discernible without any test at all." The patentees claim the following advantages as resulting from the use of the "float:" (1) it effects a saving of at least one-fourth; (2) it prevents the admixture of any sediment with the liquid; (3) the tea is infused in about half the time usually required; and (4) it is much more clearly for use. The cost of this useful article varies with its size, and will range from one to two shillings.

TRADE BETWEEN FRANCE AND SHANGHAI.—A letter from Shanghai, from a French source, says:—"French trade is not progressing here in the same proportion as that of other countries. In 1861 there were ten commercial houses established here, and in 1867 there were no more, including a branch of the Comptoir d'Escompte (Discount Bank) of Paris, and an agency of the Messageries Imperiales. In 1867, out of 43,000 bales of goods sent from Shanghai, only 2,500 were despatched by the French houses; but 4,800 were sent to France by foreign firms. The cotton and woollen tissues of France do not sell well in these ports; they are dearer than the English, and are beaten by them."

THE ITALIAN TREATY WITH CHINA.—The voluminous papers relating to the Treaty between Italy and China have been published at full length in the Official Gazette of Florence. The treaty, which was signed at Peking on the 26th of October, 1866, by Signor Victor Arminjon, captain in the Italian Royal Navy, and the Chinese Commissioners T'han and Tsong, was ratified and the ratifications exchanged at Shanghai on the 12th of November, 1867. The First Article stipulates there shall be amity and everlasting peace between the two countries, with full protection and safety for the subjects of the one in the territories of the other. Italy enjoys the right of appointing Consuls at the open ports; they need not necessarily be Italians, but may be the subjects of any friendly European Power. Consuls are to have in China the rank of Taotei, or district Intendant; and Vice-Consuls that of Teha-foo, or Prefects. Italians may travel and reside in any part of the Chinese dominions. Article II. enumerates the fourteen ports open to foreign trade, among which we observe the names of Tam-sui and Tai-wan-foo, or Formosa. We mention this specially as it completely refutes the German theory of that island not belonging to China, as mentioned in the letter of our Hamburg correspondent in our last impression, and therefore the Germans can have no legal right to take possession of any part of Formosa. Appended to the texts of the treaty are nine annexes containing the regulations of the trade, as well as the tariff of export and import duties in China.

CHINESE COOLIES IN HAVANA.—The correspondent of a New York paper writes:—"Many Chinese are emigrating, but to a country whence they will never return. The waters of the bay of Havana wash ashore weekly the remains of from three to five unfortunate Celestials who, to escape a life of misery and ill-treatment, have taken a summary method of ridding themselves of their troubles. The coolie contract is a very straightforward document to read; but not once in a hundred times are its terms complied with. Bad treatment, severe punishment meted out for the slightest offence, and wretched food, kill one-half of the Chinamen before their term of service expires. About twenty coolies commit suicide every week in this island, so full of humanitarian sentiment. It seems very strange, therefore, that the coolies should continue to contract for labour in Cuba, [illegible] in spite of the usage they receive here. The few Chinamen who are enabled to return to their native country have enjoyed superior facilities to accumulate money, and notwithstanding the warnings to their countrymen against coming here, it appears they still receive the truly Chinese answer; "You have got money; I can get it also."

BOARD OF TRADE RETURNS.

The Board of Trade returns for the month and three months ending March 31 last again show a falling off in the exports, the total for March being £14,829,249, against £15,148,707 in the corresponding month of 1867, and £17,520,354 in 1866. The diminution, however, is solely caused by the reduced value of cotton manufactures, the quantities of which, on the other hand, show a large and continuous increase. The number of yards of piece goods, plain, printed, or coloured, exported in March this year was 249,209,459, against 210,096,841 in March last year. The principal instances of decrease have been in apparel, earthenware, haberdashery, hardwares, linen yarns and manufactures, machinery, iron and steel, silk manufactures, and woollen manufactures. Cotton yarn, coals, manufactures of leather, copper and brass, tin, lead, oilseed, wool, and woollen yarn show an increase. The computed real value of the principal articles imported for the first two months of the present year has been £24,959,670, against £25,926,780 in the same period of 1867, and £28,187,005 in that of 1866, but the difference is accounted for entirely by the diminished value of raw cotton. In the quantities imported of articles free of duty during the three months, cotton exhibits an increase of 35 per cent., while wool has fallen off nearly 30 per cent. as compared with last year. The "quantities entered for home consumption" of articles subject to duty indicate some considerable changes. In wheat there is an excess of 40 per cent., in maize of nearly 80 per cent., tea 8 per cent., cocoa say 25 per cent., and wine 15 per cent. over the first quarter of 1867; while coffee, flour, barley, oats, spirits, and sugar show a falling off.

We annex a summary of those figures which relate to our Import and Export trade with China and other countries in the Far East.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS and OINTMENT.—BILIOUS DISORDERS.—In no organ of the body does disease present itself so frequently and in such varied forms as the liver, and in no affections is it more important to apply immediate and safe treatment. Holloway's remedies happily place the means of cure within the reach of all; his Pills, aided by energetic friction with his Ointment on the right side, will soon reduce the troublesome dyspeptic symptoms, and perseverance with these preparations will ensure perfect recovery without any great restrictions in habits or diet. This treatment safely reduces the enlarged liver, so often indicative of too great indulgence in the pleasures of the table, nor is it less efficient in repairing imperfect digestion.

ARRANGEMENTS FOR 1868.

The Proprietor has made arrangements to run six couriers per month in May and June, in the event of delay in the transmission of telegrams by the Russian Telegraph Service. It may not be generally known that the delays during the last season were occasioned by the overflowing of the Rivers Irtisch, Obi, and Yenessei; upwards of 800 versts of Telegraph Line were swept away from time to time. As such inundations occur only once or twice in a century, the Proprietor hopes that the precaution he has taken will prove unnecessary. During the latter two months of last season the line worked very well, and Telegrams were delivered to and from Europe in 18 days; the average time being as follows:—

London and Kiachta by Telegraph	2 days.
Kiachta and Tientsin by Courier	12 „
Tientsin and Shanghai by Steamer	4 „
Total ...	18 days.

A courier having been killed by a fall from his horse last year, the telegram bag was lost, and has not yet been recovered. In order to prevent a recurrence of the inconvenience, it is the intention of the Proprietor to open all telegrams addressed to his care, and forward duplicates by the subsequent courier to their respective addresses, unless he be specially notified to the contrary. The number of stations in Mongolia will be doubled this year. Contracts have been made to deliver telegrams between Kiachta and Tientsin in twelve days; the non-fulfilment of the contracts as to time entails a penalty upon the contractors of from 1 to 3 taels per hour (6s. to 18s.), thus giving a guarantee that delay will not occur.

After the first two months of the season, which are the most severe as regards the climate, the contractors will reduce their contract time to ten days.

FOR CHILDREN'S DIET.

BROWN AND POLSON'S CORN FLOUR.

REMARKS ON THE DIETARY VALUE OF CORN FLOUR.

We not unfrequently meet with persons who, with much self-complacency, affect a lofty disregard of what they eat, and who boast that n order to keep their appetites in subjection, they systematically and on principle eat whatever is set before them, quite irrespective of its character or fitness for the circumstances under which they live, endeavouring thus to carry out the recommendation of Solomon to eat only for strength, not for pleasure. The gratification of the sense of taste, however, serves a much higher purpose than is commonly supposed, for, as a general rule, if the appetite be not blunted or perverted by excessive indulgence, our tastes and our requirements are very closely related, so that, in man's natural state, taste becomes, as it were, a sort of instinct, and takes rank as one of God's providences for the preservation of our health. In this way we may explain what is matter of common observation, that a man's taste varies with his age, habits, and circumstances of life. At one time he wishes for, at another scarcely bears the sight of fat; sometimes he craves for animal, at other times for vegetable food. Indeed, the feelings of hunger and thirst, which have reference to quantity rather than quality, are not more evidently instinctive than is taste, which regards only the quality of food. As a guide, it may be safely trusted both as to food and drink, if only we listen to its simple teaching, and do not abuse its confidence.

In no other way than the above can we explain the very remarkbale varieties in the food consumed in different climates; witness the Laplander with his mess of blubber, or the inhabitant of the tropics with his refreshingly cool and juicy fruit. In both these instances taste assumes the part of instinct, and guides the possessor to the selection of a diet which his circumstances render necessary. Hence taste becomes the handmaid of science, and points to a law in the dietary of individuals, telling them what they ought to eat, drink, and avoid. It suggests variation under varying conditions, and notably so in regard to temperature; for, from the two great divisions or types into which all foods are classified—namely, the nitrogenous or tissue forming, and the calorifientac, or heat-creating—it selects instinctively that one which science demonstrates to be most necessary.

A few words on these two types of food will serve to illustrate the dietetic value of the Corn Flour, which is the subject of these remarks.

By the term nitrogenous is meant all foods, whether derived from the animal or vegetable kingdom, which contain nitrogen as one of the elements of their composition, in addition to carbon, hydrogen, and oxygen. These foods are also called nutritious—that is, tissue-formers—and the measure of their nutritive value is the quantity of nitrogen they contain. The reason of this is found in the fact that all the tissues of the body, fat excepted, contain nitrogen, and those wherein the nutritive changes are most active, such as muscle and nerve, contain the largest amount of nitrogen. Examples of this food are: meat of all kinds, eggs, milk, beans, peas, lentils, bran, and the inner coat of wheat and flour, or bread, though in the latter we approach nearer to the purely starchy or calorificient group, and so get further from the nitrogenous class.

The calorificient or heat-producing group are foods which contain liittle or no nitrogen, but only carbon, hydrogen, and oxygen. Starch and its varieties, rice, sago, arrowroot, potatoes, and flour; fatty and oily substances, such as butter, cream, and all the varieties of sugar; these make up the class of heat-sustaining foods, and though they do not directly nourish tissue, except where they also contain traces of nitrogen, they nevertheless perform scarcely less important functions in the human body, for, besides assisting in the process of respiration, they develop fat for the protection of the muscles. And, above all, they principally maintain the heat of the body, which is essential for the due performance of all its functions; this they do by the union of their carbon with the oxygen of the air in the process of respiration, in the same way as in the combustion of coal—the residual oxygen and hydrogen being in the proportion to form water.

Such a desideratum, it is believed, is now supplied in the Corn Flour which we manufacture, and which, when boiled with milk, presents such a combination of animal and vegetable food as closely resembles ordinary beef and bread, while at the same time it is in so light and easily digestible a form as will keep the system fully nourished, when the stronger and more stimulating food would only weaken and depress by its indigestibility.

As a pure starch, Corn Flour is peculiarly fitted for the diet of children. Though there seems to be a general impression to the contrary, it is essentially a heat-creating food, and is also one of the most easily digested. And, inasmuch as the proper maintenance of animal heat is of vital importance to childhood, food of this class is at all times loudly demanded by nature. This is attested by the fact that in milk, the very best of infant foods, the heat-sustaining element preponderates largely over the nitrogenous or tissue-forming. The popular belief appears to be that children have a remarkable power of resisting cold. This is certainly not the case with plants, nor is it with animals, least of all is it with man. Heat, whether supplied from within by food, or without by clothing, seems almost by itself to give life to young organisms, whether plants, animals, or man. And according to the recent researches of scientific men there seems to be so very intimate and mysterious a connection between heat and life that some have even ventured to suggest their mutual dependence. The feeble digestive power of children, and their extreme sensibility to cold, are additional reasons in favour of such a food as Corn Flour. Moreover, its slightly alkaline reaction recommends it as especially fitting in those cases where there is any tendency to acidity, a condition which is not only very common, but sometimes very troublesome in early life, and is a frequent cause of diarrhœa and other digestive disorders. It cannot be too often insisted upon that purity, simplicity, digestibility, and the absence of any stimulating quality are, or ought to be, the essential characters in the food of children—and these are the features especially observed in Corn Flour.

But it is not in childhood alone, or even chiefly, that this preparation is so valuable as an article of diet. To the man of business, who is obliged to sit long at his desk, and to all whose calling necessitates close confinement, or whose digestive organs are impaired by over-indulgence, or the use of a too stimulating diet, this simple, easily digested, and non-stimulating food will be found an incalculable blessing. It may be cooked in a great variety of ways; when well boiled with milk, with or without any sugar or seasoning, but better without, and allowed to cool in a shape, it forms a delicious blanc mange, unsurpassed by any other preparation for delicacy and easy digestibility. By its bulk it favours digestion when the heavier kinds of food could not be borne, and in combination with either milk or egg it forms a meal scarcely inferior in nutritive value to a steak or chop, while it surpasses them in the fact that it is easily disposed of by even the most delicate stomach. Add to all this, that change or variety in diet is of great importance to healthy nutrition, and we have another reason for recommending this to the public attention. We once heard of a man who was nearly famished on mutton chops, potatoes, and bread, taken day by day without intermission; a change of diet completely restored him. The more variety we can introduce into our food, consistent with other requirements, the better, and hence the obvious importance of a new article of diet.

It has been said that he who makes two blades of grass grow where one grew before is a benefactor of his species. Sir Walter Raleigh, who introduced the potatoe into England, might certainly lay claim to that title. To us belongs the honour, whatever it may be, of being the first in this country to manufacture a pure starch from maize, which is now so well known under the name we give it, viz., Corn Flour. For those who really need a light nutritious diet, we can wish no greater luxury than this addition to their meal.

Summary of News from the Far East.

JAPAN.

THE NEW PORTS.

A man-of-war, which arrived at Shanghai from Osaka just as the present mail was leaving, brought news of the attack on Sir Harry Parkes, already announced by telegram. The outrage is stated to have been committed by a band of fanatics; Sir Harry escaped unhurt, but eight members of his escort were wounded.

Intelligence from Hiogo to the 23rd March does not quite confirm the information already received by telegraph of the execution of twenty or more Japanese for the massacre of the French sailors. It appears that the twenty-two were brought out for execution, but after two officers and nine men had been beheaded the French Minister interfered, declared himself satisfied and obtained the pardon of the remainder. £30,000 sterling is the amount of the indemnity to be paid. It is to be hoped that this moderation of M. Roche may have the effect of stopping the blood feud created between Japanese and French by the execution of Bizen's karoo.

The English and French Ministers, and some say the Dutch Representative also, have gone up to Kioto, where they expected to have an interview with the young Mikado himself. This would indeed be the crowning point of our intercourse with this country. The Ocean was to leave Hiogo for Yokohama—nothing occurring to prevent her departure—on the 27th March, the Adventure on the following day.

Business had been actively resumed; the people were returning fast into Osaka and Hiogo, confidence apparently being fairly restored.

Of political news we have none of much importance. Letters from Kioto tell us of a proposition made by Satsuma to remove the young Mikado to some place of greater safety than the metropolis; but this was opposed by the other chiefs. Three steamers have left Hiogo for the North, with troops to assist Sendal against the Prince of Aidzu, who has not yet given in his submission, and on whose conduct alone, as we mentioned last mail, now depends the question of peace or war. But as resistance will really be hopeless after the Mikado's troops are in possession of Yedo, we may believe the reduction of the whole of the country to the north to be only an affair of a few weeks.

YOKOHAMA.

From this port we have advices to March 26th (six days later). The outward mail of Jan. 27th was delivered on the 21st of March. The events of the week are thus summed up by the Japan Times:—

Before these lines are published it is probable that Yedo will have been occupied by the troops of the Mikado, and the administration of the Government of the late Shiogoon handed over to the officers of his Imperial Majesty. Stotsbashi has most distinctly and categorically submitted to the Emperor, and in circulars to the vassals of his house has advised all who owe him fealty and obedience to do the same. Abandoned by his foreign allies, with the prestige of his arms irretrievably gone, and the mysterious and time-honoured influence of the Mikado used against him by the southern Daimios with consummate skill—submission was clearly his best policy, his only chance, indeed, of safety for the present and possible advancement in the future. Intelligent, enlightened, and liberal-minded, as this young noble has shown himself to be, it would be a real calamity for his country, and for us also, if his victorious opponents should proceed to extremities against him. This, we are glad to say, our information leads us to believe improbable.

The news of the massacre of eleven French sailors near Osaka will long ere this have reached our home readers via Nagasaki and China. It is with the sincerest regret that we have to record so quickly after its utterance the fulfilment of our prophecy last mail, when, referring to the judicial murder of Bezin's karoo, we wrote of it as establishing a vendetta. We little thought how soon that death would be avenged, nor how bloodily. It is impossible to deny the connection between the events, as the advocates of our Ministers attempt to do—their relation is simply that of effect and cause. And now where is the feud to stop? Both the Mikado and the Prince of Tosa immediately sent letters of apology expressive of their regret at the occurrence, and twenty-two men concerned in the crime have been executed. A hundred thousand dollars as provision for the families of the victims have been demanded, and it is presumable that so far as the French are concerned the matter is at an end for the present. If M. Roche has asked no more than this he has shown a wise moderation. The support of foreigners is so essential to the Mikado and the Princes of the South, or rather any prolonged quarrel with us would so damage their cause, that they would give us anything we asked in reason, and what they can do to restrain the Samurai they will do. But what is the extent of their power over this class? Of much more importance to us is its goodwill than the offers of the Mikado, and that Frenchmen, at least, are very far from possessing at present. A Japanese noble cannot control his vassals' swords as an English duke can command his tenants' votes, and it may well be that the feud begun at Kobe is not ended by the slaughter at Sakai and its subsequent punishment.

We have given no satisfaction to the Japanese for our original fault. The quarrel was begun by foreigners and from that point of view the Samurai look upon the affair and from no other. We hold that the blood of these eleven unfortunate Frenchmen lies, mingled with that of Bizen's officer, at the door of those of the foreign Ministers who compelled the commission of the first crime. Justice will not be satisfied, the reasonable expectations of the Japanese cannot be met, the honour of the Western Powers they mis-represent will not be vindicated, and blood, European and Japanese alternately, will not cease to flow in this quarrel unless these men be recalled and their disgrace duly notified to the Government of our ally. This is a subject which should be argued dispassionately. If so argued, without the introduction of any such disturbing element as national feeling, we shall be seen to be right. The man did nothing more than he held to be proper, and certainly nothing that European law holds to be so wrong as to merit capital punishment. A couple of French soldiers attempted to force their way through his line, in spite of repeated warning, and he resisted them. His demeanour at his death place supports us here. He spoke calmly and deliberately—said that he had been born and bred a soldier, that he knew his duty, that he had done nothing but his duty, and would do it, were it to do again. We may be perfectly sure—we have had too dreadful proof—that his countrymen thoroughly sympathised with him. The Japanese saw in such a deed as that which our Ministers committed a frightful act of injustice, and other blood has flowed to propitiate the shade of the dead. We are all here, particularly Englishmen and Frenchmen, too apt to look at such an affair as this from the "d——d" nigger point of view. India and Algeria have blunted our sense of fairness. But it is to hoped—and we think believed—that statesmen and Parliaments at home will see it in a different light. The result has shown that even the miserable excuse of expediency or necessity is inadmissible. It was a serious blunder, and its consequences no one can yet foresee. And those who committed such a blunder, which has already cost eleven European lives, and may cost many more, are clearly unfitted for the work they were sent here to do—the protection of European lives and interests. In self-defence we demand their recall.

Considerable interest has been excited during the fortnight in a case in the American Consular Court, involving an amount of no less than $85,000. The owners of the steamer Osaca sue the Pacific Mail Company for that amount, for damages done to her on the night of the 25th ult., when she came into collision with the company's steamship Hermann. The decision of the Court was reserved.

NAGASAKI.

At Nagasaki everything was quiet; a brisk trade was doing in Enfield rifles, which sold readily at $15 each.

The steamer Augusta is reported as sold for something between $60,000 and $70,000, of which $11,000 was cash down, and the balance on delivery of the steamer at some place in the Inland sea.

The Russian ship Amelia was bought by Messrs. Glover and Co. for $7,500.

TIENTSIN.

A letter from this port, dated March 22nd, contains the following:—

On the evening of the 14th March the Yamuns reported that the rebels were at Heenheen, 320 li from Tientsin, and that they had been driven there after several severe actions with Ting-paou-chin. The Chinese merchants, however, mention the rebels as being nearer at Jin-kew-heen, 240 li from Tientsin. On the 17th March I had a long conversation with a Chinese merchant who had arrived from Hokeenfoo the previous day. He had been staying with a mandarin on the staff of Ting-paou-chin. He reports that Li-hung-chang, the generalissimo (Kiuchae Tachin) in the north, and I think known to your southern readers as "Li-footai," was expected from the south part of Chihle at Hokeenfoo on the 14th March, with the bulk of the forces under his immediate command, after which it was supposed that the rebels would be attacked on all sides without many days delay; that the Emperor had directed Ting-paou-chin (Governor of Shantung) to proceed to Tihchow, a border city of Shantung, to prevent the rebels going into Shantung; that the rebels, on the day he left Hokeenfoo, were completely surrounded by Imperial forces; that almost daily fighting was going on; that, what with want of food and daily losses by fighting, the rebels could not hold out against the Imperialists many days longer. This man numbered Li-hung-chang's army (the forces under his flag) at over 100,000 fighting men. He says that Tso-tsung-tang has a very large force under his direct command, all placed on the frontiers of Shansi. He placed the chief rebel force at Po-ye and Se-heen, and said they numbered 60,000 men. These places are about 360 li from Tientsin. Having been living amongst the Imperialists with the chief of the Commissariat for nearly six weeks, this man was strongly tinged with Imperialist views of the rebels.

We understand that his Excellency Sir Rutherford Alcock has requested Admiral Keppel to send an additional gun-boat to Tientsin, as speedily as possible. We are led to expect that the French, Russian, and American naval commanders-in-chief will also send gun-boats here immediately, with the view of giving protection to and watching over their respective national interests at this port. The only vessel of war at present at Tientsin, protecting the lives of foreign residents and their properties, and in position for keeping open the communication, is H. B. M. gun boat Dove, Lieut. Dunlop. Her Britannic Majesty can, with just reason, expect that other foreign Governments shall contribute their quota of naval protection to the residents at Tientsin, by each stationing a small vessel of war in the port, while Tientsin may be attacked and occupied by rebels.

Mr. Dick, Commissioner of Customs at Tientsin during the last twenty months, left this port two days back in the steamer Fusiyama for Foochow, to which port he had been appointed Commissioner of Customs. While Mr. Dick was in charge of the Customs at this port, he did much to simplify and facilitate the transaction of business. He left this port respected by every one, and carried away with him their best wishes. He is a man of whom the Customs service have reason to be proud.

SHANGHAI.

Advices from this port are to April 2nd. The English mail of Feb. 10th arrived out on the 27th March with London telegrams to 29th Feb.; later telegrams to 10th March had been received by Grant's line via Kiachta. There is little news of importance. We gather the following items from the North China Herald:—

The new flag of the North-German Confederation was formally hoisted on the 22nd March. The ceremony should have taken place on the 1st April, but was anticipated, as the 22nd March is the King of Prussia's birthday. At 8 A.M., therefore, the Vineta and the German merchant ships in harbour hoisted their respective flags. At 9 A.M. a salute of twenty-one guns was fired from the former vessel to inaugurate the new tricolour, and at noon a further salute of twenty-one guns was fired in honour of his Majesty.

The property known as Alpha Farm has been sold by auction for Tls. 2,300. Three lots of land at Sikawei brought Tls. 6 per mow. For a plot at Hankow there was no bidding.

The French gunboat Deroulede has been sold by auction for Tls. 3,700. The Mirage was sold for Tls. 700.

Report says that the steamer Douglas has been chartered by the P. and O. Company for six months, at $8,000 per month, charterer finding coal.

The Taoutai has issued peermptory orders for the immediate interment of all unburied coffins within the district of Shanghai. He says, "For two years past the Revenue Commissioners and military commandants have been urging this; the pencil has been worn bare with writing and the lips sore with speaking; but no attention has been paid, and very few have, as yet, buried their dead. We have, out of our own stipend, interred in the neighbourhood of Shanghai more than six thousand of those who have no relatives or whose relatives cannot afford the cost of burial. Those too possessing the means have, by our orders, interred their dead. Still in many places the unburied coffins are so many as to be almost piled on each other, and now that the spring has come, the foul exhalations from these will be great; so our orders for immediate interment must be enforced, in order to avoid the outbreak of a pestilence. For the burial of the poor we have already given funds, and now issue this for the information of the natives and those from other parts, that all unburied coffins belonging to them must be interred before the Spring Sacrifices (12th of the 3rd Moon, or April 4th). Neglecting this you will be brought before the Court and punished according to law."

Piracy continues to crop up occasionally about the mouth of the Yangtze. A Chinese lugger bound hence to Ningpo was attacked last week by two Cantonese and one Taysan pirate boat, close to the Ruggeds. Fortunately there was a breeze at the time, and the lugger was enabled to run away. There are five Chinese gunboats in port lying idle.

The Bishop of Victoria has held a confirmation at Trinity Church, when twelve candidates presented themselves to receive the rite. His lordship and his acting chaplain, the Rev. George Vaughan have since left for Hong Kong.

A gentleman attached to one of the men-of-war in port was violently assaulted a few days ago by some individual unknown. He was walking quietly down Peking-road when he was passed by three roughs, one of whom turned suddenly round and struck him a violent blow in the face, which felled him to the ground. No motive for the assault can be imagined, neither is the assailant suspected.

An inquiry has been held into the circumstances under which the ship White Adder got on shore a few weeks ago. The pilot Hicks was convicted of want of proficiency, and suspended for four months.

The wreck of the Mary Francis has been sold for Tls. 240, and the cargo for Tls. 80. We doubt whether purchasers will find much of the latter remaining.

We regret to learn from Hankow that the Hankow Times is about to give up the ghost. The badness of the times and want of a responsible editor are alleged as reasons for the demise. It will be much missed, as it has been well conducted, and has contributed many useful articles on Chinese subjects, besides serving as a vehicle of news. We observe that a rifle meeting and athletic sports are announced for the 20th and 22nd April. The Shen-yeu-tai Bank affair remains in statu quo.

The U.S.S. Shenandoah is at Chefoo, on her way to Corea, to inquire after the General Sherman—a difficult enterprise, seeing the unknown state of the coast and the strong tides. We hope she will be successful. A Chefoo correspondent writes:—"The Shantung Nienfei are said to be surrounded and broken; but Chih-li is still in a very disturbed state. Trade, so far as returns go, is wonderfully brisk. I hope sales are keeping pace with importations. The weather is still execrable, windy and cold; but we live in hope that, in a few days, we shall have a change. The Chefoo Taotai has been appointed Salt Commissioner at Hangchow, which is to be regretted; as he is a gentleman, and has shown himself well disposed towards foreigners."

HONG KONG.

Dates hence are to April 8th. The outward French mail of February 18th arrived on the 1st April, with London telegrams to 6th March; the English mail of Feb. 26th, which arrived on the 6th April, brought no later telegrams, owing to the rupture of the Persian Gulf cable.

The only event of any interest is a meeting which took place at the Chamber of Commerce, to consider the system of licensing gaming-houses, at which some resolutions were passed condemning the Ordinance, but the meeting was by no means unanimous in adopting them. The following report of the proceedings is abbreviated from the Daily Press:—

A general meeting of the Chamber of Commerce was held on the 2nd April, for the purpose of considering the effect of the present system of Licensed Gambling on the Trade of the Colony. The following members were present:—Mr. Ryrie occupying the chair, Messrs. Taylor, Hitchcock, B. Pallanjee, Rowett, Lapraik, Kaye, Macauley, Zimmern, Pyke, Duncanson, Deacon, and Bosman.

The Chairman, in opening the meeting, said that he confessed that when the question of licensing gambling in this colony was first mooted, he was of opinion that it would not do any harm, and that it might be the means of doing some good; but since the system had been in operation he had made a point of asking the opinion of nearly every respectable Chinese with whom he had come in contact, and they one and all denounced the system as one which was creating much mischief to the trade of the colony, and this was the ground on which it came within the province of the Chamber to endeavour to abolish it—that is, of course, if the information the other members had obtained led them to the same conclusion as that to which he had arrived. He understood that one member of the Chamber was in possession of information showing that the gambling had diminished very materially the number of traders with small means—men who were in the habit of buying twenty, thirty, or up to fifty pieces shirtings, and taking them for sale to the various towns and villages in the neighbourhood. These men, seduced by the allurements of the gambling hells, had abandoned their former occupation, and taken to the less laborious and seductive, although risky, occupation of gambling. He must say that this view of the case had only been put before him by one or two of his Chinese friends. The great evil which he would urge, and the one which they already had, and could obtain more ample proof of, was the number of robberies from employers by shroffs and others engaged in collecting money, and he felt confident that many of the robberies would not have been committed were there not these public gambling-houses invitingly open. He should leave the matter in their hands, to give such expressions of opinion and pass such resolutions as they might think fit.

Mr. Taylor said that the removal of the fear of apprehension and punishment could, he thought, have but one result, and that was very widely and indiscriminately to increase gambling in the colony. There were now a set of men in existence who endeavoured to attract as many to the gambling table as possible. These were the gambling farmer and his associates, for it was notorious that the present farm was carried on by a joint-stock company, and it was their interest to encourage legitimate gambling to the greatest possible extent. The Government found this man and his associates a very convenient tool, but it could hardly be expected that he would serve the Government any further than his own interests were directly concerned. He had first to make the sum of 260,000 dols. to pay his fee, and a commensurate income with this must be over 400,000 dols., a sum of money that represents a vast amount of misery, and one which of itself, employed in legitimate trade, would do much to dispel the pernicious vice. Within his own personal knowledge he knew of the direst effects of this ordinance, some of which he would mention. His compradore could no longer trust a shroff to go out alone and collect money, on account of the attractions offered by the gambling-houses, and he was now obliged to send out two, hoping that one would be a check upon the other. There could be no question but that licensed gambling was most injurious to the trade of this colony, as many had found out by dearly-bought experience. He would offer the following resolution:—"It is the opinion of the Chamber that licensed gambling is affecting the trade of the colony injuriously by encouraging dishonesty amongst large portions of the native population engaged in business, and amongst the native employés of foreign firms."

Mr. Hitchcock, in rising to second this resolution, said that he had questioned a very respectable and intelligent Chinese merchant as to what he thought about gambling, and the reply had been that he thought it was very bad. Trade, to his knowledge, had fallen off 25 per cent. among the small traders, who had, no doubt, given up their business because they thought they could make an easier living at gambling. They also found a great deal of dishonesty among their shroffs and employés. One shroff he had known of was sent to collect 6,000 dollars; having obtained the money, he stopped, on his way back, at a gambling-house, and there lost 690 dollars of this very money. In another case the shroff of a very large steamer running between here and Shanghai was found with a large deficit in his cash account a short time since, and on inquiring into the matter it was ascertained that gambling had been the cause. Here was a man who for many years had borne a most excellent character with his employers, and had always been found honest, through the influence of this very ordinance ruined, perhaps, for life, so far as obtaining employment here was concerned. Among his own servants he had instances of dishonesty from gambling within the last few months, and some who had been honest and trusty for years he had been obliged to discharge.

Mr. Bosman said he had taken some interest in the gambling licensing and when the question was first mooted several very respectable Chinamen had come to him, and asked him to use his influence (supposing that he had some) to get them the farm. The moment they did not get it they were opposed to licensed gambling. He agreed with those who had already spoken that gambling had a bad effect on the colony, but he would ask was the 400,000 or 500,000 dols. revenue now got from it any more than had been paid, in another way of course, for corrupting the police and keeping up a system of spies. With regard to the instances cited by Mr. Hitchcock, he could also cite some instances. There was the great defalcation at the Union Bank in London, and in the Northern Railway at Paris, but from these he was not prepared to say that the Chamber of Commerce of either place had recommended that the Stock Exchange should be shut up. If this ordinance was repealed, then we went back again to the old story of corruption of the police, and all that took place before the ordinance was passed. He would therefore offer as an amendment to the first resolution:—"That before expressing an opinion as to the effects of licensed gambling, this Chamber should appoint a committee to make the necessary inquiries as to the injury caused to the trade of this colony by licensed gambling."

Mr. Duncanson seconded the amendment.

Mr. Ryrie said that his experience was quite different from Mr. Bosman's. His own compradore knew very well that at first he was in favour of the gambling ordinance, but had nevertheless expressed to him emphatic disapproval. Another old Chinese friend, when hearing him express his approval of the measure, had replied that he was very much surprised.

Mr. Taylor, in reply to Mr. Bosman's remarks, said that some time since there were public betting-houses opened in London, but the evil influence they exercised was so great that the merchants petitioned Government to shut them up, and they were accordingly closed. It was much better to have a police corrupt than a whole community utterly corrupt.

Mr. Bosman said only a few instances of shroffs gambling had been mentioned, and he did not think there was any immediate danger of the whole community being corrupted.

Mr. Hitchcock said that he objected to Mr. Bosman's amendment. He did not think the Governor wanted any suggestions from the Chamber as to his government of the colony. They were only called together to express an opinion, and this was embodied in the original resolution before the meeting.

The amendment of Mr. Bosman was put to the meeting, and lost by a vote of 3 to 8; Messrs. Bosman, Deacon, and Duncanson voting in the affirmative. The original resolution was then put, and carried by a vote of 8 to 2, one member not voting.

Mr. Rowett then rose, and said that he entirely agreed with what had been said by the supporters of the resolution just passed. His own compradore declared the present system to be most injurious. Very many who never gambled before do so now; and great numbers of those who would not have gone into the low slums where illicit gambling was formerly carried on, do not now hesitate to go openly to the licensed gambling-houses to spend their own or other people's money, as the case might be. The police force was, he thought, now very much changed from what it used to be. At present there was an active and educated man at its head, one who must be quite above collusion of any kind, and the entire force was of a much higher character. He would, therefore, propose—"That it is the opinion of this Chamber that our present police force, with the aid of the influential portion of the Chinese trading community (which would be readily given), are quite competent to suppress gambling."

Mr. John Lapraik said he had much pleasure in seconding this resolution. When he first heard of the gambling ordinance he was in favour of it, but since it had been in operation he had seen reason to change his views. Chinese property, he had good reason to know, had declined 25 or 30 per cent., and he considered that gambling had much to do with this. This was occasioned mostly by a decrease in the number of small shops open. These small traders had doubtless lost all their small capital at gaming-tables, and then been obliged to close up and leave the colony.

Mr. Taylor said that when the Governor first came to the colony he had put down gambling for about two weeks' without himself knowing it. He had sent round officers to say that he would not allow gambling in any form, but the Chinese, after waiting for a fortnight, saw no proclamation on the subject, and heard nothing further, they consequently concluded that these were the words of a man who did not mean what he said. When the present Governor of Canton first arrived, he gave a similar intimation, and followed it up by a proclamation, to the effect that he meant what he said, and the consequence was that gambling does not exist in that city.

The resolution was then put to the meeting, and carried by six votes, seven gentlemen declining to vote.

The meeting then separated.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

SINGAPORE.

The first outward mail under the new contract—that which left London on the 6th March—reached Singapore on the 8th April, its due date. Advices from this port by the present inward mail extend to the 15th April.

The Straits Times says:—

In the Straits Settlements the fortnight has been rather a quiet and monotonous one. Politically there is almost nothing new. Our Legislative Council have not yet begun their labours. But the public have been gratified with a sort of Budget from the Auditor-General, in the shape of a comparative statement of the actual and estimated revenue and expenditure of the colony during the first nine months of the new regime up to the 31st December, 1867. The figures are upon the whole satisfactory. The colony has outrun the constable by $47,948. This is owing to an extraordinary outlay of some $125,000 for Government house and steamers, which was deliberately authorised. But for this there would have been a surplus of ordinary revenue over ordinary expenditure of $76,619 which is to say the least pretty satisfactory.

The second Criminal Sessions of this year was opened on the 9th April by the Chief Justice. The calendar of crime was a very light one, there being only fourteen cases for trial, none of any importance or calling for any notice.

The European community were startled on Good Friday by the very sudden and totally unexpected death of the Commissioner of Police for Singapore, K. B. S. Robertson, Esquire. The loss to the colonial service is very considerable. Mr. Robertson was an able, energetic, and experienced officer, well acquainted with the manners, customs, modes of thought, and wishes of the natives, gifted with tact in dealing with them, and popular with all of them, and especially with the police force, towards whom he always manifested a great and beneficial esprit de corps Quite a young man, his term of service extended over fifteen years, fully entitling his widow and family to a liberal pension from Government.

In commercial circles the chief subject of talk has been an exchange operation in Java by the Bank of Rotterdam, a young institution which seems taking firm root over the East, and is evidently determined to show a lesson or two to the older slower going banks who have not yet recovered from their scare at the smashes of two years ago. The Java Government, it appears, have been in the habit of interfering with the normal course of exchange by throwing its paper on the open market from time to time. The managing director of the Rotterdam Bank, Mr. Meyer, determined to stop this, and has bought up at an exceptional rate all the paper the Government can sell for the next six months, stated to be five and a half million guilders, and by this means he can now control the market.

The weather has been characterised by great drought of late, and the wells are getting dried up. In fact only a shower or two within the last two days has put an end to serious inconvenience. This has directed attention again to our waterworks. We learn that the colonial engineer will have a report upon them ready very shortly, that several flaws have been discovered and remedied in their construction, and that it will be probably two months more yet before they can be fairly tried.

The failure of a Chinese hong in the bazaar for, it is said, over $50,000, has given most of our merchants a severe rap across the knuckles, and is merely a repetition of the often-taught lessons to beware of giving reckless credit.

We are sorry to learn that the Maharajah of Johore met with an accident whilst taking an evening drive. It appears that the horses took fright, the bridles broke and they made off at full speed and upset the carriage. Fortunately the Maharajah jumped out and merely sustained a slight injury on one of his legs, but the driver of the vehicle had his feet severely hurt, and the horses afterwards came into contact with a hackney carriage, which was smashed to pieces.

Commercial Report.

CHINA AND JAPAN IMPORTS.

YOKOHAMA.—No improvement in the market for imports can be reported, increased stock and the alarm caused in Yedo by the reported near approach of the Mikado's troops had almost paralysed trade. For Grey Shirtings and Yarn, although a fair inquiry had existed, sales were small, dealers offering rates which only in a few instances holders were willing to accept; all other goods were entirely neglected. Deliveries, including two full cargoes to Hiogo, were rather small. Quotations were as follows:—G. E. Grey Shirtings, 7 lbs., 38½ yds. 39 in., $2.30 to 2.40 per piece; 8 lbs., 4 to 8, $2.80 to 2.90 per piece; 9 lbs., $3.35 to 3.45. Cotton Yarn, Nos. 16 to 24, $41 to 43 per picul; Nos. 28 to 32, $42 to 44 per picul; Nos. 38 to 42, $40 to 42. Camlets, BBB and S, 56 to 58 yds. 31 in., $16 to 17 per piece; Camlets, SS, 56 to 58 yds. 31 in., $15 to 16 per piece; Camlets, SSS, 56 to 51 yds. 31 in., $13 to 14 per piece; Long Ells (assorted), $8 to 9.50 per piece.

SHANGHAI.—Grey Shirtings: Prices of these goods had again advanced, chiefly owing to the better native advices from the northern market. Best Eagle chops had been sold to some extent at tls. 2.30 per piece, this being the closing quotation; 7 lbs. Eagles had changed hands at 2 taels per piece. Stocks in first hands were materially reduced. It is a fact worthy of note that the last foreign advices from Tientsin represented that market as quiet at rates under those current at Shanghai—while native information was such as to warrant an active inquiry at advancing prices. Sales for the fortnight from first hands, exclusive of goods sold to arrive, were estimated at 150,000 pieces. T-Cloths continued in good inquiry, and large sales were reported both on the spot and to arrive. Transactions since last mail, exclusive of those to arrive, were estimated at 75,000 pieces. In other manufactures there was no alteration to notice. Metals—Iron: We have still to report a dull market for nail rod, sales only amounting to some 4,000 bundles; there had been no fresh arrivals, still no improvement was manifest, and the tendency seemed to be towards a decline in prices hoop; flat and round, no change. Lead continued firm, and we hear of offers, but not large transactions, at 6.35 taels; a fair business done during the fortnight, principally for export, 8,278 piculs reported outwards to Japan and river ports. Holders were asking 6.50 taels. Coals: During the fortnight a speculative demand arose for Cardiff and English coals, which resulted in putting the prices up for these kinds. Other descriptions remained as last advised. Cardiff: Sales had been made from ship at 11.7.5 taels and 12 taels per ton. Godown coals were held at 13 taels to 13.5 per ton, nominally. English and North Wales: Without arrivals or transactions. Anthracite: Without arrivals or transactions. Australian: Newcastle kinds had been sold at 10.7.5 taels from ship. Sydneys commanded better rates, but were without arrivals. Japan: Sales of mixed cargo were made at 6.7.5 taels. Formosa: Without arrivals. Cargo quotations from ship: Cardiff, 12 taels per ton; English, 11 taels per ton, nominal; North Wales, 11.5 taels per ton, nominal; American, 13 taels per ton, nominal; Australian, 10.7.5 to 11.2.5 taels per ton; Japan, 6.7.5 to 7.5 taels per ton; Formosa, 6.5 to 7 taels per ton, nominal. The arrivals had been—3.566 tons from Great Britain, and 423 tons from Japan; together, 3,989 tons, of which 2,642 tons were to order.

FOOCHOW.—The sales reported were as follows:—Grey Shirtings, 8¼ lbs., 1,600 pieces, at $3 10 to 3.25 per piece; do., 7 lbs., 1,000 pieces, at $2.75 per piece; T-Cloths, 2,300 pieces, at $2.25 to 3.20 per piece; Sandalwood, old, 300 piculs, at $9.30 per picul; do., new, 200 piculs, at $4.20 per picul.

HONG KONG.—Cotton Yarn: Further additions to stock had led to very conservative action on the part of buyers, and the advance last noted had been entirely lost. Piece Goods: 7 lbs. Grey Shirtings, 6 to 6.8 lbs. T-Cloths, Drills, and the better qualities of White Shirtings maintained their former values, but all other descriptions were lower. 8.4 lbs. Grey Shirtings had been entirely neglected. T-Cloths found more favour, and 6 to 6.2 lbs. tended upwards. Quotations for American manufactures were entirely nominal, there being none on the market. A parcel of 1,000 pieces Dutch Drills had been taken at $5.10 per piece. Woollens: Blankets were out of stock, and assorted Long Ells were dearer, some slight demand existing, but other kinds had still further declined. Dutch Camlets had been quitted at a reduction of $2 from former values. Metals: A good demand had existed, and a general advance in values had taken place. Lead had been sold at $8. to arrive in two months' time, and there were few sellers of parcels on the spot. Tin was nominally a little lower, but there was no stock, and first receipts would fetch full prices. Quicksilver was $1 per picul dearer. Coal: Arrivals since our last had been one cargo of Sydney to consumers, and a part cargo of 350 tons English, sold ex ship at $12.75. Sales had also been made of 300 tons English, ex ship, at $13 to 13.25, and 300 tons Sydney "to arrive" at $12. Stocks were far from heavy, and with advice of but few cargoes on the way to others than consumers, holders generally were firm. The quotations were:—Cotton Yarn, No. 16 to 24, $114 to 122 per picul; do., No. 28 to 32, $134 to 142 do.; do., No. 38 to 42, $147 to 152 do.; Grey Shirtings, 7 to 7¾ lbs., $2.30 to 2.35 per piece; do., 8 to 8¾ lbs., $2.80 to 2.92 do.; do., 9 to 10 lbs., $3.90 to 4.20 do.; White Shirtings, 54 to 60 reed, $5.40 to 5.30 do.; do. 64 to 66 reed, $6.15 to 6.25 do.; do. 68 to 72 reed, $6.65 to 6.45 do.; White Spotted do., $3.25 to 3.20 do.; White Brocades, $3.30 to 3.25 do.; American Drills, 30 yards, $2.80 to 2.75 do.; do., 40 yards, $5 to 5.25 do.; Grey T-Cloths, 24 yds., and 32 ins., $2.45 to 2.55 do.; do. 24 do. 36ins. $2.60 to 2.45 do.; Spanish Stripes, $1.02 to to 1 per yard; Long Ells, MM Scarlet, $8.90 to 8.85 per piece; do. Assorted, $8.30 to 8.20; HH Scarlet, $8.90 to 8.85; do. Assorted, $8.10 to 8.20; Camlets, SSS, $14.50 to 14.25; do. SS, $15.50 to 16.25; do. S, $18 to 17.50; do. D, $18 to 18.25; do. BBB, $21.50 to 21.25; Lastings, $15.10 to 15.40. Metals: Iron, Nail Rod, Nos. 1 to 6, $3.05 to 2.97; do. Hoop, $3.25 to 3.35; do. Bar, $3.20 to 3.70; do. Small Round Rod, $3.25 to 3.75; do. Wire, $8.10 to 8; Lead, large, $7.85 to 7.45.

CHINA AND JAPAN EXPORTS.

TEA.

YOKOHAMA.—A good demand for shipment to America had continued throughout the fortnight, and settlements amounting to about 1,600 piculs had been made; arrivals having been on a very limited scale, stocks consisting of medium to fine grades had been considerably reduced, and were computed to be not more than 1,200 piculs. This had no doubt curtailed transactions which would have been considerably larger, but for the difficulty of doing business with so few holders. Prices had advanced fully one dollar per picul and the market closed very firm. The current quotations were:—Common, $18 to 22 per picul; good common $22 to 24; medium, $24 to 26; good medium, $27 to 30; fine, $31 to 32; finest, $33 to 35; choice, $36 to 45.

SHANGHAI.—Black: Natives had been firm in their demands for the very ordinary Tea, of which the stock had for some time consisted, and had succeeded in obtaining their prices when business had been transacted. The settlements consisted of third crop Ningchow kinds, at prices ranging from tls. 20 to 20.7.5. Quotations were unaltered. The stock had received no important additions, and was very trivial in size. Settlements for the fortnight, 2450 chests; Stock, 7 chops, or 450 packages. Green: Little had been passing in the market during the fortnight, and prices show no alteration. Common Fychow had been bought at tls. 27 to 28.7.5, and Shanghai-packed at tls. 26 to 36. Only about 800 packages country packed Tea remained in stock. Settlements for the fortnight, 1850 half-chests; reshipment on owners' account, 590 half-chests; stock, 8 chops, or 3800 packages.

FOOCHOW.—No sales had taken place, nor had there been any arrivals from the interior, for which buyers were on the eve of departure. The contracts entered into, so far as known, were not in excess of those of last season, and advances were probably not quite so heavy; but there was a general expectation that there would be much competition up country for fine teas, and that prices paid for them would be in advance of those of last year, while lower grades would attract less attention and be, relatively, much cheaper.

CANTON.—There had not been any transactions nor any additions to stock, which amounted to about 6,000 boxes of all descriptions. New Canton Greens would arrive to market in about three weeks from date, and Scented Teas about ten days later. Advices from the country induce the belief that a higher range of prices than last season would be paid for first parcels.

SILK.

YOKOHAMA.—After the departure of the last mail business was continued on about the previous scale; arrivals however had been limited, and the assortment on offer had become correspondingly inferior. This added to last home advices had tended to check operations and all common sorts were not easy of sale at quotations. Finest silks continued to command extreme rates. Settlements were estimated at 600 bales, and the stock at 700 bales. The quotations (laid down in London all charges included at exchange 4s. 3d.) were as follows:—Hanks—Mybash, Sinchu, &c., Nos. 1 and 2, 34s. 1d. to 35s. 5d.; ditto, 1, 2 and 3, 30s. 6d. to 32s. 4d.; ditto 2, 3 and 4, 27s. 10d. to 29s. 7d.; inferior, 25s. 1d. to 27s. 4d.; Oshu best, 30s. 5d. to 34s. 1d.; Oshu medium, 26s. 11d. to 29s. 7d.; Oshu inferior, 23s. 4d. to 25s. 1d.; Coshu, 1, 2 nom., 28s. 8d. to 30s. 6d.; Coshu medium, 25s. 1d. to 26s. 11d.; Coshu inferior, 22s. 5d. to 24s. 3d.; Sodai, 1 and 2, 26s. 2d. to 30s.; Sodai inferior, 23s. 4d. to 25s. 1d.

SHANGHAI.—Mr. Holdsworth's Circular dated 31st March is as follows:—"The latest dates received from England are by letters to the 10th February, and by telegrams via Kiachta to the 10th March, the latter giving more favourable accounts of the London market. Since the departure of the French mail steamer on the 27th instant, for which about 400 bales of silk were purchased, but little business has been transacted, the settlements being estimated at about 250 bales, making a total of 650 bales settled for the past fortnight, of which fully 250 bales are Throwns and Rereeled Tsatlees and Hainings. Prices for common silks have ruled slightly under those current for the previous mail, the decline ranging from 10 to 20 tls. per picul, but chops and all good descriptions remain about the same as last quoted. Arrivals from the interior having come forward on a limited scale, the unsold stock is reduced to 300 bales, including about 100 bales of Throwns and Re-reeled Tsatlees and Hainings, the quotations for the former being 460 to 520 tls. per picul, and for the latter 550 to 590 tls. per picul." The quotations (all charges paid to England at exchange 5s. 11d. per tael) were as follows:—Tsatlee, chop No. 1, 29s. 6d. to 29s. 10d. per lb.; do. 2, 28s. 5d. to 28s. 9d.; do. 3, none; Market, do. 3 and 3½, 22s. 1d. to 23s. 10d.; do. 4, 19s. 4d. to 21s. 4d.; do. 5 and com., none. Karshing Taysaam, chop No. 1, 20s. 4d. to 21s. 4d.; do. 2, 18s. 3d. to 19s. 4d.; do. 3, 17s. 7d. to 18s. 1d.; do. 4 and 5 com., none. FREIGHTS AND CHARTERS.

At YOKOHAMA.—To the United Kingdom (there is no vessel loading to New York)), £3 5s. to £3 10s. per steamer, $45 per ton of 40 cubic feet.

At SHANGHAI.—There is no demand for vessels to load home, and although tonnage in harbour is small, rates for coasting charters have further declined. On the departure of the Magellan (nearly full), there will not be any vessel on the berth for home.

At FOOCHOW.—No vessel on the berth.

At HONG KONG and CANTON.—To London £4 per ton of 50c. feet. To New York £3 2s. 6d. per ton of 40c. feet. The Alice (200 tons) and the Spitfire (440 tons) have been chartered to load at Saigon for Bremen at £4 per ton. The Circular of George Holmes estimates the number of disengaged vessels in harbour at 4, representing 1,309 tons.

At MANILA.—The arrival of two large seeking ships, the Sir Jamsetjee Family and Durham, has had a temporary depressing effect upon rates here, but these vessels being now fully engaged, an advance is probable. The former fills up with leaf tobacco for London at £4 10s. per ton of 50 feet. The latter has accepted 844 tons of dry sugar for New York at £3 10s. per ton of 20 cwt., and about 2,300 bales hemp at $12.50 per ton of 20 cwt.

At SINGAPORE.—There is a fair inquiry for tonnage, both for home and coasting. To London and Liverpool vessels on the berth are getting £3 for dead weight and light freight.

At BATAVIA.—Produce continues very scarce, and although no decline in freights has to be recorded, still there is some difficulty in finding employment for tonnage. The current rate to Holland for sugar is 70f. per last, equal to about £3 7s. 6d. per ton E. I. Company's conditions. A brisk business in freights is anticipated as soon as the shipping season fairly opens, say about July.

CASUALTIES.—Advices from Mauritius, dated April 18, state that the Sea Belle, Leslie, from Saigon to Falmouth, which put into that port March 20, leaky and with rudder broken, had discharged her cargo, which was partially damaged, and was being supplied with a new rudder; but the leak being in the top sides she would not require docking. The Philip van Marnix, from Java, reported May 14 aground near Brouwershaven, has since been towed off, after lightening.

THE CHINA AND JAPAN STATION.

On the 11th inst. the First Lord of the Admiralty in introducing the Navy Estimates said:—"With regard to the most important of all our distant stations, that of China, my hon. friend the member for Pontefract said last year that 'We appear to have taken on ourselves the Quixotic duty of being sole protectors of the commerce of every civilised nation,' and of carrying out the police of the seas for the rest of the world. But my hon. friend was probably not aware at the time that, while in the China seas we had 36 ships, the French had at least 22 and the Americans 14; and if the force had been reduced, as he suggested—namely, from 36 ships and 4,082 men to 21 ships and 1,900 men, there would be the greatest danger to the safety of our commerce in those seas, now amounting to about £40,000,000, as well as to the lives of those engaged in it. (Hear.) Of course, we took the opinion of the Foreign-office on this subject, and sent them letters which we had received from Admiral Keppel, whose opinion we asked as to the strength at which the squadron should be kept. In his reply Sir H. Keppel says, 'We have either too few ships or to many open ports where our Consuls require protection.' Admiral King and Sir James Hope also concur with Sir H. Kepple that the China seas do require a large number of ships. It would serve as an illustration of the importance of having a strong force of ships on that station to remind the committee that it had so happened that during last year a revolution broke out in Japan which ended in a civil war, from which the greatest danger was apprehended. In consequence of the unsettled state of Japan and the danger to our treaty rights, Sir H. Parkes wrote to Sir H. Keppel in November last requesting him 'to concentrate at Hiogo as many of Her Majesty's ships as could be spared from other points,' and added that 'a similar course had been recommended by the representatives of those other Powers who had naval forces in Japanese waters.' Very possibly by means of that demonstration we had been able to protect our commercial interests, and there had been no violation of treaty engagements. That is another proof of the valuable service which is rendered by our ships on foreign stations. It was only the other day that we had heard it stated that all the foreign Ministers had left Osaka and repared to Hiogo in order to seek the protection of the ships of war. I should like to know what would have been the consequence if there had been no foreign squadron on that station? Well, last year the squadron consisted of 36 ships and 4,082 men; this year it has been reduced to 34 ships; but the reduction in the number of men is very small,—namely, from 4,082 to 4,008. The reason of that is that it was thought advisable last year to send out, on a special occasion, a large ironclad, the Ocean, and we have now got there the Rodney flagship as well as the large ironclad, but that is an arrangement which will not be permanently required. I now come to the East Indian station, which is the only one on which we have an increase, but this is owing to a cause which will be readily understood—the Abyssinian War. When that war broke out we had no ships at home, and we sent to the Brazils for two, and two also from the China squadron were placed at the disposal of the East Indian commander. Here again we had another instance of the advantage of having ships available on foreign stations, and Captain Edye, of the Satellite, rendered such valuable services in Annesley Bay, in the landing of animals and stores, that, but for him it is doubtful whether the war could have been brought to a close in one campaign."

JOHN CRAWFURD.—This distinguished Oriental scholar and ethnologist died on the 11th inst., at his residence in Elvaston-place, South Kensington. He was born on the 13th of August, 1783, in the island of Islay. His father, Mr. Samuel Crawfurd, a man of sense and prudence, was of an Ayrshire family. He had been brought up to the medical profession, and, visiting Islay, married Margaret Campbell, daughter of James Campbell, of Ballinaley, the proprietor of a small estate which had been for several generations in the family. Their son John was educated in the village school of Bowmore, and to the instruction derived from the master, Daniel Taylor, Mr. Crawfurd used to say he was chiefly indebted for his advancement in life. In 1799 the profession of medicine, for which he never had much taste, having been chosen for him, Mr. Crawfurd repaired for his studies to Edinburgh, where he remained three years. In 1803 he obtained a medical appointment in the Indian Service, embarked for India in April, and landed in Calcutta in September of the same year. For the first five years of his residence in India he was employed in his professional duties with the army, chiefly in the North-West Provinces, in the neighbourhood of Delhi and Agra. In 1808 the same duties took him to Penang, in the Straits of Malacca, where he began to devote himself to that study of the languages and manners of the Malay race which was destined to make him widely known. In 1811, having been brought under the notice of Lord Minto, then Governor-General of India, Mr. Crawfurd was invited to accompany him on the expedition which effected the conquest of Java. After that event, in consequence of his acquaintance with the Malay languages, he was appointed to represent the British Government at the Court of one of the native Princes, and for nearly six years he filled some of the principal diplomatic offices of the island. It was then that he collected the materials for the work which he afterwards published, entitled, "The History of the Indian Archipelago." Java and their other Indian possessions having been restored to the Dutch, Mr. Crawfurd returned to England in 1817, and in 1820 published the work just mentioned. In 1821 he went back to India, and shortly after his return was appointed by the first Marquis of Hastings, at that time Governor-General, to the Diplomatic Mission to Siam and Cochin China. In 1823 Mr. John Adam, ad interim Governor-General, appointed him to administer the new settlement of Singapore, on the resignation of its founder, Sir Stamford Raffles. In that position he remained three years, and concluded with the native chiefs, to whom the settlement belonged, the convention by which we hold its sovereignty. In 1826 he returned to Bengal, and was forthwith appointed by the Governor-General, Lord Amherst, Commissioner in Pegu, and eventually, on the conclusion of peace, Envoy to the Burmese Court. In 1827 Mr. Crawfurd finally returned to England, and in the following year published an account of his mission to Siam and Cochin China, and in 1829 another of his mission to Burmah. After this period, long leisure, good health, and an inclination to study and capacity for work enabled him to keep up and perfect his stores of Indian and Eastern information. He was an indefatigable contributor to the Press on matters relating to the East, and indeed on many other subjects. In 1852 he published a grammar and dictionary of the Malay languages, and in 1856 a descriptive dictionary of Malay and the languages of the Philippine Archipelago, works which secured for their author the respect of the philological world. But this list of his services and publications gives but a faint conception of the varied acquirements and genial character of the man whose loss is now deplored by a wide circle of friends. All members of the Geographical and Ethnological Societies will miss the tall form of the evergreen veteran who scarcely ever failed to take part in their discussions, and who, while stoutly maintaining his own views, showed a forbearance and courtesy in listening to others which might well be imitated by all members of learned societies. Of singularly simple and unostentatious bearing, few were more able, and certainly none more ready, to impart sound information to those who sought his advice and assistance. A self-made man, he showed none of that jealousy which sometimes makes self-made men believe that kind of creation ended when they were made. In society, ever hale and hearty in body, ever fresh and vigorous in mind, he seemed to be of no age in particular, but in some sort to belong to all, and thus men of a younger generation both loved and respected him; for they felt that near him they would find warm shelter, not cold shade, that any merit they might have would be fully appreciated, and that they would receive from the mellow octogenarian a sympathy and consideration for all shades and phases of opinion and thought, too often wanting in circles where men of science seem to meet rather as antagonists pitted against each other in an arena than as fellow-soldiers bound to combat ignorance and error to the death. One of the latest public acts of Mr. Crawford was his speech at the banquet to General Cavenagh, reported in our issue of 18th March. Mr. Crawfurd leaves a son and two daughters to lament his loss.

THE COOLIE MUTINY ON BOARD THE "ESPERANCE."—A letter appears in the Standard as follows:—"In your journal there is a short account of a mutiny of Chinese coolies on board a ship bound for Havana. If your readers only knew the horrors of the coolie slave trade, I think most of them would wish that the wretches had succeeded, even in mutiny; death itself would be better than the subsequent fate of the coolies on the sugar plantations at Havana, or at the work on the guano islands. Are all our members of Parliament so busy that none can be troubled to make themselves acquainted with the particulars of the detestable slave trade carried on under the name of emigration from the barracoons of Macao? No one can say anything against the admirable system as administered under the surveillance of our consuls in China for supplying our West India Islands with coolies; it is excellent. Far different is it from the kidnapping trade by which coolies are obtained at a much cheaper rate, there being then only one side to the bargain. The Foreign-office must contain many despatches and accounts from the various members of our civil service in China, giving statements about the horrible traffic, 'pig trade,' as the Chinese themselves call it, from the helpless way in which the victims are carried off and sold, first at Macao and then at Havana. Any influential person who may be disposed to take up the cause of the Chinese slaves must be prepared for considerable opposition, the trade being such a lucrative one to those engaged in it. Many persons of better European blood than the degenerate Portuguese of Macao are generally supposed to be implicated in the villanous but dollar-producing business.—I enclose my card, and beg to remain, yours, &c.,—FANQUL."

LONDON MISSIONARY SOCIETY.—The seventy-fourth annual meeting of the above society was held on the 14th inst. at Exeter Hall. Mr. W. E. Baxter, M.P., presided, supported by Mr. G. Leeman, M.P., Mr. T. Barnes, M.P., and a large number of other gentlemen interested in the welfare of the society. The report read by the secretary stated that "For thirty years, between 1831-61, throughout Great Britain and Ireland the receipts amounted to only £416,795; between 1861 and 1866 it slightly increased, and rose to £49,145; in 1867 it reached £52,601. This year it has amounted to £59,264, being an increase on the past year of £6,663." The Rev. Newman Hall moved the first resolution, proposing the adoption of the report. The Rev. Mr. Murat, from China, seconded the motion, which was carried nem. con. A resolution re-electing the officers having been carried, a vote of thanks to the chairman closed the proceedings.

LONDON, MONDAY, MAY 18, 1868.

HONG KONG.

THE recently published despatch of Governor MACDONNELL to the COLONIAL SECRETARY touches on some points that we should scarcely expect to find mentioned in a Blue-book. For instance, that terrible philippic against the "waste and extravagance" indulged in by "those assuming the position of partners in the leading houses," which occurs in section 62, can hardly be considered in good taste. True, the almost regal hospitality and munificence that were justifiable in the palmy days of the China trade are quite out of place in these later times of loss and disaster; still, it is not easy to discontinue suddenly habits that have been the growth of many years; and, we believe, that except in a few cases, a good deal has lately been effected in the way of retrenchment. This is a point that his EXCELLENCY might have dealt more tenderly with, for if the merchants of Hong Kong have been profuse in their private expenditure they have ever been generous in their support of public institutions and in contributing to any project for promoting the general welfare of the colony. Besides, the crisis through which China has just passed has been in itself a sharp lesson, and might well be left to work out its salutary results in checking extravagance and over-speculation, without any gratuitous homilies on those vices from Sir RICHARD MACDONNELL. The despatch under consideration derives its chief interest, however, from these two circumstances; in the first place, it embodies the GOVERNOR'S defence and justification of his new scheme of legislation, and in the second it affords—at a most opportune time—strong evidence in support of the efforts now being made to throw off the odious burden of a military contribution.

Under the first head, the first noticeable feature is the new set of police and gaol regulations, which seem to have already produced two most desirable ends; a diminution in crime, and a saving of public expenditure. The wisdom of these reforms we believe has never been denied. Then we come to the gambling question, and find that Sir RICHARD MACDONNELL'S defence of his much-abused ordinance amounts simply to this—Gambling prevailed to an immense extent among the lower orders of the Chinese population, tending to perpetuate crime and disorder, and further to debase an already degraded and dangerous class. There was no possibility of checking this by any means short of force, and the only force available, the police, was corrupted throughout by the owners of the gaming-houses. The idea of putting a stop to gambling being thus quite out of the question, it seemed to the GOVERNOR that the next best thing was to keep it as far as possible under Government supervision. This could only be done by licensing certain houses, the keepers of which would be certain, in pursuit of their own interests, to inform against all who might practise the trade without a licence. Thus the gaming would be brought practically within tangible limits; but to keep order, even within those recognised limits, was impossible, without exacting payment of such a sum for the licence that its forfeiture would really be a heavy penalty. The receipt of any revenue from such a source, the GOVERNOR observes, is most distasteful to him, as well as to Her MAJESTY'S Government; but no other expedient presented itself. And, as an experiment, we really cannot see why it should not be accepted. As regards the disposal of the revenue there need be no hesitation. It comes from a bad source—but that is no reason why it may not be used for a good purpose. This money, or some of it, formerly went to corrupt the police force; let it now be spent in public improvements, and surely no one will deny that while in the former case it did harm, in the latter it would do good. We now come to the Stamp Act, a subject that has already been so fully argued that little remains to be said about it. From the first we recognised the expediency of the measure, and predicted that with some modifications such as a short trial would suggest, it would be found neither oppressive nor unjust; and this seems to have been verified. When it has been working a few years and has lost its novelty, and when (as we must hope will be the case) an improvement in the state of the colony admits of some reduction in the taxation, we should not be surprised if a majority of the colonists were to prefer the retention of the Stamp duties, and the abolition or reduction of some other impost.

We have adverted to the tendency of Governor MACDONNELL'S despatch to support the recent petition of the colonists as its second chief feature of interest. With regard to the military contribution itself, he merely points out (clause 46) that the arrears are still unpaid, and likely to remain so, without discussing the justice or injustice of the impost; but at the outset of his despatch he forcibly calls attention to the narrow limits of the colony and its totally unproductive nature, and at its conclusion he dwells on "the vast importance to Great "Britain of this small and barren island," pointing out its value as the most secure depot for military and naval stores east of Singapore, and the convenience of its splendid harbour and docks for our fleet. Clause No. 85 is still more emphatic:—"There is, however, no parallel between this and any other "British settlement. It owes its importance to no productions "or manufactures of its own. The very trade which it controls, "and the shipments which it orders, are for the most part con-"ducted many hundred miles away from Hong Kong. It is a "mere depot, which may be regarded as maintained for the gene-"ral convenience of Her Majesty's Government and of British in-"terests, so largely connected with the trade of China." The words we have printed in italics, coming from such a source, show, as conclusively as any argument can show, the glaring injustice of taxing the colonists for the maintenance of a force kept up, not for their needs, but "for the general convenience of Her MAJESTY'S Government."

CEYLON AFFAIRS.

THE colonists of Ceylon are to be congratulated on having such able and persevering champions in this country. Mr. Watkin and the other gentlemen, who lately failed to procure a select committee of the House of Commons to consider the Ceylon petition, have taken another step. On the 5th inst. a deputation, consisting of Mr. Watkin, M.P., Mr. Gorst, M.P., Sir Arther Buller, M.P., Mr. Robertson, M.P., Mr. Bazley, M.P., Mr. James R. Mellor, Mr. Bischoff, and Mr. J. M. Grant, waited upon the Colonial Secretary for the purpose of pressing on the Colonial Office the necessity of appointing a commission to consider the grievances of which the people of Ceylon now complain. Mr. Gorst introduced the deputation. It was stated that, in consequence of the falling off of the population, there had been an increase in the price of labour; that the desuetude into which the irrigation works had been allowed to fall had led to a decrease in the production of food, and a great part of the ill state of things in the colony was attributed to the manner in which the island is at present governed. After having heard several members of the deputation, the Duke of Buckingham stated that it would take some little time to consider the various matters that had been referred to, and he rather hoped to have the advantage of a personal interview with the present Governor, whom he expected here almost immediately, on short leave. Within a month he would intimate the course that he thought it right for the Government to take under the circumstances.

The P. and O. Company's new steamer Travancore, which is the largest vessel that has ever been built on the Forth, is now nearly completed at Granton, and she will be shortly ready for sea. The Travancore is a screw-steamer, 300 feet long, of 2,300 tons burden, and with engines of 400-horse power. Her fittings are most elegant—the saloon, which is 70 feet long by 15 feet wide, being particularly handsome. She will sail on her first trip from Southampton to Alexandria on the 30th inst., with ithe India and China mails. We understand that a contract has been made with Messrs. Day, of Southampton, for a steamer of 3,000 tons and 600-horse power, and a similar contract with Messrs. Denny and Co., Dumbarton.

HOW TO CIVILISE THE JAPANESE.

In an article with the above heading the Examiner makes the following comments upon the execution of Ikada Ise, the instigator of the outrage at Kobe :—

It appears that some time ago a French soldier committed the wanton offence of breaking through a procession of Prince Bizen and his retainers, and the result was that he was wounded. The French Minister insisted upon redress; and the Japanese Government, feeling no doubt that they were powerless to resist, delivered up the officer in command of the party, whose rank was that of a colonel in the army.

The honour of the French nation had been wounded in the person of a drunken soldier, and blood alone could wipe away the stain. The execution took place in a temple in Hiogo, and the company on the occasion was a very select one, composed of Japanese nobles equal in rank to the victim, and of one member of each Foreign Legation. The offending officer bore himself bravely; he declared that he felt himself innocent, and had only done what the laws of his country, his own sense of honour, and his duty to his Prince required of him. He might have added, he had only done what a French colonel would assuredly have done to a Japanese, who should have wantonly broken the ranks of a regiment in the streets of Paris. Having made this statement, he plunged his knife into his body, and at the same time his friends decapitated him. The head was placed in a lacquer basin, and handed round to the Representatives of European Civilisation, with the pertinent question whether they were now "satisfied." Much sympathy, it is added, was felt for the victim of French susceptibility —who was, we are told, thoroughly ignorant of the rights and privileges of foreigners in Japan, and who suffered death without having inflicted it, for the French soldier survived his injuries.

Our readers may remember an English subject, Mr. Meagher, being cut down under similar but far less excusable circumstances, in the streets of Vienna, by an Austrian subaltern. Our demands for reparation were met by the assurance that the officer had only done his duty. It might be worth while to inquire whether the British Legation was represented at this disgraceful exhibition in Hiogo. Since then it appears a whole French boat's crew has been massacred by a party of Japanese, and Sir Harry Parkes was, it is reported, attacked on his way from a visit to the Mikado. Of course there will be more reprisals on the part of the Europeans—Consuls will again and again combine and strike their flags, and by "vigorous notes" exact vengeance and blood-money; but we shall not thus inspire the Japanese with respect for the character of Western civilisation. We only hope t may turn out that Englishmen took no part in playing the bully on this occasion, and in lending official sanction to the disgusting exhibition referred to.

THE STEAMER "QUANG-TUNG."

This steamer, which we have already noticed as under despatch for Messrs. Douglas, Lapraik, and Co., leaves Aberdeen on the 18th or 19th for Hong Kong, calling in at Plymouth.

The Quang-tung is a handsome vessel, brig rigged, 1,109 tons builders' and 936 tons Customs' measurement. Her engines are on the direct-acting principle, 170-horse power nominal, and fitted with all the latest improvements, including the newly invented apparatus which has been patented in Glasgow, for clearing off the ashes and clinkers through a tube which discharges into the sea, and which is supplied with a jet of steam of sufficient strength to carry up all the refuse thrown in. This ingenious invention obviates the hauling up on deck now in practice on board all steamers, which is very troublesome and inconvenient in many respects. At the trial trip the speed attained was nearly fourteen knots, with fifty-eight revolutions, and a pressure of twenty-seven pounds. All the machinery worked with great ease, and the out-turn reflects the greatest credit on Mr. Russell, the superintendent of the engine department of the builders, Hall, Russell and Co. The consumption of coal is equal to about twenty tons per day. The draught of water on the trial was 14.6 aft and 13.3 forward; the coals, &c., on board being equal to 650 tons. After the run at the two measured miles she proceeded for a few hours to sea, and gave general satisfaction. She is commanded by Captain Sheppard, and we trust she will have a safe and quick passage to Hong Kong.

We have received several communications complaining of the detention of the P. and O. Company's steamers at Marseilles after the passengers have embarked. The Company now, in accordance with their mail contract, order the passengers to be on board at seven A.M. on the morning of departure; the mails from London, as a rule, are put on board before eight, but the German and general Continental mails seldom or never arrive until past ten, and it is generally eleven before the steamer can sail. This is a very great hardship both on the passengers and the company, for the delay involves a loss of steam, and in some cases jeopardises the arrival at Alexandria on Friday, as it is not possible to enter that port after dark. The P. and O. Company have, we understand, brought the grievance to the notice of the POSTMASTER-GENERAL, and it is hoped that arrangements will be effected to enable the steamers to leave at nine at the latest.

THE HONG KONG ASSOCIATION OF LONDON.

The following are the speeches delivered by Mr. WHITE and Mr. SUTHERLAND at the interview of the deputation with the Duke of BUCKINGHAM on the 2nd inst. The presentation of the memorial itself to the House of Commons has been purposely delayed until after the interview with the Colonial Secretary; and it is very fortunate that such was the case, for amid the confusion attending the late party struggle it would have had small chance of even a moment's attention. When anything like quiet prevails in the House it will be presented.

Mr. WHITE said that, although their numbers were not great, their interests were large in the colony of Hong Kong, and they all had a deep personal interest in its prosperity. Irrespective of such claims on the attention of the Colonial-office, they also represented an organisation which had recently been constituted at Hong Kong with the view to protect the interests of the colony, the residents of which were unanimously of opinion that they had grievously suffered by the requisitions of the Home and Colonial Governments. As the inhabitants of Hong Kong had practically no voice in the expenditure of the taxation levied upon them, it behoved the home and colonial authorities to be chary of exacting more than was absolutely required for the exigencies of the Government. He was led to believe that the present scale of taxation at Hong Kong—say from 13 to 15 per cent. on rack rentals—was an excess of that levied on any other Crown colony. The colonists complained justly of the demand of the Home Government for an annual contribution of £20,000 towards the military expenditure. This complaint was not engendered by what the late Lord Castlereagh called "an ignorant impatience of taxation," but was based on grounds which had received the sanction of a high authority—the late Governor of Hong Kong (Sir Hercules Robinson). Indeed the colonists would be content to rest their case, as put by the late Governor to the Home Government in 1863. Sir H. Robinson then alleged that the demand as originally made by the late Duke of Newcastle (as Colonial Minister) was based upon calculations of the permanent revenue of the colony, which were "altogether fallacious," as there would be no available surplus, and that outlay on public works which were assumed to be optional by the Secretary of State for the Colonies, were absolutely indispensable. The late Governor also urged that the liability of the seawalls and the roads to serious damage by typhoons and mountain torrents, imposed the necessity of providing for such casualties, and that in his opinion, as far as the colony was concerned, the military might be safely removed. He added, "I am justified in asserting that the troops stationed in Hong Kong are maintained there for national as distinguished from colonial objects."

He (Mr. White) would further remark that all the objections of the late Governor, in 1863, had been more than corroborated by subsequent occurrences materially to the detriment of the colony. Since then, if he were not mistaken, two typhoons and two fires had desolated the colony; besides, the commercial crisis here had reacted terribly on the trade of Hong Kong. Indeed, strong as were the reasons against the levy of the military contribution in 1863, recent events and the present condition of the colony gave them ten-fold force. He had been connected with Hong Kong since its settlement, and when he first visited that island the Government abode was a mat-shed. He well recollected that then and subsequently when the Fokien and other native merchants wished to establish hongs in the colony, the local Government would not consent, the reason given being that the island was taken as a pied a terre for Imperial purposes, and that it was not wished to attract local traders. And such appeared to be the systematic policy of the colonial authorities. He (Mr. White) need not point out to the Secretary of State that if Hong Kong had been made an emporium of the junk or coast trade, the prosperity of the island would have been immeasurably augmented, and the area of taxation greatly extended and less burdensome than at the present time. He thought that colonies should be self-supporting, and he believed that had the original colonists of Hong Kong been left to manage their own affairs it would have been a self-supporting colony, as it would have become ere this the abode of the opulent hong merchants and an emporium of the coast trade, but for the express action of the Colonial Government. On reference to the official correspondence, it would appear that the late Governor would not have urged the establishment of the Mint at Hong Kong but for his wish to save the loss then accruing to the Imperial Government by the loss in exchange. The original estimate was £20,000, and the expenditure had been about £80,000, without any benefit whatever to the colony, at the expense of which it was constructed and maintained. Mr. White added that Mr. Sutherland, lately a member of Council, would next address his Grace, and that he (Mr. Sutherland), as well as other members of the deputation, would gladly reply to any questions that might be put, as they all had been in the colony more recently than himself.

Mr. SUTHERLAND commenced by vindicating the motives of the colonists, and pointed out that although they suffered from many grievances and disadvantages, they had confined themselves rigidly to the one subject in which they considered they had been unjustly dealt with by the Imperial Government, viz., the military contribution, and even this they represented only because they felt and knew that the colony had lost a considerable part of its former prosperity owing to the burdens which had been laid upon it, and that this downward progress would still continue unless some practical relief were obtained. Mr. White had spoken very fully in support of the arguments which had been brought forward in the Hong Kong petition, but there were one or two points which he thought it advisable to notice further. In the first place, the chief arguments advanced in that petition were threefold. 1st, that the troops were kept in Hong Kong not for local but for Imperial purposes. 2nd, that the military contribution had been imposed under an entire misconception of the true state of the colonial finances. 3rd, that the revenue raised in the colony was already oppressive in the burdens which it imposed, but was still insufficient to meet both the ordinary expenditure and the military contribution. He would only allude to the first two points by saying that nothing could be clearer than what was shown in the public correspondence as to the very mistaken estimate of the resources of Hong Kong to produce a revenue. It was there shown, as the opinion of Her Majesty's Government, that the financial position of the colony would exhibit a large surplus every year, and had such an estimate ever been realised, no doubt there would have been a primâ facie case for debiting the colony with a military contribution. But so far from realising this surplus, his Grace knew well that every year lately had shown a very serious deficiency, and this in the face also of increased taxation. He should not dwell upon the reasons for which troops were sent to Hong Kong. But they certainly saved the colony nothing in the way of a police force, and they could never be considered of any value for the purpose of external defence. These, however, might now be considered as matters belonging to the past, and he would not dwell upon them further. It was of much greater importance to consider the present position of the colony in reference to this contribution, and on this point he had no hesitation in saying that the present revenue obtained from the colony was too great, that its prosperity had been seriously affected by the increased cost of living, more particularly among the native inhabitants; and that, so far from being able to meet a military contribution, he questioned very much whether the colony could clear its own expenses.

He would ask his Grace to consider for one moment the past history of Hong Kong, and the conditions under which it existed. There was a barren island, so barren indeed that it did not produce a single article for consumption or use, and a few years ago was entirely uninhabited, which had grown up through a series of unexpected and fortuitous events into a comparatively thriving and certainly useful colony. At the time it was established it was never expected to attain the success which it did nor to secure a position independent of any support. For many years its revenues were entirely inadequate to provide for its wants, but Her Majesty's Government considered the place of such importance to British interests that they freely granted a considerable subvention in payment of its expenses. Happily it was enabled by circumstances to emerge from that dependent state, and to relieve the mother country of all charge for its support; but no sooner did it gain this position than the Colonial-office threw it into a state of semi-bankruptcy by insisting upon its paying this military contribution. It was a place absolutely without resources of its own, and had no manufacturing industry to render its prosperity permanent. It was a mere port of transhipment, which depended for its success entirely upon its convenience and cheapness. In this way it had grown to be what it was; but he contended most strongly that the moment the expense of carrying on business there exceeded certain limits, the trade which had grown up in connection with it would pass into other channels. Unfortunately, there was the strongest evidence that this had to some extent already occurred. There were no reliable statistics of trade to be referred to, but there was a very sufficient criterion to be had in the state of the population and the value of property. It was an undoubted fact that in both respects there had been a retrograde movement of a most serious character during the last three years. The population had declined, and there was a depreciation of at least thirty per cent. in the value of property. These and many other facts, only perceptible to people on the spot, effectually demonstrate the principle which he had laid down. A diminution in the native population would, of course, result in the increase of burdens on the limited European class, and that this had taken effect already was proved by the fact that several European firms had moved their head-quarters from Hong Kong to Shanghai. Surely under these circumstance any policy which enhanced the drawbacks under which the colony laboured was a very unwise one for Her Majesty's Government to pursue, for it would certainly end in the colony again requiring pecuniary support. He could not conclude without pointing out the great need in which the colony stood of funds for various important works such as the praya, drainage, and roads. In these respects the state of the colony was greatly behind its actual wants, and every day these deficiencies became more difficult to remedy. From long experience he knew that there were no people more ready or more willing to bear any legitimate burdens than the inhabitants of Hong Kong; but there was a limit which they could not afford to pass. Relieving the colony from the military contribution would not produce any magical effect, but it would remove a very sensible and he believed an unjust burden, and do much to restore confidence in the permanent progress of the place.

VESSELS FOR THE CHINA STATION, &c.

We are glad to notice that at length some of the new class of gunboats built specially for service against pirates are being despatched to China. The Dwarf, 2, twin screw (composite-built) gun-vessel, Commander C. Walker, sailed from Spithead for China on the 6th inst.

The Avon, recently commissioned for China, is one of the new class of gunboats built of wood on an iron frame, with twin screws of 120 collective horse power. She is 464 tons burden, and carries 4 guns, viz., 2 20-pounder Armstrongs as bow and stern chasers, 1 64-pounder shunt gun, and 1 6½ ton rifled gun, besides a 24-pounder rocket; and the crew are armed with Snider rifles. She is intended for the suppression of piracy in the China seas. Her crew consists of 70 men, and the following are the names of the officers:—Commander, G. D. Fitzroy; lieutenant, John Hope; master, F. Williams; assistant-surgeon, J. Shawood; paymaster, M. Mooney; engineers, Mr. Hill, Mr. Shawyer, and Mr. Grant; gunner, Mr. Nightingale. The lieutenant, Mr. Hope, has seen a good deal of service in New Zealand.

The Mecanee line-of-battle ship, fitted out as a hospital ship for service at Hong Kong, arrived at Spithead on the 3rd inst. from the Nore, on her way down Channel, in tow of the Medusa. The Mecanee has been ashore somewhere off Margate, and had to slip one of her anchors and a quantity of cable. The fault of getting the ship ashore is said to lie entirely with the Medusa, which had the line-of-battle ship in tow at the time, and two of her officers are under arrest in consequence. The Mecanee remains for the present anchored at Spithead.

On the 28th ult. an application was made in the Admiralty Court on behalf of Commander Morant and the officers and crew of Her Majesty's gunboat Grasshopper. It appeared that in a series of captures, commencing on the 19th day of November, 1865, twenty piratical vessels in the China seas had been seized by the plaintiffs, and that the estimated number of the crews of the piratical vessels was 483. The Court decreed for the capture, and pronounced for the estimated number of men. The Queen's Advocate appeared for the captors.

HOLLAND.

ROTTERDAM, May 6.

The prolix debate in the Second Chamber of the States General, noticed in my last letter, has resulted in a sharp party fight, in which the Ministry have vainly endeavoured to extricate themselves from a difficult position. The Minister for the Interior was the debater on the side of the Cabinet, and received the attack of the Liberal party in a very severe manner; whilst he held the rod of dissolution over the members of the Second Chamber. He, however, did not succeed in frightening them; and, as the final consequence, the budget of foreign affairs was rejected by 37 against 35 votes. The Ministers then asked for their dismissal; but in the meantime a report was afloat that they had determined to dissolve the Second Chamber for the third time. I need not say that a thousand rumours are afloat as to the advice which the Cabinet has laid before his Majesty. The Liberal papers in general are of opinion that the Ministry must have felt that practically the Conservative game has been played out, and that it would be better for the future credit of the country that the Government should revert to their Liberal opponents. But, on the other side, it is said that Mr. Heemskerk declines to retire, and will merely fill up the places of Messrs van Zuylen and Schimmelpenninck, who will tender their resignations. Of course I am not in the secrets of the Cabinet, but nevertheless I venture to express my opinion that Mr. Heemskerk will tell his Majesty that he is still ready to carry on the Government.

In any event some members of the present Cabinet will have to retire; bu even then the crisis will not have ended. On the contrary, the contest will be again renewed, and from both sides the same facts will be brought forward, notwithstanding that they have been explained already a dozen times. The truth is that the Conservatives are at their wit's ends for a course of action; they desire still to retain the reins of Government, but on the other hand they fear that their measures will create a breach between the people and the Crown. They are quite aware that the Liberal party, instead of being as before dispirited and broken up, is like an army that has won a great battle, and is bound together by the memory of what has been done.

A rumour reaches me at the moment of writing these lines that Mr. Van Reenen, the President of the Second Chamber—a half-and-half man—will be asked by the King to organise a Cabinet. I do not, however, consider this report well founded.

Mr. De Casembroot, M.P., proposed an amendment when the budget of foreign affairs was under discussion, to increase the salary of our Consul at Yedo, by an addition of 3,000f., in which event it would amount to 15,000f. This proposal has, of course, no effect, now that the budget itself has been rejected.

ROTTERDAM, May 14.

The Ministerial crisis has not advanced one step towards solution; on the contrary, the position is more confused than ever, and at the moment of writing no conjecture can be formed, with the least certainty, as to what will happen. I need not add that a great many rumours are circulating; it is said that Mr. van Reenen, who had accepted the heavy task of composing a Cabinet, has declined the office, having endeavoured in vain to find the necessary colleagues. Indeed it seems impossible to organise a Cabinet d'affaires, a Ministry of fusion or transition, notwithstanding that circumstances are favourable for it. Mr. Jacob has refused to enter a Cabinet with van Reenen as Minister of the Colonial Department. The Dagblad concludes that now it is proved impossible to organise either a Liberal Cabinet or a Ministry of transition, there is no other alternative but for the Heemskerk Government to remain in power, of course with some modifications of the Ministry.

Some papers speak about a Liberal Cabinet with Mr. Thorbecke as Premier, and Mr. Mirandalle as Minister of the Colonial Department. I, however, repeat that these are rumours which later on will prove entirely without foundation. I think nothing will transpire officially with regard to the solution of the crisis, before the First Chamber of the States-General passes a vote upon the proposal of the five members to forward an address to the King, respecting the actual crisis and its origin. The Ministerialists, of course, have done their utmost to put down this proposal, but with an overwhelming majority (26 to 11 votes) the prise en consideration in the sections was voted, and the discussions will begin at the sitting of next Friday.

Another rumour says that Mr. Heemskerk will wait for the result of the elections of the Provincial States—by which the First Chamber is elected—in order that if the Conservatives gain the majority he would dissolve both the Houses. There is some reason to believe that the actual ministers wish to remain in power, as they have laid before the members of the Second Chamber several important Bills since they asked for their dismissal.

The latest news from the Coast of Africa is very unfavourable. The natives were skirmishing with the Dutch soldiers and the latter were retaliating. Our position seems to be threatened, while at the same time there is no sufficient military force to defend our compatriots.

MONETARY AND COMMERCIAL.

Public securities are firm, but there is almost an entire absence of business. Should, however, foreign affairs remain in the same satisfactory state as at present, the public may perhaps be induced to come forward as investors. THE AUSTRIAN EXPEDITION.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

The Austrian expedition to the Far East has now arrived at such a stage of forwardness as to be ready for constitutional discussion by the two Parliaments of Austria Proper and Hungary. Herr von Gorove, the Minister for Commerce at Ofen-Pesth, has intimated at Vienna that the former offer of a fixed sum of 130,000 florins is withdrawn, and that Hungary will pay thirty per cent. of the expenses, but expressing a wish not to be called on for more than 100,000 florins this year. The despatch mentions the unanimity of all parties as to the value of the expedition, and the important benefits likely to be derived from it; and deduces from this that as the quota of the expenses cannot be calculated by the proportionate numbers of the population, but solely by the power of exporting goods suitable for sale in the East, it is but reasonable that Hungary should have to bear a proportionately smaller share than the more commercial half of the empire; and therefore, with a proper respect for the dignity of the Hungarian Crown, the Government of that kingdom are ready to abide by their present offer. The Austrian Government are now engaged in drawing up a Bill on the subject, to be immediately brought before Parliament as urgent, and proposing to grant a credit for the larger moiety of the expenses—because required for the fitting out of the squadron—as a supplementary addition to the Budget of 1868.

Another piece of Austrian news is the failure of the "First Export and Import Company" at Vienna, which was established not more than a couple of years ago with a great flourish of trumpets, and which I reported at the time in one of my letters in your columns. This unfortunate affair may interest many of your readers in the Far East, where several agencies were established. In the balance-sheet filed in the Court of Bankruptcy at Vienna, the debts and liabilities of the company are specified and amount to 446,268 florins; whilst the assets—some of which, moreover, are doubtful—are only 219,546 florins, showing a deficit of 226,000 florins. The managing director was a Mr. S. Auspitzer, and the other members of the board were, A. Wessenberg, C. A. Kohl, Felix Reuterer, Caspar Aufreiter, and J. Grillmayer.

RUSSIA, GERMANY, &c.

HAMBURG, May 15.

In the North German Federal Parliament Count Bismark has been defeated for the first time. He proposed to contract a Federal loan for ten millions of dollars for naval purposes, and more especially for hurrying on the defences and arsenals at the future two great naval dockyards at Jahde on the North Sea coast and at Kiel in the Baltic. Parliament, however, refused to make any debts, and as the Budget for the army and navy for the present year has been passed some months ago, orders are already given for the greatest economy in both branches of the service. In the army fifteen men in every battalion are to be released from duty with their corps and permitted to return to their homes on furloughs of uncertain duration, though they are of course still liable to be recalled to active duty in case their services are required on a sudden emergency. In the naval department similar measures are being taken; no more expensive Konig Wilhelms are to be ordered in England, one thousand seamen are discharged, the works at Jahde and Kiel, commenced so energetically, are discontinued, and the proposed expedition to the Far East is abandoned for this year, so that the inhabitants of Formosa may for the present sleep in tranquillity, without fear of a sudden coup de main from the black, white, and red flag. The Hertha and Medusa, which were selected for the expedition and were being fitted out as speedily as possible, so as to be able to sail at the end of this month, have suddenly received counter-orders and are to be dismantled and laid up in ordinary.

COMMERCIAL.

In Tea considerable sales have been made by dealers, principally in Congou, Souchong, and common to good ordinary Pecco, partly for shipment and partly on speculation. The sales by importers comprised 1,257 quarter chests, and 558 eighths of Congou ex Oscar Vidal from Foochow, as well as 834 packages of Souchong, and 50 do. of Hyson per same vessel; 909 chests of Congou ex Lauderdale (via London); 474 do. Congou, and 101 do. Souchong ex Elizabeth Nicholson (via London), and 239 packages of Souchong ex Grasmere (via Bremen). The prices of all descriptions are firm, and the market exhibits a tendency to rise.

In floating cargoes of Rice no transactions are reported, but a large business has been done in cleaned grain at former quotations. Cassia Lignea continues in good demand at 12½ schillings banco, but it is difficult to be had at that figure, as holders generally are unwilling to sell under 12¾. There is more inquiry for Cloves and higher prices are paid. Pepper firm. Spelter neglected, no sales being reported and prices looking downwards. In discount no alteration.

VICE-CHANCELLORS' COURTS.

THE BANK OF HINDUSTAN, CHINA, AND JAPAN.

On the 7th inst. Vice-Chancellor Giffard decided the case of "The Imperial Bank of China, India, and Japan (Limited) v. the Bank of Hindustan, China, and Japan (Limited)." This was a suit for the purpose of setting aside an amalgamation between the Imperial Bank and the Bank of Hindustan as against the plaintiff company, or, at all events, as against the plaintiffs, Martin and Higgs, and the other non-assenting shareholders of the plaintiff company, on the ground that the transaction sought to be set aside was ultra vires as to both the companies being neither an amalgamation within article 62 of the articles of association, nor a transaction within the provisions of the 161st section of the Companies' Act, 1862, and that the voluntary winding-up and special resolutions respecting the same were insufficient to authorise or validate the arrangement, and that the liquidators appointed thereunder were not thereby authorised or justified in giving effect to the arrangement, and parting with the funds and assets of the company without the assent of the plaintiffs and the other dissentient shareholders. It was also contended that the effect of the arrangement was to double the liability of the members of the Imperial Bank, and in addition to deprive them of the right of having any shares in the Bank of Hindustan, unless upon paying a premium of £6 a share, of which £1 per share, amounting in all to £20,000, was to go towards increasing the promotion money to be paid for the formation of the Imperial Bank.

For the defendants, the Bank of Hindustan, it was contended that although the transaction could not be supported as an amalgamation under article 62 of the articles of association, it was wholly within section 161 of the Companies' Act, 1862. It was also contended that the transaction was perfectly bona fide, as the Bank of Hindustan was in flourishing circumstances at the time of the amalgamation; and further, that, looking at the length of time that had elapsed, the liabilities incurred on the faith of the arrangement, and the impossibility of restoring matters to their original footing, the arrangement was one which ought not to be disturbed.

The Vice-Chancellor said that the plaintiffs were entitled to a decree. It was admitted, and very properly admitted, that this amalgamation was one which could not be supported under the articles of association of the Imperial Bank, but it was rested on sec. 161 of the Companies' Act, 1862. Looking at the actual terms of the arrangement, they were something very different from that which was contemplated by section 161. It could not be maintained that an agreement which imposed upon each individual shareholder of the Imperial Bank the necessity of paying up £6 per share, not towards the capital from which he would derive the profits, but by way of premium, was an amalgamation or fusion of interests with the other company. With regard to acquiescence, the defendant company had assumed no liability whatever on behalf of the company whose assets they had taken; and further, it was very difficult to make out acquiescence in the case of a company. The case of the plaintiffs was not embarrassed by that objection, and justice required that the transaction should be set aside, subject to this declaration, that inasmuch as many of the shareholders of the plaintiff company became shareholders in the defendant company on the footing of the arrangement, the defendant company have vested in them all the rights of such shareholders in the assets of the plaintiff company.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS.

NAVROJEE V. THE CHARTERED BANK OF INDIA, AUSTRALIA AND CHINA.

This was a special case stated for the opinion of the Court, and raised a question as to what amounted to credit within the meaning of the 171st section of the Bankruptcy Act, 1849, which allows a set-off in cases of bankruptcy where mutual credits exist between the bankrupt and other parties.

Mr. Watkin Williams (Mr. J. A Macleod with him) argued for the plaintiffs; Mr. Joseph Brown (Mr. Cohen with him) for the defendants.

The plaintiffs were formerly merchants in London, trading under the style of Dadabhoy and Co., and used to send out to Bombay large consignments of goods, against which they drew bills on native firms in India. The defendants, who have a branch bank in Bombay, were employed by the plaintiffs' financial agents to collect the amount of their bills in India as they became due, and to remit the proceeds to England by draughts on a London bank in plaintiffs' favour. On the 29th of June, 1866, the plaintiffs' firm stopped payment, and executed a deed of inspection, which was subsequently duly registered. At the time of the stoppage the defendants had collected the amounts of certain bills drawn by plaintiffs against consignments to Bombay which had been handed them to collect, and they afterwards proceeded to collect others as they became due until they had received in all over £6,000. But at the time plaintiffs stopped the defendants were also holders of bills accepted or endorsed by the plaintiffs to the amount of £8,300; and as these were dishonoured when they became due, the defendants claimed to set off against them the £6,000 they had collected for the plaintiffs. It was strongly contended, on the part of the plaintiffs, that as they could have revoked at any time the authority of the defendants to collect the bills in India, and as, indeed, in the interests of the general body of creditors, such authority ought to have been revoked on the plaintiffs' stoppage, there was no credit given by the plaintiffs to the defendants, within the meaning of the Bankruptcy Acts, and therefore no mutual credits between the parties; and a case of "Young v. the Bank of Bengal" (1 Moore's P. C. Report) was relied upon to support this view.

The Court, however, held that this case was distinguishable, and that as a debt due from the defendants to the plaintiffs would be the natural result of employing them to collect the bills, there was a credit given to the defendants, and that they therefore had a right to set-off.

TELEGRAPHIC advices from San Francisco announce the departure thence of Mr. BURLINGHAME and suite for New York. They left on the 1st instant, and the movement excited great interest, a salute being fired from the fortifications.

Monetary and Commercial.

We understand that great inconvenience is experienced by merchants trading to Spanish colonies from the circumstance that captains decline to sign bills of lading made out "to order," a usage universally acknowledged and adopted in the commercial world. This refusal, we are informed, results from the application by the Spanish Consul of an enactment of the Spanish Government by which masters are compelled to submit all their outward manifests to the Consul before sailing, and which further specifies that such manifests must contain the names of the consignees of all cargo loaded. As the commercial code of Spain not only expressly states that bills of lading may be made out "to order," but that they may be negotiated in the same manner as bills of exchange, it is surprising that the Spanish Government should disturb commercial operations by such measures. Representations made to the Consul on the subject have hitherto proved unavailing.

It is understood that the Indo-European Telegraph Company, which was brought out about three weeks back, for the construction of a line to India through Russia and Persia, have obtained the whole of their proposed capital of £450,000. The Russian Government are stated to have placed a war-steamer at the disposal of the company for three months, to take soundings for the cable in the Black Sea. Meanwhile the Persian portion of the line will be commenced, and is expected to be completed within twelve months.

A meeting of the shareholders of the Chartered Mercantile Bank of India, London, and China will be held on the 19th inst. The directors' report is as follows :—

The net profits for the year, after deducting charges and providing for bad and doubtful debts for that period, amount to £106,335 4s. 6d., or 14 per cent. on the bank's capital; of this sum £45,000 has been paid in two half-yearly dividends, and £47,882 17s. 10d. appropriated to meet losses arising out of previous year's transactions, leaving a balance of £13,452 6s. 8d., which the directors have placed as a special reserve against the remaining old accounts, which they consider it advisable to carry forward to the end of this year, when they expect to be able to make an accurate adjustment and full provision for them.

The paralysed state of Eastern trade and exchanges, following the crisis of 1866, continued much longer than could have been foreseen, resulting in diminished business and profits for the last half of the year, and causing, as shown above, a more unfavourable winding up of previous year's outstandings than had been anticipated. But the natural reaction from extreme depression has taken place, and the bank is now reaping the benefit of this improvement with every prospect of its continuance, so that the directors have good reason to look forward to an increasing, profitable, and safe business in the future.

The directors retiring on this occasion are Mr. E. J. Gilman and Sir Fredk. Jas. Halliday, K.C.B., who, being eligible, offer themselves for re-election, and the court recommend them accordingly.

The Royal Mail Steam Packet Company have, with the sanction of the Postmaster-General, decided to run their Atlantic steamers through from Southampton to Colon, commencing with the vessel to leave on the 2nd of June next. There will now, therefore, be a first-class mail line between this country and the Isthmus of Panama, by which passengers for Australia, New Zealand, the North and South Pacific, Central America, &c., can proceed to Colon (Aspinwall) on board the same ship in which they embarked at Southampton. This arrangement will be beneficial to passengers proceeding to China and Japan via San Francisco.

ARTICLES OF IMPORT.

TEA.

There has been a very quiet week in tea, owing to the extensive clearances in anticipation of the budget. Common qualities are well maintained, and importers are firm, finer sorts of Congou and Souchong are decidedly difficult of sale.

The Circular of Messrs. James Steames and Co says:—The consumption is considerably larger than last year, as will be seen by reference to the figures annexed, and the great demand for home trade and export still runs upon the medium and common sorts.

The deliveries up to 30th April, compared with those of last year to same date, stand thus:—

Home Consumption for London 1st	lbs.		lbs.
Jan. to 30th April	31,097,000	...	23,622,000
Export from do. do. ...	8,968,000	...	9,880,000
Sent Coastwise do. do. ...	10,947,020	...	12,697,000
Total deliveries	51,012,000		46,199,000

SILK.—The market is very quiet, and there is very little disposition shown to do business at present rates, and as importers and holders maintain prices, dulness is the result. This will most probably continue until some certain news is known of the outturn of the European crop, which up to the present time appears to be going on favourably. The deliveries are still very satisfactory, being 473 Japan, 1762 China, from the 1st to the 15th inst.

COTTON.—Extreme dulness continued to prevail in the London market until the 14th inst., when an improvement in the demand "for arrival" occasioned a general advance of about ¼d. per lb., which was firmly maintained. The following are the current quotations:—Surat—Dhollerah: Middling fair, 9⅞d.; fair, 10⅛d.; good fair, 11d.; Oomrawattee: Middling fair, 10⅛d.; fair, 10⅜d.; good fair, 11d. Madras—Tinnivelly: Middling fair, 9¾d.; fair, 10d.; good fair, 10⅛d.; Northern and Western: Middling fair, 9¼d.; fair, 9⅝d.; good fair, 10¼d.; Coconada: Middling fair, 9¼d.; fair, 9½d.; good fair, 9¾d. Scinde: Middling fair, 8⅞d.; fair, 9d.; good fair, 9½d. Bengal: Middling fair, 9¼d.; fair, 9½d.; good fair, 10d. For arrival: Western, 9d. to 9¼d., ship named to March sailing, guaranteed fair; Coconada, 8½d., ship named, guaranteed fair red; Dhollerah, 9½d., ship named, guaranteed fair new; Oomrawattee, 9½d., ship named, guaranteed fair; Scinde, 7¾d., April-May shipment, guaranteed fair new; Bengal, 8½d., March and May sailing per steamer, guaranteed fair new. In the Liverpool market there was no relief from the dulness reported in our last issue until the 13th inst., when a somewhat improved demand was experienced, but it can scarcely be said that there was any material change in the condition of the market, nor were holders enabled to get any better prices. There was a liberal supply upon the market. Rather more attention was given to cotton to arrive, and the sales were large. On the 14th inst. a slight improvement in the demand for cotton from the trade revived to some small extent the speculative element, and an increased amount of business was in consequence done. The sales reached 12,000 bales, 9,000 being taken by the trade, and 3,000 for export and speculation. It is remarkable how speedily the course of holders is changed by a small increase in the demand. They have been less anxious to sell, and have been enabled to get better prices, but not to any great extent. There has since been a strong demand, the rates being firmly maintained as follows. On the spot:—Middling Upland 12⅛d., middling Orleans 12⅜d., fair Dollerah 10⅝d., fair Broach 10½d., fair Bengal 9⅞d. To Arrive.—From New Orleans, basis of middling, at sea and due, 12½d.; ship named (good ordinary), 11½d.; middling New Orleans, from New York, 12⅜d. Broach.—Fair new merchants, ship named, 9⅜d. Dhollerah.—Fair new merchants, ship named, 9⅜d.; fair merchants, January sailing, 9⅛d. Oomrawattee.—Fair, new merchants, March sailing, 9⅛d.; April, 9⅜d.; May shipment, 9⅛d. Comtah.—Fair, January sailing, 9⅛d.

COFFEE.—Large supplies of Ceylon have been offered at the public sales, which have met with good demand at fair rates. The quotations are:—Plantation, fine, 86s. to 88s. 6d.; good medium to good, 79s. to 85s.; low middling and middling, 72s. 6d. to 78s.; small to fine fine ordinary, 64s. to 71s.; pea-berry, 82s. to 89s. 6d.; Native ordinary small, 46s. 6d.; good ordinary, 50s. 6d. to 51s. 6d.; bold, 55s. to 56s. 6d.

CUTCH.—The business has been confined to small lots, which have sold at 32s. 6d.; Penang, 14s. per cwt. The bulk of the offers was bought in at 45s.

COCOANUT OIL.—A fair business is still being transacted in Ceylon, the quotation of £49 10s. remaining unaltered.

PEPPER.—There has been a fair amount of business in Singapore at 3¼d. to 3⅜d., and in Penang at 3 1-16d. to 3 3-16d. per lb. Nothing doing in White Pepper.

PLUMBAGO.—There has been a good inquiry for Ceylon at firm prices. 556 barrels were offered, and 402 barrels sold; good to fine bright lump, 35s. to 45s.; mixed, 27s. 6d.; small, 24s.; chips, 24s. 6d.; fair to fine dust, 11s. 6d. to 17s. 6d. per cwt.

RICE.—We have had since our last report a very quiet market. Of 6,000 bags of Bengal offered by auction, 1,300 bags of Ballam sold at 9s. 3d. to 9s. 6d.; and 300 bags of Dacca grain, at 11s.; the remainder bought in, Dacca grain, 11s. 3d. to 12s.; White Bengal, 13s. to 13s. 6d.; and 1,000 bags of Madras, at 10s. 9d. Privately, business has been done in Ballam, for arrival, at 9s. 7½d., ex ship. The sales have also included 1,200 bags Rangoon at 12s. 10½d., and 600 tons Siam at 10s. 9d., ex ship.

SUGAR.—The market has remained steady but not active. The sales have included 1,400 bags clayed Manila at 32s. 6d. to 34s. 6d., 700 bags unclayed Manila at 28s. 6d., and 1,400 bags Java at 30s. per cwt.

SAPANWOOD.—Of 130 tons offered a small portion only was sold. Ceylon at £13 10s., Siam at £15 10s. to £15 12s. 6d. per ton.

SPICES.—The sales of East India since our last report have been confined to 50 packages Penang Cassia at 81s. to 83s., and 30 bales Ceylon Cinnamon, common quality, at 8d. to 1s. 8d.

TIN.—The market for Straits has become a shade easier, owing chiefly to the arrival of 500 tons at an earlier date than was expected. The quotations are:—Banca, £96; fine Straits (on the spot and afloat), £93 to £93 10s. per ton.

The latest London quotations are as follows:—

For Staffordshire there is good demand, but there is difficulty in obtaining delivery, owing to the puddlers' strike. Copper firm, and a good inquiry. Tin plates are quiet. Lead is also a little easier. Spelter steady."

MANCHESTER MARKETS.

Mr. Sam Mendel's report states:—This market continues very dull; prices are a little lower, but not sufficiently so to stimulate buyers to resume operations on a free scale. Quotations are:—Grey Shirtings ,7lbs., 9s. 6d. to 10s.; 8½lbs., 11s. 3s. to 12s.; Cotton Yarn, Nos. 16-24, 15½d. to 17½d.; Nos. 28-32, 1s. 4½d. to 1s. 7d.; Maddapollams, 4s. 3d.; Long Cloths, 11s. 3d.; T-Cloths, 7s. 3d.; White Spot Shirtings, 12s. 3d.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS.—The skin disease to which the bon vivant and man of indolent habits are peculiarly subject, as well as those scorbutic affections caused by a superabundance of salt diet and the hardships and privations of a seaman's life, are readily removed by Holloway's Ointment. The disfiguring blotches, pustules, pimples, &c., arising from suppressed perspiration or obstructions in the secretive organs, are also immediately obliterated by this purifying and beautifying agent. It has no equal as a means of clearing the complexion and relieving the skin of discolourations and excrescences. The Pills, as they carry off all inward impurities, are an important auxiliary to the Ointment in such cases.

Summary of News from the Far East.

JAPAN.

YOKOHAMA.

Advices from this port are to April 10th. The outward mail of Feb. 10th arrived on the 2nd April. The Japan Times gives the following summary of the news of the fortnight:—

The P.M.S.S. Co.'s steamer Great Republic, of whose safety fears had for three or four days been entertained, arrived on the afternoon of the 7th April. It appears that she did not leave San Francisco until March 7th, having been delayed for the arrival of the steamer from the south. When within about 2,100 miles of this port the starboard shaft broke, and one of the paddles was put hors de combat; with the other she completed her voyage, arriving, in consequence of the double delay, twelve days after due date. Of course the Great Republic is unable to proceed on her voyage to Hong Kong, and the New York has to take on her passengers and cargo. It is to be hoped that the P.M.S.S. Co. will profit by the severe lesson they have received.

At the date of our last report the advanced guard of the Imperial troops sent to occupy Yedo was on the Tokaido, close to us and within twenty miles of the capital. The late Shiogoon having made his submission and his Cabinet being dispersed, there appeared nothing to prevent a peaceful change of garrison and Government, But the advance was checked, and affairs are now at a dead-lock. The envoy of the Mikado, with the main body of his army, is still at Hakone or beyond it; his progress having been stayed by the arrival of an embassy from Yedo. The terms on which that capital is to be given up are not yet, it is understood, finally arranged.

Rumours have been current during the last two days, of fighting in the neighbourhood of Osaka, but there is no truth in them. The fact is that the troops of the Southern Daimios are approching Yedo by two different roads; the main body, which we have already mentioned, are moving upon the capital of the Shiogoon by the Tokaido; while a detachment, chiefly of Chiosiu's men, have skirted the western base of Fusiyama and are descending on it from that direction. We hear of these men having committed some excesses in the Koshiu silk districts, and it is by no means unlikely that some skirmishing has taken place between them and adherents of the Tokugawa family, but there has been no fighting of any importance. We are really quite safe here at all events, so that our friends at home need feel in no way alarmed. It is true that Consuls and Ministers of various nationalities are privately recommending their compatriots to carry arms again, as in the old times, and to keep within the settlement as much as possible, but their recommendations are not much attended to apparently.

At the time when the attack on Sir Harry Parkes was made the French and Dutch Ministers were waiting at the Mikado's palace for their colleague, it having been arranged that the three Ministers should pay their visit to the Emperor together. For some time Sir Harry's non-arrival created no surprise, as he is notoriously unpunctual, but after a long delay the representatives of France and Holland gave him up and had their audience. When they came out they were told what had occurred; and it is now known that the news had arrived some time previously, but had been concealed from them, lest they should have insisted on leaving the palace without seeing the Mikado. On the following day Sir Harry paid his visit and this time without accident, he most minute precautions having been taken, barriers erected and guards posted at every point of vantage. The interview was most satisfactory. The Mikado expressed his pleasure at seeing the representative of Her Majesty, concerning whose health he solicitously inquired; referred to the recent unfortunate occurrences with regret, and stated his desire that they should not be allowed to interrupt the friendly relations existing between Japan and Great Britain. Sir Harry replied in suitable terms in the name of the Queen, following the Emperor's speech paragraph by paragraph, and the short interview was over. The ceremonial is described to us as singularly simple. The Mikado, a youth of about sixteen, sat under a canopy, with his Kuges, the highest officers of his Court, and the Mias, his uncles, round him. He was seated on a chair, and close behind him knelt Arisugawa Sotsu no Mia, the Sosai or Prime Minister, ready to prompt the boy Emperor in what he had to say to the representative of his ally. Lower down the room, which was quite bare of other furniture, sat the Daimios who were present, in two lines, so placed that they could not see him. He is well grown, but of a heavy, though not unintelligent cast of face. His expression, naturally enough, seemed to be one of restrained but intense curiosity, and the look of wonder was certainly not diminished by a very singular artificial deformity. His eyebrows were shaved clean, and a pair painted about an inch higher up his forehead. What little he had to say he said well, in a self-possessed and dignified manner.

The English Minister had his audience on the 26th and on the 27th left for Osaka. We must hope everything of the best to result from the highly important fact of our having thus at last stood face to face with the hitherto sacred and inaccessible Mikado of Japan. One good has certainly arisen already from the Minister's visit and out of the attack on Sir Harry's escort A proclamation from the Emperor has gone through the length and breadth of the land, making it more than capitally punishable—making it disgraceful to kill, or attempt to kill, a foreigner. Before execution, a Samurai's swords will be formally taken from him, his family pronounced degraded, and his name struck out for ever from the roll of men of gentle birth. This will do much, probably as much as can be done by anything but time, to protect us against the hate of fanatical, mistaken patriots, and it is almost safe to predict that, unless we ourselves give strong provocation, we have buried the last victims to prejudice and ancient custom in Japan.

CHINA.

SHANGHAI.

Dates by this mail are to the 16th April. The outward mail of 26th February arrived on the 11th April with telegrams to 6th March. Via Kiachta dates to 10th had been received. The following summary is from the North China Herald:—

A Peking correspondent writes:—"Have you heard of a Buddhist Mission to Europe being got up by Mr. Hart? I scarcely believe it, but it is whispered that a hundred shavelings are to be sent home to attack Christianity at its headquarters, the expenses, of course, to be paid out of the tonnage dues."

Our Tientsin correspondent says:—"No additional news has come to hand about the rebels. They appear to be very badly off for food, being obliged to live on mule and horse flesh; and I am of opinion they can't hold out many days longer, and will be compelled to cut their way through the Imperial lines to the southward to save their lives—that is such as can escape death at the hands of the Imperial forces. The French corvette Forfait and the gunboat Le Breton have arrived, and I hear the American gun vessel Shenandoah is expected here. The weather still continues cold, and last night it froze very much. A large opium dealer, Chang-yuh, has failed and dragged a great many Chinese into losses. Some foreigners here have also suffered by his failure."

A later date says:—Nearly all the sailing vessels have left, and nearly all in ballast, for Chefoo. The steamers at present leave in ballast or partly loaded with ice. We are having very seasonable weather, and the crops are looking very well. I hope now that the grass is growing we shall see beef and mutton cheap again; at present prices are very high for those articles of food. The snipe have not yet appeared from the south, but we look for their appearance in twenty days at most. This is the only shooting we get in this region—a miserable place of residence in that respect. The Peking races have just come off, and I understand there were some first-rate ponies running. Our racing men are now training regularly every morning, and we are expecting to see the best meeting this spring that we have had for some time past. The rebels still appear to be masters of the route to Shansi province, but no fears are entertained by the Chinese of their coming to Tientsin or Peking. I imagine they must be badly off for food, and that they will soon be changing their quarters. Business would then rapidly rise here. Some Chinese speculators are buying 8¼ lbs. Grey Shirtings at 2.35 taels. The Challenger has arrived at Taku with direct shipments.

We learn that at some of the outports a circular letter has been received by H.M.'s Consuls from Sir R. Alcock, calling for information as to why all mention of the desirability of bonded warehouses had been studiously omitted from every memorial on the Revision of the Treaty, except that from Tientsin. His Excellency's surprise at the omission is natural. It is difficult to see why the bonded system is less applicable in China than elsewhere. Indeed, it would have seemed that merchants would be only too anxious to introduce a scheme that must relieve them from the present unjust system of payment on unsold goods.

A new steamer, called the Yang-tze, has been successfully launched. She is a fine-looking boat, measuring, we understand, 260 feet keel. She draws five feet only as she floats, and will, it is believed, draw only ten or eleven feet when loaded. Mr. Batchelder estimates that she will carry nearly 1,400 tons of river, or 1,000 of sea cargo, and 250 Chinese passengers on the upper deck. A good point about her is that the foreign passenger accommodation is forward and the Chinese aft; so that all the abominable smell of opium and native food which sickens foreign passengers on most of the Ningpo and river steamers, will be avoided. She is to be fitted with the Governor General's engines, and with the boilers of the old Yang-tze. The launch was an interesting one, as recording the success of the first attempt at shipbuilding, on a large scale, in Shanghai. Several smaller vessels have been constructed here before, and the Hirado and Fusiyama were launched from Pootung; but the greater part of their timbers were, we believe, prepared in America. Mr. Batchelder's new steamer has been made here from first to last.

We have received a letter from Mr. Cooper, dated the 6th March, on which date he had reached Ching-tu, the capital of Sze-chuen, and was making preparations to pursue his journey, having obtained a passport from the Viceroy. Mr. Cooper speaks of his journey as having been full of interest and adventure among the rapids on the river. He intended to travel westward, along part of the grand route to Thibet, to Bathang, 98 E. 28 N., from which point he hopes to cross the Himalayas to Sudya. He is compelled to take this route instead of that which he at first marked out, on account of the disturbed state of the south-western part of Szechuen. Mr. Cooper adds—"The Nepaulese Embassy is detained at Ching-tu by the Viceroy, who will not allow it to proceed to Peking. Yesterday a courier, with despatches to the Emperor on the subject of the Embassy, changed horses at the inn where I am stopping."

Meetings have been held of the North China and China Fire Insurance Companies. The former have been most successful, having accumulated tls. 578,000 in addition to their tls. 250,000 paid-up capital. Messrs. Bryans, Bell, Michie, Lavers, and Porter were elected directors for the ensuing year, and an increase to the remuneration of the directors, from tls. 5 to 10 per meeting, retrospectively to 1866, was agreed to. Letters from Messrs. Ashton and Co., relative to the withdrawal of the agency from their hands, were read. Certain information asked for by Mr. Overweg, regarding the average risks taken by the company on homeward bound ships, was given, and the directors were asked to consider the propriety of reducing the limit from tls. 75,000.

The China Fire has been less fortunate. It has still 100,000 taels surplus beyond its capital, but it has suffered heavy losses, and the shareholders seem inclined to wind it up at the end of the current year. At the meeting allusion was made to a scheme for organising a new one, which will be found detailed in a sketch that we publish elsewhere. It is suggested that the nominal capital should be the same as at present; but that 500,000 taels should be paid up; and security given by the shareholders for the remaining half of the value of their shares.

A meeting of members of the cricket club has also been held. The accounts were passed and the committee re-elected; and permission was given to the athletic sports committee to hold their meeting on the cricket ground.

We are glad to hear that the Asiatic Society intend trying to raise funds to pay the expense of exploring the Yellow River—as to its capabilities for navigation and trade.

A meeting of the Gas Company has been held at which the accounts were passed. A profit of tls. 8,000 has been realised on the year's working which, together with the tls. 40,000 worth of debentures taken up, have sufficed to extinguish its debt. We hope, now, the company will seriously consider the propriety of reducing the enormous price now charged for gas.

Our Chefoo correspondent writes :—"We have no news of rebels. They seem to have left Shantung altogether. Trade is flourishing, notwithstanding enormous imports. The fact is, the rebels did so much damage last year that native cottons are scarce and dear. So, with the lower rates ruling, it is likely Chefoo will take a much larger amount of manufactured goods than it did last year. The U S. Shenandoah left on the 6th for Corea, with a missionary Mr. Mathew, and the American Consul on board, as interpreters. We are congratulating ourselves, after twenty days of violent wind, on the arrival of really spring weather. Croquet parties are being started ; and, like the woods and fields around us, we are budding into life again."

Advices from Foochow, dated April 14, state :—"Weather in the tea districts cold and wet—very favourable to the plants ; indicating the probability of good quality of leaf but not a heavy crop, and rather late picking."

The case of Okooloff and Co., Russian merchants, against Jardine, Matheson, and Co. as owners of Glengyle for damage done to teas from Hankow, has been decided in favour of the plaintiffs ; claim 7,840 tls.

In re DENT and Co.

The bankruptcy case of Messrs. Dent and Co. was again gone into before Sir Edmund Hornby.

Mr. Mitchell, in the absence of Mr. Harwood, for the bankrupts.

This was an adjourned first meeting of creditors. None appeared. The official assignee reported that he had been informed that the banks in Hong Kong had abandoned their intention of appealing against the decision of the Supreme Court of that colony abjudicating the firm bankrupt. He also stated that he understood a deed of transfer and release had been executed by several of the creditors, but that the banks were delaying or had refused to give their assent to such deed. The only course he could suggest, under the circumstances and in the interests of the bankrupts and of the creditors at Shanghai, was to continue the proceedings in bankruptcy and to appoint a day for the last examination.

The Chief Judge observed that the proceedings of the banks in Hong Kong appeared to him to be inexplicable. Instead of joining heartily with the rest of the creditors and in the interests of all to get this large estate speedily wound up, useless delay was thrown in the way of any final settlement. The money was now lying idle at great loss to the creditors, simply, it appeared to him (the learned Judge) because the two banks could not agree to join with the rest of the creditors in finally disposing of the estate. No possible good could accrue to the creditors, but on the other hand great prejudice. The learned Judge believed that if months ago, instead of all this useless and expensive litigation, the creditors had come fairly forward and permitted the estate to be wound up under certain guarantees by the bankrupts, leaving it to them to do the best in the interests of all, in place of the insignificant sum which he now greatly feared might be all the creditors would get, they would have had great reason to congratulate themselves upon the confidence they would have shown, and in the power of the bankrupts to do more for them than is likely to be done in Courts of Bankruptcy. He sincerely trusted that a different disposition would be shown, as he greatly feared if this delay and inaction were persisted in that the assets would be wasted, and no one be the better for it.

Of course these remarks were quite independent of any opinion he might hereafter form, when he came to consider the conduct of the bankrupts as traders when they apply for their discharge ; but up to the present moment no creditors seemed to have taken any interest in the matter; and where those who were most interested were guilty of neglect, and seemed to have no object but to create delay, it was no part of the duty of a judge to travel beyond the evidence which might be before him, and up to this period none had been brought before him upon which he could form an opinion.

The application for the bankrupts' discharge might come on the 4th May next.

HONG KONG.

From Hong Kong our advices extend to the 22nd April. On the 16th April the outward mail of March 6th was delivered with London telegrams to the 14th.

The Overland China Mail sums up the fortnight's news as follows :—

No further steps have been taken by the Hong Kong Association. The Governor's reply to the resolution of the Chamber of Commerce condemning gambling licences is not yet published. The report of the Stamp Commission has been sent in, and a new schedule will be brought forward at the next meeting of the Legislative Council. The Hong Kong Fire Insurance Company is to be reconstituted under limited liability.

The following summary is from the Overland Trade Report :—

The subject of treaty revision has again been brought to the surface, by a correspondence which has taken place between Sir Rutherford Alcock and the British Minister, under date the 20th of March, addressed to the Consul at Shanghai, for the purpose of ascertaining why none of the memorials, except that from Tientsin, had asked for the establishment of bonded warehouses at the open ports of China. Sir Rutherford also, in another despatch, sought for some further explanation of the views of the mercantile community concerning the additional places at which they wished to obtain the right of residence for foreigners. In reply, the Chamber accounted for all omission of any reference to bonded warehouses by stating that it considered the subject one already under consideration, and also one which would best be dealt with by trade regulations, and need not be noticed in the treaty itself. The explanation is rather lame, inasmuch as the subject of drawbacks, which is manifestly still more a question of detail, was dealt with in the memorial. The probabilities are that the subject was simply overlooked, the framers of memorials being fallible like the rest of their species. The Chamber now replies, as a matter of course, that the introduction of bonded warehouses would greatly benefit the trade of the port. It is true, however, that the matter is not of such transcendant importance to the trade of China at large as might be supposed, inasmuch as Hong Kong is to a great extent a bonded warehouse for all the open ports. In reference to the places inland at which it would be desirable for foreigners to obtain the privilege of residing, the Chamber truly points out that what is wanted is more a general privilege to reside wherever the exigencies of trade may make it desirable from time to time that they should go, than a limited and restricted permission to reside at a few selected cities. In fact the object to be obtained, if possible, is the abandonment by the Chinese of the idea that all but a few specified places ought to be closed to foreign residents ; of course this could not be reached all at once. There is no doubt that the treaty of 1858 was in many ways a great shock to the Chinese mind, and it may be unreasonable to imagine that after the expiration of only ten years, the Government of this empire will be able to give up the remainder of traditions which have been preserved sacred for as many centuries as are covered by the isolated history of this people. Still we would like to see in the language used by a British minister at Peking, signs which would clearly show his perception of what is really wanted. Sir Rutherford has given evidence, by the despatches alluded to, of some activity and of an intention to press for concessions when the critical moment arrives. It would be ungrateful not to acknowledge this, but, without failing to appreciate so much readiness to fight the battle of progress as is apparently shown, it is possible to point out that a new character ought to be impressed upon the treaty of 1869. In 1858 European nations secured from the Chinese exemption in certain cases from the operation of those laws against foreign intercourse which ruled the empire at large. In the new treaty a visible advance ought to be made, not by increasing the number of the exemptions, but by establishing the principle that exemptions ought not to be needed at all,—that the rule should be in favour of free intercourse, unfettered by restrictions of any sorts, and that exemptions, if any should be found necessary, ought to be the other way. The manner in which the admission of foreigners in those cities where they are now at liberty to reside has worked, and the experience of journeys which have been made in the interior, through districts where foreigners had never been seen before, all proves that the fear of any dangerous consequences which might ensue from the removal of all restrictions is delusive. The great practical difficulty is that foreigners, if they have anything like free intercourse in China, as Englishmen have in France or vice versa, want something more than such liberty as is enjoyed by European nations amongst themselves, they want exterritoriality, and must have it if they have anything. This complicates the question no doubt, and may be a sufficient reason to justify the Minister in not pressing for everything all at once, but the provisions of a new treaty ought certainly, as has been said just now, to contemplate the normal propriety of opening China to foreigners as completely as Europe is opened to Chinese who like to go there.

The bankruptcy case of Messrs. Dent and Co. has been before the Court, and Chief Justice Smale insisted on duly attested affidavits from all creditors conveying their assent to the annulment of the bankruptcy. Mr. Pollard said he would be prepared with the proofs in due time.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

SINGAPORE.

Dates from this port are to April 29. The French mail of March 18th arrived out on the 20th April.

The Straits Times says:—"Locally there is very little, as usual, of any interest to comment upon. The early part of the fortnight was marked by a lively passage of arms between the Chief Justice and the Attorney-General, which however seems to have been merely the result of temporary loss of temper, natural perhaps in this hot climate, and particularly in a court-room which seems to have been specially devised by its ingenious architect to create misunderstandings by preventing bench from hearing bar or vice versa, and preventing the public from hearing anything.

"Our Municipal Commissioners have published a statement of accounts for 1867, which shows upon the whole a very satisfactory state of affairs. The cash credit balance from 1866 was $23,703.49, while that on 31st December, 1867, was $18,008.31. This is after paying various extraordinary items not likely to occur again, viz., $25,717.86 for Cavanagh Bridge, $9,272.19 for lighting the town with gas, $5,871.33 for new drainage, and $4,130.79 for repairs to the Town-hall. The outstandings at debit, consisting mainly of loans, amounting to $98,000, are more than counterbalanced by the outstandings to be placed to credit, viz., reserved fund $45,000, unpaid assessment $42,000, with sundry other items, which show a surplus of some $10,000.

"The proposed change in the constitution of the Municipal bodies is opposed by the Penang Commissioners. The Singapore dignitaries offer no opposition, and confine themselves to quietly pointing out sundry difficulties in the way—as for example, that they hold the Town-hall in trust for the public, and cannot hand it over to anybody else—that some arrangement must be made about the Municipal debt of $98,000—that a further loan will be necessary for the water-works, &c. Malacca has not yet thought it worth while to give an opinion on the matter. The only objectionable feature about the whole scheme is that which enables Government to touch one dollar of Muncipal revenue for its own ends and purposes. This is an unheard of proposal and should not be listened to for a moment."

The Chamber of Commerce has again taken up the subject of the adulteration of gambier, and at a general meeting of members, on the 23rd April it, was resolved to petition the Legislature to pass an Act for the summary punishment of any person found guilty of adulterating produce.

Another failure has taken place in the bazaar—liabilities about $60,000. This is not so bad as the last, a composition of 50 per cent. having been offered, with part guarantee, and accepted.

Two American men-of-war have been in port during the last three weeks. One, the famous Hartford, has sailed for home. The other, the Piscataqua, the flagship of Admiral Rowan, successor in the China seas of the late lamented Admiral Bell, is still here, and her fine band played on the esplanade a few evenings ago, which has been our only public amusement during the last fortnight.

With reference to the closing of the Hong Kong Mint, the Straits Times says:—"We remember that when the first talk arose of establishing this institution, our merchants wanted it to be planted here as more sutiable than Hong Kong. Suppose they take steps to take it off the incapable hands of the Hong Kongites? This is a hint to the Straits Association. It will certainly be a great pity if we lose our regular supply of the really handsome dollars issued hitherto by the Hong Kong Mint."

Commercial Report.

CHINA AND JAPAN IMPORTS.

YOKOHAMA.—The unsettled condition of the country had occasioned an almost entire suspension of business, many mercantile establishments having closed. For both Cottons and Woollens there had been a total absence of demand and a few transactions in Nos. 16-24 Cotton Yarn constituted the only business of the fortnight. In Metals the only inquiry had been for lead of which a few parcels were reported sold at $7.50 to $7.75 per picul.

SHANGHAI.—Cottons: During the early part of the period under review the market for Plain Cottons was quiet but firm, but on the receipt of more favourable advices from Tientsin a strong demand set in for 8¼ lbs. Grey Shirtings, which goods had improved in value 2 to 3 candareens per piece, and shipments of which had been made to some extent to both the above market and Hankow; 7 lbs. had also been in good inquiry, and values of such had advanced 5 candareens per piece. Sales of both 8¼ and 7 lbs. had been made "to arrive" to some extent. White Shirtings had been in better demand, at slightly higher figures. T-Cloths, 7 lbs., of finest makes, had been in good demand at enhanced prices; 6 lbs. of best quality, had also commanded higher figures, while common of both weights had not been wanted. Fancy Cottons had only been taken to a limited extent. The Argonaut was the only arrival from England with Piece Goods. Woollens: Spanish Stripes, Medium, Broad and Habit Cloths had found buyers to a limited extent. Camlets had only been in trifling demand. Long Ells had met with but little attention, at lower rates. Lastings had continued dull of sale. Figured Orleans had been more inquired for. Metals: Flat and Round Iron had not been wanted even at reduced values. Nail Rod had been in fair demand. Hoop and Pig had been dull of sale. Lead had continued in good demand at enhanced prices. Tin Plates and Steel had been asked for. Quicksilver had been in small inquiry for the Hankow market. Coals: There had been an active demand on Chinese account during the fortnight, and prices were looking upwards. Cardiff: Without arrivals, and transactions very trifling. English: A small cargo offered at previous rates. American sold from ship at tls. 14 per ton. Australian: Prices for Sydney kinds had further advanced, and sales had been made at tls. 12.5. to 12.7.5 per ton from ship, but for Newcastle, N.S.W. only much lower prices were offered. Japan and Formosa: Without arrivals or transactions. Arrivals: 1,100 tons from Great Britain; 1,038 tons from America, 3,900 tons from Australia,—in all, 6,038 tons. The quotations were:—G. E. Grey Shirtings, 38½ yds. 31 in. 7 lbs., tls. 1.9.5 to 2 per piece; 8¼ to 8½ lbs., tls. 2.2.7 to 2.3.3; 9 to 9¾ lbs., tls. 2.6 to 3.2.5; G. E. White Shirtings, 40 yards 36 inches, 56 reed, tls. 2.2 to 2.2.5; 60 reed, tls. 2.2.5 to 2.3; 64 reed, tls. 2.3.5 to 2.4; 66 to 72 reed, tls. 2.4.5 to 2.8; American Drills, 40 yds. 30 in. 15 lbs., tls. 4.2. to 4.4.; American Jeans, 30 yds. 30 in. 10½ lbs., tls. 4; American Sheetings, 40 yds. 40 in. 15 lbs., tls. 4.4 to 4.5; English Drills, 40 yds. 30 in. 12 to 15 lbs., tls. 4 to 4.2; T-Cloths, 6 to 7 lbs., 24 yds. 32 in., tls. 1.5 to 2.1.5; 8 to 8·4 lbs., 24 yds. 36 in., tls. 2.3 to 2.6. Spanish Stripes, tls. 0.6 to 0.6.5 per yard; Medium, Broad and Habit Cloths, tls. 0.8.0 to 1.1.0; Camlets, English, S., 56 yds. 31 in., tls. 12.7.5 to 13.2.5 per piece; do., SS, tls. 12.5 to 13; do., SSS, tls. 10.5 to 11; Long Ells, Scarlet, 24 yds. 31 in. 12 lbs., tls. 6.3 to 6.4; do., Assorted, ls. 6.4 to 6.6; Lastings, 30 yds. 31 in., tls. 12 to 12.5; Iron, Flat and Round, tls. 2.3.0. to 2.4.0 per picul; Nail Rod, tls. 2.5.5; Hoop, tls. 2.5; Pig, tls. 16 per ton; Lead, tls. 6.7 to 6.8.5 per picul; Tin Plates, tls. 6 per box; Steel, tls. 4 per tub; Quicksilver, tls. 51.5 per picul.

HANKOW.—There had been an unusually heavy demand for Plain Cottons, and although supplies had been unprecedentedly large, they had only been on a par with requirements. In other descriptions of goods business had been very quiet. Grey Shirtings had maintained their value for really fine makes, and sales of 8 lbs. 4 oz. "eagles" had been made at tls. 2.3.2 to 2.3.5 per piece, at which the market was quiet, but firm. White Shirtings had meet with fair inquiry at about last mail's rates. T-Cloths, 7 lbs., of common make, had been difficult to place, but fine quality had been readily saleable at advanced prices. Grey Drills, both English and American, had been dull of sale. Fancy Cottons had been much neglected. Camlets had been in limited demand. Lastings unchanged. Scarlet Long Ells had given way in value. Spanish Stripes had not been much asked for. Figured Orleans had shown no signs of improvement.

FOOCHOW.—The only sales reported were as follows:—900 pieces 7 lbs. T-Cloths, at $2.50 to 2.60; 1,300 pieces 8¼ lbs. Grey Shirtings, at $3.20 to 3.25; and 300 piculs Lead at $11.

HONG KONG.—Cotton Yarn: There was no inquiry whatever, during the early part of the interval, and sales could only have been effected at some decline, but improvement in the raw material had not been without effect, and a few small parcels had been quitted at last quotations. Piece Goods: Little attention had been given to manufactures, and prices generally were lower. 7lbs. Grey Shirtings and T-Cloths had been taken to a moderate extent on former terms, and the best qualities of the latter were still wanted. 8.4lbs. Grey Shirtings were quite neglected. White Shirtings were without change. 40 yard English Drills were wanted and dearer, but holders of 30 yard sold at a decline owing to the large stock. In American manufactures nothing had been done. Woollens: Assorted Long Ells were again a little dearer, Scarlet and Lastings were unchanged. Spanish Stripes easier. Blankets very firm. There had been a slight reaction in prices of Camlets, and the downward tendency had been entirely checked, but we can hardly expect any decided change until the hot season draws towards its close. Metals: Nail Rod Iron was a shade dearer. Bar weak. Hoop steady. Wire higher. Lead was dearer in limited supply, and much wanted. Straits Tin firm, but Malacca a little lower, buyers considering the former difference in values disproportionate. Tin Plates higher. English Quicksilver unchanged, but California had improved 50 cents per picul. Coal: Arrivals during the fortnight, 316 tons Welsh, 490 do. Sydney, and 1,582 do. Anthracite to consumers, and about 250 tons Anthracite. No sales reported, and no change in quotations of kinds other than Anthracite. There had been some inquiry for this description of Coal both for shipment northwards and in anticipation of the arrival of American men-of-war, and holders were unwilling to sell except at an advance of $2 per ton.

CHINA AND JAPAN EXPORTS.

TEA.

YOKOHAMA.—The business of the fortnight had been very much restricted, in consequence of the merchants keeping back supplies until the political affairs of the country are more settled; settlements had therefore been very limited, and do not exceed 700 piculs. Higher prices had been given in some instances for a few finest parcels, but Common to Good Common remained without change. Stocks were estimated to be about 600 piculs. The Rifleman was loading for New York and the St. Dunstan sailed on the 2nd April taking 448.878 lbs. The quotations were:—Common, $18 to 22 per picul; Good Common, $22 to 24 do.; Medium, $24 to 26 do.; Good Medium, $27 to 30 do.; Fine, $31 to 32 do.; Finest, $33 to 35 do; Choice, $36 to 45 do.

SHANGHAI.—Black: Immediately after the departure of the previous mail several buyers came forward and cleared the market of the few chops that were left, consisting for the most part of third-crop Ningchow kinds, at tls. 20 to 22, being an advance of about a tael on previous quotations. This cost is materially enhanced by the late rise in exchange and freights. No further arrivals were expected from the country, and the departure of the Magellan for London, closed the season. Settlements for the fortnight, 1,450 chests. Green: Transactions for the fortnight had been small, and there was but little change in prices. A few Shanghai-packed teas had been settled at rather easier rates. As there was no stock of country-packed teas, the quotations were nominal. Settlements for the fortnight, 2,600 ½half-chests; re-shipments on owners' account, 1,448 half-chests; Stock, 3,659 packages. Total 4,048 half-chests.

HANKOW.—Three small chops of Black Tea (old), amounting in all to less than 600 chests—500 of which are dust—had come to hand, one of which had found a buyer, and the remaining two had been shipped to Shanghai on native account.

FOOCHOW.—Messrs. Olyphant and Co.'s circular states:—There have been no settlements of old tea. Most of the teamen have left for the interior, taking with them a somewhat larger amount of treasure than last season, but this is principally on loan, and not against contracts, few of which have been entered into. The principal buyers of Oolong have joined in a formal protest to teamen on the subject of dusty teas, but it is doubtful whether their representations will be productive of much good, their action the past season being so contradictory of their assertions made prior to the opening of the market, that teamen are not disposed to give credence to any representations now made them by foreigners.

AMOY.—A few small parcels of new leaf had come to hand, but nothing had transpired as to quality.

CANTON.—The season was virtually closed at this port; the stock still on offer consisting of only about 7,000 packages of the commonest grades Canton packed Teas, of very undesirable quality. It was generally credited that the buyers of leaf in the country are this year giving from 2 to 2½ tls. per picul more than was paid at the commencement of last season; and it is anticipated that fully that advance on the opening prices of last season will be demanded for the first arrivals of new Teas.

SILK.

YOKOHAMA.—The disturbed state of the country had interfered with the market, and Silks of good quality had been scarcer than ever. Prices had consequently generally advanced:—Good Medium classes especially had obtained considerably higher rates than last quoted. Settlements are estimated at 550 bales. Stocks are reduced to about 500 bales. The quotations (laid down in London all charges included at exchange 4s. 3½d. six months' sight) were as follows:—Hanks: Mybash, Sinchu, &c., 1, 2, 34s. 6d. to 36s. 6d.; do. do., 1, 2, 3, 31s. 9d. to 33s. 7d.; do. do., 2, 3, 4, 38s. 1d. to 30s. 10d.; do. do., Inferior, 25s. 4d. to 27s. 7d.; Oshu Best, 32s. 8d. to 35s. 9d.; do. Medium, 28s. 1d. to 30s. 10d.; do. Inferior, 24s. 8d. to 26s. 6d.; Coshu, 1, 2, nom., 30s. 10d. to 31s. 11d.; do. Medium, 27s. 2d. to 30s. 1d.; do. Inferior, 23s. 7d. to 26s. 3d.; Sodai 1, 2, 27s. 2d. to 30s. 10d.; do. Inferior, 23s. 7d. to 25s. 4d.; Etchesen Best, 26s. 6d. to 29s. 0d.; do. 2, 23s. 7d. to 25s. 4d.; do. Inferior, 20s. 10d. to 23s. 7d.

SHANGHAI.—Owing to more favourable advices having been received from the home silk markets, the settlements for the fortnight had been much larger than were expected, but the arrivals from the country about keep pace with them, so that the estimated unsold stock remained unaltered. Correct quotations were difficult to arrive at excepting for Chop Taatlees and Re-reels, a portion of the inferior classes by this mail having been taken in barter against imports, at prices which, if reported correctly, would show a considerable advance on the last mail's rates. It would not now appear that the export for the present season will exceed 41,500 bales Chinas. The hatching of the eggs for the new season's crop was expected to commence immediately. The last P. and O. steamer, cleared on the 2nd April, with 282 bales Chinas and 123 Japans for England, 148 and 236 bales for France, and 47 bales Chinas for Bombay. The present steamer had 300 bales engaged, and was expected to take nearly the whole of the settlements. The Messageries Imperiales steamer had 24 bales engaged. Settlements for the fortnight, 650 bales. The quotations (at exchange 6s. 0½d. per tael, freight overland, 11 tls. per bale) were as follows:—No. 2, Tsatlee, 29s. 8d.; No. 3 Tsatlee, 28s. 7d.; No. 2 Taysaam, 21s. 3d. to 22s.; No. 3 Taysaam, 19s. 2d. to 20s. 3d.; No. 2 Yuenfa and Hainings, 24s. 4d. to 25s. 1d.; No. 3, 23s. 4d. to 23s. 7d.; Hangchow Tsatlee, inferior, 21s. 3d. to 21s. 10d.; Throwns, 23s. 10d. to 25s. 10d.

CANTON.—Messrs. Olyphant's Circular says:—"The business of the fortnight is comprised in the settlements of our parcel of Re-reeled Cumchook, composed mainly of medium and second-qualities at $530 to 545 per picul. We consider this an extreme price, and, in face of the growing desire of holders to place their stocks, conducive to no good, merely stimulating them to demand prices far beyond the views of most purchasers, evinced by the reaction at the close, when holders, after demanding full prices, were much more anxious to realise. In other descriptions we can learn of no offers. Prospects for the new crop still continue favourable."

THE P. AND O. COMPANY.

The following extracts embody the most interesting features of the Report of the Directors of the P. and O. Company, to be presented at the meeting of the 4th June :—

The directors have much satisfaction in being able to report that the operations of the six months ending 31st March last, although they do not compare very favourably with corresponding periods of years gone by, show to advantage when examined with the result of those of the first six months of the financial year 1866 67. The absence of revenue from specie freights to the East is, however, still severely felt; and, while there is no lack of bulky cargo both to and from India by the company's steamers, it will be obvious to the proprietors that the cotton now imported, and the coarse goods exported by the overland route, do not constitute such profitable freightage as China silks, India shawls, and other costly commodities. This profitable business has not only fallen off in itself, but what remains of it is shared with energetic competitors, whose steamers now navigate the India and China seas in parallel lines with those of this company.

The shareholders will bear in mind that the new mail contract only came into operation in February, and that consequently its provisions apply but to a small portion of the period reviewed in this report. It should be stated on the other hand that the receipts for the half-year have been enhanced by the charter money of the vessels engaged in the Abyssinian Expedition, and it is partly owing to this circumstance that the directors are enabled to recommend a dividend of 3 per cent. free of income-tax. for the six months ending 31st March last.

The directors have a very mournful duty to perform in reporting the death of Mr. Arthur Anderson, the late respected chairman of the company, This lamented gentleman filled not only the office of chairman, but, as is known to most of the shareholders, was the last survivor of the three gentlemen who took so prominent a part in the formation of the company, whose names are recorded on its charter as its original managing directors, and to whose energy and ability so much of its success has been due.

With the death of Mr. Anderson, the system by which the original managing directors were remunerated by a commission on the various branches of the company's business, comes to an end. In the arrangements which have in consequence become necessary, the board of directors naturally feel that a greater amount of responsibility will devolve upon them. Hitherto no special remuneration has been attached to the office of chairman, who had either to fulfil a merely honorary duty, or, when the office was filled by a managing director, was remunerated by the commission enjoyed by him; but, under the altered circumstances, it seems desirable that such a salary should be attached to the office of chairman as shall ensure the devotion to its duties of the greater part of the time and attention of the gentleman appointed.

Acting in conformity with the provisions of the deed of settlement the board have appointed one of their body to the vacant post; and, in selecting Mr. Patrick Douglas Hadow, who has for some years acted with the late chairman as deputy, they feel assured that their choice has fallen on a gentleman eminently qualified by his long experience and constant application to the business of the company, to fill the office with advantage to the company.

It will also be necessary to add to the number of the board of directors which is now below the minimum fixed by the deed of settlement.

These alterations will require an addion of £1,300 to £1,500 to the sum now annually brought to the charge of the company for directors' remuneration; on the other hand, the cessation of Mr. Anderson's commission will result in a saving of about £12,000 per annum. A considerable portion of Mr. Anderson's commission was for many years devoted to the purpose of forming a provident and good service fund, and to kindred objects in the interest of the company. This fund now amounts to a sum of £50,000, and it is not intended to propose to the proprietors to apply, beyond the interest on this amount, any portion of the revenue of the company to its further increase.

Under these circumstances, the board venture to anticipate that the proprietary will not regard the sum of £4,000 per annum for the remuneration of the chairman and board of directors as unreasonable, considering the magnitude of the interests committed to their charge, and they suggest that the apportionment of this sum should be left in the hands of the board. It is not competent for the proprietors to deal finally with this question on the present occasion, but a resolution embodying the views of the directors will be submitted for approval at the next annual meeting.

THE SUEZ CANAL.

The progress of the Suez Canal formed the subject of a paper recently read before the Scotch Institution of Engineers by Mr. H. C. Lobnitz, of the firm of Henderson, Coulborn and Co., Glasgow. Like many recent visitors, Mr. Lobnitz went a sceptic and returned a believer. Much of the information embodied in his paper has already been given in our previous articles, such, for instance, as a description of the method of making concrete for the breakwaters out of the sand dredged from the canal, and the construction and working of the steam dredging machines; but we extract a few interesting paragraphs. Mr. Lobnitz commences by saying :—

Before seeing the work I must candidly confess that my ideas on the subject were that the company had embarked in a mad scheme of endlessly digging through sand, without the least probability of any permanent result, and that, to fix a date, and at the same time hope for a successful means of communication by large vessels between the Mediterranean and the Red Sea, was next to impossible. My object now, after a most minute and careful investigation is, 1st, to show you how completely my ideas are changed; 2nd, to detail the complete and efficient machinery which is employed for the excavation and the removal of the material excavated; and, lastly, to show the date which, in all probability, will see the triumphant completion of this gigantic scheme, which when finished will form a new link between Europe and the East.

The town of Port Said has now a population of 10,000 inhabitants, and is supplied with abundance of fresh water, carried through iron pipes from Ismailia. This they use for boilers on board all their steamers and dredgers, owing to the density of the water in the canal. The length of the harbour from the breakwater to the canal will be about two miles when completed. I left Port Said for Ismailia in a small steamer, and as I went along the canal took soundings every mile. The canal for about twenty miles is formed from a swamp extending as far as the eye can reach on each side, and has been dredged out, the excavations now forming a bank of some five feet high on each side. These excavations for eleven miles are sand, and after that Nile earth, where the greatest doubt existed at first as to the banks standing well. In their cutting they came upon one of the ancient branches of the Nile. At this point they dredged out about a mile to its full depth of twenty-six feet, more than six months ago, and the result has fully proved the fallacy of the doubts which were expressed. I particularly sounded this part in six or seven places, and found the depth uniformly 26 feet. The whole length of the canal, from Port Said to Ismailia, a distance of 47 miles, has an average depth of 10 feet, some places being 14 to 15 feet, while others are not more than 7 to 8 feet. From the place where the Nile earth commences to about 28 miles from Port Said, the excavations are much of the same nature, having an appearance like mud; but beyond this to Kautara, some five miles further on, clay occurs, and is so tenacious that it often choked up the buckets of the dredgers, and had to be taken out by shovels and picks. Immediately beyond this the bottom is again sand for about five miles, after which there is a mixture of plaster of Paris and sand. Between Kautara and Port Said I passed every mile a dredging machine at work, each one discharging on to the banks, by means of machines, called by the French couloirs. The average breadth of the canal is 300 feet, but in places where the deepest cuttings occur is reduced to 200 feet. Lake Timsah is about three miles square, and has been only lately filled with water from the Mediterranean; its depth ranges from 14 to 22 feet, and it was formerly a dry valley. At this lake is the entrance of the fresh water canal, coming from the Nile at Zagazig to Ismailia, and from Ismailia going right through to Suez. It is about 18 feet above the level of the main one, and is joined to it at Ismailia by two locks. This canal, of which you have no doubt heard, and which is in fact the life of the whole desert, was formed in the year 1863. This work was commenced by about 10,000 men in May, 1863, and finished in December of the same year—the total length being about 90 miles. While working at this canal at first, 1,500 camels were required to keep the men supplied with water to drink. The navvies were Arabs supplied by the Viceroy, but the company had to provide them with fresh water, biscuits, and also baskets for carrying the substance excavated. Some 15,000 to 20,000 baskets were required per week. From Port Said to El Guisr, which occupied us about ten hours, as we had many stoppages to survey and take soundings, I passed five to six tugs, each with a train of barges coming from or going to Suez by the main canal as far as Ismailia, and thence by the fresh water canal to their destination. Each of these trains consisted of twelve barges, and was towed by a small screw tug as far as Ismailia, and from that place to Suez on the fresh water canal by a chain tug, on the same principal as our steam horse ferry boats on the Clyde. Each of these barges carried fromfifty to a hundred tons, and drew about five feet. I met also a paddle steam tug, which was transported by this route to the Red Sea. I merely mention this to show that by means of the fresh water canal and the section of the main canal already opened, there is even now a great facility for transit of small craft as well as goods. And another great feature of this route is the very moderate charge of freight, being only £1 sterling per ton; whereas, by the only other means of transit from Alexandria to Suez, by rail, the charge is from £2 to £4 10s. per ton. The transport has been for the last six months upwards of 10,000 tons per month. From El Guisr we passed up Lake Timsah, and landed at the wharf of Ismailia. The lake is a very pretty piece of water, about three to four miles broad, and Ismailia, situated on its banks, is quite a new town entirely sprung up within the last four years. The population is about 10,000, and they have here a very fine hotel; in fact, the whole town is entirely European. All the principal officers and managers of the canal reside here, and have telegraph stations, which communicate to Port Said and Suez, with offices at the principal headquarters along the line, situated about eight miles apart. The Viceroy has a palace, and a pacha is stationed here. From here the main canal is excavated for some five miles farther towards Serapium, and the water from the Mediterranean flows up that distance.

Regarded as a pecuniary speculation, it is the opinion of experienced merchants that the canal should prove a great success. The amount of merchandise shipped annually between Europe and the East and vice versa, is estimated in round numbers at 10,000,000 tons each year. The advantage afforded by the canal route will consist in the diminution by nearly one-half to ports in the East, which, of course, entails the practicability of performing two voyages in the time where only one can now be made by the Cape, a material diminution of the rate of insurance; while against these there are the very light dues to be imposed by the company of 8s. per ton, and a small per centage on the value of the cargo, which would probably amount to the same sum. It is expected, therefore, that half, if not more of this tonnage, will be at once conveyed through the canal, or say between five and six million tons per annum. This would give a revenue of nearly four-and-a-half million sterling per annum, to cover the expenses of the company, in interest of money and maintaining a few dredgers as here on the Clyde to keep the channel clear, and the payment of a staff adequate to manage the transit, tugs, and pilots. Mr. Lobnitz after expressing his obligations to M. Giuchard, the chief of the transit department of the company, concluded with a warm tribute to the practical genius of M. de Lesseps, to whom the Suez Canal owes its existence.

THE MONT CENIS RAILWAY.

The following account of the official opening of the Mont Cenis Railway on the 23rd of May is abbreviated from a letter of The Times' correspondent:—

"Across the Alps in Four Hours" reads like a very sensational heading, and the success of the Sommering Railway cannot be said to have prepared the world to believe in the much greater feat of a railway over the Mont Cenis. It is the old story of Columbus' egg. What appeared impossible is suddenly shown to be easy. Fancied danger is converted into undoubted safety. I know not if any among the fifty persons who on the 23rd May came from Susa to St. Michel by rail in little more than four hours of actual travelling felt trepidation when setting foot in the comfortable carriages of the Mont Cenis Railway, but I cannot doubt that if any did their misgivings must have been completely dissipated long before they reached their journey's end. Some of the worst bits of the line, the steepest gradients, the sharpest curves, the most appalling glimpses down precipices and into rugged ravines, where the train, if overthrown into them, would most assuredly be smashed to splinters, occur within the first few miles after leaving Susa. But the newcomer on the line contemplates these without emotion. No unpleasant sensation of peril distracts his attention from observation of the engineering skill and resource displayed in the construction of the line, or prevents his enjoying the beauties of the mountain scenery. He feels like one drawn along a difficult road, but from whose mind every timorous sensation is banished by seeing how completely the strong and skilful driver has his horses in hand, directs them at will, curbs them with a finger. And, indeed, it is this curb-power which constitutes one of the greatest marvels of the Fell system. When going twelve miles an hour down gradients of one in twelve the breaks are applied, the perpendicular wheels cease to turn, the horizontal wheels clip the central rail with hundred-vice power, and within some thirty yards the train is brought to a complete standstill without the slightest shock or concussion. The control is perfect and measurable to a nicety. In fact, on the descent of the mountain, there is nothing to warn a traveller who should not look out of window that he is on a railway of a very unusual construction. The motion is steady and easy, there is no jarring of any kind, and one soon ceases to notice the sloping position of the train. Not less surprising than the steepness of the ascents and descents is the abruptness of many of the curves, some of them forty metres radius. Some of the curves are so sharp that one can hardly understand how the carriages, which are about fourteen feet long, outside measurement, contrive to grind round them. But round they do go, with perfect ease, just when one might fancy they were about to fly off, like a steel bar escaping from a curved groove, and, as they turn, the wheels and rails together give out a shrill metallic sound which one at first may mistake for a whisper of the railway whistle. The places where the line runs very close to the edge of deep precipices are few in number. Danger from avalanches has been guarded against by covered ways, some in masonry—where stones and pieces of rock are apt to fall—and others of iron roofing.

The time hitherto employed (in the various trial trips recently made) in getting across the mountain has been a little over four hours of actual locomotion. But stoppages are inevitable, chiefly for the purpose of watering the engine, and the journey will hardly take less time than five hours and a-half, at least under present arrangements. It is a great object to economise weight, and consequently much water cannot be carried. The unnecessary weight of the French engines has to be saved in other ways. It would not be surprising if English engines were hereafter to be introduced on the Italian side of the mountain, which is the more difficult of the two. The engines must then be changed at the station before arrival at the French frontier, there marked by a large stone with "Italia" on one side and "France" on the other. On the journey from Susa there are four stoppages for water, and two on the ascent from St. Michel on the journey to Italy. Going down the mountain no stoppages for water occur, because no steam-power is used, the train proceeding by its own momentum. When under steam no more pressure is put upon the central rail than is really necessary for perfect safety, because the greater the resistance opposed the larger must be the force employed to overcome it, and the greater, consequently, the consumption of fuel and the wear and tear of machinery. Most of the stations are at present of a very primitive description, and the wretched hamlets near them are not likely to supply a great many travellers to the line. The natives contemplate the passing trains with an air of combined wonder and amusement. The terror it was supposed horses and mules would feel at the sight and sound of the rapid trains and snorting engines was not very apparent in the animals we passed upon the road. Some of my fellow travellers, who had crossed the mountain to Susa on the previous day, told me they had passed two diligences, the team of one of which was a little uneasy, and needed somebody at their heads, but the horses of the other not only showed no alarm, but actually had the audacity to profit by a bit of level ground and try to race with the engine, with which, by dint of whipcord, they managed for a short way to keep up. The speed of the trains on this line never exceeds twelve, or at most thirteen miles. For the present the managers of the line allow five and a-half hours for the journey each way. By degrees it is hoped and expected that the time will be reduced to five hours, but there seems no probability that the speed will be augmented.

Yesterday's train brought fifty-four persons from Susa. Among them were the Duke of Sutherland, chairman of the company; Messrs. Thomas Brassey, E. Blount, A. Brogden, W. B. Buddicom, J. B. Fell, directors; Mr. J. Burnlees, chief engineer; Captain Sumner, Mr. Crampton, Count Arrivabene, Signor Milla, Commissioner of the Italian Government, &c. The day was beautiful and very hot; the mountain was seen to the greatest advantage, its lower slopes rich with the bright green of early summer, its upper pastures blue with the gentianella, its peaks streaked with lingering snow, now rapidly melting away and swelling the foaming torrents that dash through the furrows in its flanks. In all respects the excursion was most agreeable, and the manner in which it was accomplished must have been most satisfactory to all those persons present who are interested in the undertaking, which has been carried out entirely by English capital and English skill. At St. Michel a dinner had been prepared at the Hotel de la Poste. The Duke of Sutherland presided, and proposed "The Health of the Queen," whose birthday it was.

The opening of the line to the public is fixed for the 8th of June. The trains will be of several kinds,—first-class, express, ordinary trains, and goods trains. The maximum number of carriages will be five or six, with one or two luggage vans. The carriages are upon the omnibus plan, and one travels sideways. The width of the carriages is 6½ft., outside measurement. By means of small platforms outside the doors, which are at each end of the carriages, one may walk through the whole train. In general there will be a luggage van between the foremost carriage and the engine, so as to protect the passengers from the heat.

Various considerations, and especially the shortness of the time during which the line is likely to be open (it is bound to close when the tunnel line is completed), rendered it desirable to carry the Summit Railway for nearly the whole of its length over the roads already existing. This rendered a very narrow gauge compulsory, made the line longer, and the gradients in many places worse. Had Fell's system been tried ten years ago, when the tunnel was only about to commence, the monstrous and most costly labour of boring through the mountain would probably not have been undertaken, and then it would have been well worth while to expend, if necessary, double the very moderate sum the line has cost, and to make a railroad such as we probably shall soon see over some other of the great Alpine passes, and over other great Europeans mountain chains. As it is, the summit line must be looked upon as a pilot balloon. It has been cheaply made, for it is calculated that if it runs only for six or seven years the capitalists who have embarked in it will get back their money, principal and interest. This is encouraging for future enterprises of the kind.

OUR POSITION IN JAPAN.

ONE more tragedy has to be added to the long list of bloody deeds that have marked each successive step of our intercourse with the Japanese. The apparent fact that we can make no movement towards establishing closer relations with these people without being met by some such murderous demonstration has not unnaturally produced in many minds an impression that the entire race is inimical to foreign intercourse, and that all these violent acts are attributable to one cause alone—a bitter and unreasoning hatred of the intruders. We have already argued against this supposition, and endeavoured to show that for each outrage on foreign visitors there was some special cause; in a few cases a real or fancied insult, in others a desire on the part of some jealous Daimio to embroil the SHIOGOON with his new allies. The last three troubles have come in rapid succession, one having apparently led to another, and they form no exception to the rule. The fracas at Kobe was entirely owing to the persistence of some French soldiers in crossing the line of the escort of Prince BIZEN'S Karoo. This led to a disturbance, in which the lives of other than French subjects were doubtless endangered, but no lives were lost, and ample atonement might have been exacted without the infliction of capital punishment on the over-hasty officer. With ill-judged severity, however the foreign representatives seem to have united in exacting the extreme penalty; the officer was executed, but within a week was avenged by the massacre at Sakai. We cannot for a moment doubt the connection between the two events. French soldiers originated the quarrel that led to the execution—"Judicial murder," the Japan Times calls it, and the term is hardly too strong — and French sailors were the victims of the feud thus aroused. Reparation was of necessity exacted; but the French Minister seems by this time to have discovered that the execution of the Karoo was a false step, and sought to repair it by a display of moderation in sparing one-half the number of Japanese brought out for execution. This may have a good effect; but, unfortunately for us, all the foreign Ministers must share the odium attaching to the death of BIZEN'S officer, while M. ROCHES alone will be credited with the latter act of clemency. This alternation of retaliatory measures is deplorable, for the bitterness they will inevitably leave behind them will not soon die out. However well-disposed towards us may be the MIKADO, the chief DAIMIOS, and the bulk of the populace, the friends of BIZEN'S Karoo, and of the eleven men subsequently beheaded, may yet combine, and form the nucleus of an anti-foreign party sufficiently strong to embarrass our future position in no slight degree.

The attack on the escort of Sir HARRY PARKES was clearly the act of a handful of fanatics; only two were actively engaged in it, one of whom was cut down at the first onset, while the other, by his extraordinary address and audacity, was enabled to wound ten persons more or less seriously before he was secured. It is impossible to put any political interpretation upon this last outrage, and the promptitude with which a full indemnity was offered by the MIKADO'S Government must be accepted as an indication of genuine regret on their part. As we approach the fountain-head the misunderstandings that have hitherto impeded us seem gradually to clear away. The obstructive, deceitful policy of the SHIOGOONATE disappears, and in the MIKADO we find it replaced apparently by a candid and generous spirit. An edict declaring the murder or injury of a foreigner to be a felony, doubly punishable with disgrace and death, is to be proclaimed throughout the Empire, and this, emanating from the de facto ruler of the land, will doubtless be respected. It is evident that not a few of the troubles of Japan—internal as well as external—have been due to the anomalous institution of a divided sovereignty; and with the downfall of this system we may justly hope to see the commencement of a new era, more peaceful and prosperous both to natives and foreigners than the past ten years have been.

GUNBOATS FOR CHINA.

ON making inquiry some time since as to the despatch of the new class of gunboats built specially for service on the China coast we were informed that none of them were under orders for the China station, and that in effect it was not decided that any of them would be sent there. We are glad to find, however, that at length two of them have been despatched, namely the Avon and Dwarf, and that they are fitted and armed specially with a view to service against pirates. An idea seems lately to have gained ground that piracy was dying out, and that the old gunboats now rotting at Hong Kong were quite sufficient to keep the remnant of it in check; our last advices from Shanghai sufficiently prove the fallacy of this supposition, for piracy is evidently reviving in the neighbourhood of the Yantsze, and will soon grow as formidable as ever unless kept down by a constant display of force. Neither would it be safe to depend altogether on the new Chinese gunboats now on their way out; they are undoubtedly capable of doing good service, and will do it, in conjunction with a British force; but if left to act alone, it is to be feared they would soon relapse into idleness or inutility. The same paper that chronicles a fresh "cropping up" of piracy near Shanghai, mentions that five Chinese gunboats were lying idle in that port. With good management we may get valuable aid from the Chinese in extirpating these pests, but if left to their own devices they will never accomplish it. So we may congratulate those interested in the coasting trade on the departure of the Avon and Dwarf, and trust more of the same sort will soon follow.

THE PENANG MAILS.

A DEPUTATION, consisting of Mr. BARING, M.P., Mr. MILLER, M.P., Mr. HORSMAN, M.P., Mr. NAPIER (Chairman of the Straits Settlements Association), Messrs. GUTHRIE, BOUSTEAD, GILMAN, SIMONS, MCTAGGART, RIGG, HARVEY (Borneo Company), BUXTON (GLEDSTANES and Co.), and ROBERTSON (Chartered Mercantile Bank), waited on the Duke of MONTROSE, Postmaster-General, on the 20th May, to call attention to the great loss and inconvenience arising from the stoppage of the P. and O. Company's steamers to and from Penang. After hearing the statements of the deputation, his lordship intimated that, although he regretted the inconvenience, it was not possible to alter the terms of the contract with the P. and O. Company. It was quite evident that the Duke had been posted by his subordinates to "object," and the merits of the case had little weight. He quoted the small amount of postage received on Penang correspondence as proof of the insignificance of the place, and would not admit that the value of the trade—£5,000,000 per annum—was a sufficient answer. The deputation, of course, felt that their opportunity for protesting had been lost. Had they been vigilant at the time, and had their protest been made in the House of Commons when the new contract was brought up for approval, the case might have been different. As it is, the only measure the Penang merchants can persevere in, is to get the Government to arrange with the British India Steam Company for a fortnightly service, leaving Calcutta on the arrival of the mails from England, as suggested by us some months since. The Penang petition to the House of Commons, which has been kept back pending the result of the deputation, will shortly be presented to the House by Mr. BARING.

WE some months since announced that negotiations were pending between the directors of the Messageries Imperiales and the French Government, for a fortnightly mail to India and China in place of the present monthly service. We can now state that all the terms of agreement have been concluded, and that the exact terms of the convention will be brought before the Corps Legislatif before its close; and from the large increase in French interests in China and Japan there is no doubt the convention will be sanctioned, and that on or before January, 1869, the fortnightly service will be commenced, starting on alternate Sundays from Marseilles (leaving London on Friday), and thus, with the P. and O. service, a weekly mail to China and Japan will be an accomplished fact.

TELEGRAPHIC COMMUNICATION WITH INDIA AND CHINA.

On the 22nd May an influential deputation of members of Parliament, merchants and manufacturers, electricians and railway directors, waited upon the Secretary for India to impress upon him the paramount necessity of improving our telegraphic communication with the East. Mr. Crawford, M.P., was the chief spokesman, and with him there were Lord W. Hay, Sir C. Bright, M.P., Sir S. Canning, Mr. T. B. Potter, M.P., Sir J. Anderson, Mr. Graves, M.P., Mr. Jacob Bright, M.P., Mr. Baxley, M.P., Mr. Crum-Ewing, M.P., Mr. Edwards, M.P., Captain Osborn, C.B., Mr. Horsfall, M.P., and Mr. Cheetham, M.P. From the statements made it appears that last November a memorial was addressed to the Secretary of State for India by leading commercial men in London, representing that in 1866 a Parliamentary committee had declared our telegraphic communication with the East to be imperfectly organised, badly worked, and liable at any time to interruption from political or other causes entirely beyond the control of the British Government. Since then the imperfections had grown, and general dissatisfaction increased. It was now submitted that three years' working had proved the Persian Gulf cable to be altogether inadequate to the requirements of the age, and that although the Government of India had made great efforts to improve it, the delays, uncertainty, inaccuracy, and irregularity in the order of the transmission of messages were as great as when the line was opened. The difficulty was easy of solution. A submarine communication from one of the south-western ports of England to Gibraltar, and thence by Malta to Alexandria, with a cable down the Red Sea and across the Indian Ocean to Bombay, would, with the line through Egypt now under British management, complete an independent British system from England to India, under one uniform management and control, and open to no foreign interruption or interference, except in the short and unavoidable distance between Alexandria and Suez. The deputation submitted that, important though the commercial interests involved undoubtedly were, they were only secondary to the great national stake which we have in the East, and hence they urged that this matter should be treated as an important Imperial question. They asked first, that the Government would consider the propriety of itself constructing and working the suggested line; or, if that were for any good reason declined, that it would at all events express a willingness to assist in some fitting method associated private enterprise in carrying out the undertaking.

Sir STAFFORD NORTHCOTE, in replying to the gentlemen who had addressed him (Mr. Crawford, M.P., Mr. Cassells, Mr. Cheetham, M.P., and Lord W. Hay), said if there was no telegraphic communication between England and India he should agree that this was a matter of interest both to the Indian Government and the English public, and that steps ought undoubtedly to be taken, in which the Indian Government should bear its full share, for the establishment of some such communication as that suggested. But there were two distinct lines in existence, although they were, without sufficient consideration, spoken of as one; the line through Germany, Russia, and Persia took a very different direction to that via Constantinople. Of course there might be political circumstances that would affect both lines; but, as a rule, anything of the kind interfering with one would leave the other free. The two kinds of complaints made ought to be kept separate; namely, the complaint that the existing lines were not in efficient operation, and the complaint that difficulties might arise from political considerations that would destroy their freedom. In the first an acknowledged difficulty had to be grappled with, but no case had been made out proving that the construction of a new line was the proper remedy. Assuming the continuance of present peaceful relations, was there anything to prevent the existing lines being made, what he admitted they were not at present, satisfactory media of communication? The Government were aware of and regretted the inefficient working of the lines, and were directing their attention to their improvement. Complications and mistakes were, no doubt, likely to arise from the confusion in passing from one jurisdiction to another, but it was hoped to meet that by joining in the European convention. Indeed, he might state that arrangements were being made, with every hope of a successful issue, that would greatly improve the telegraphic communication through France or Italy to Constantinople. There was every prospect of being able to overcome the difficulties mentioned with regard to the Persian Gulf line. If existing systems could be got to work as they had worked before the wishes of the public would be met, and all that was required both politically and commercially would be achieved. The proposed alternative, via the Red Sea, would not by any means get rid of the difficulties that had been urged. He himself was once anxious to have a line from Falmouth to Gibraltar, but since then things had changed, and the science of submarine telegraphy had made such rapid progress that it was no longer a rash undertaking for private enterprise. He had reason to know that at present the Imperial Treasury was not prepared to take half of the expense of a thing of this kind, and therefore he felt bound to decline on the part of the Indian Treasury to take the whole expenses. He suggested that the deputation should address themselves quite as much to the First Lord of the Treasury as to the Indian Secretary. Recognising the right of the deputation to come to him to complain of defects in existing lines, he assured them the Government were earnest in trying to remove them. But as at present advised, they were not prepared to undertake the laying down of a line via the Red Sea. He should be glad to see the line laid down, but he had heard no satisfactory reason why the Government should do it. Without wishing to discourage the project, he thought it best in frankness to say that, whilst ready to do everything in their power to improve existing lines, they were not inclined to give either a guarantee or make a Red Sea line.

Mr. CRAWFORD, regretting the hon. baronet's decision, thanked him for the interview, which then terminated.

A PARAGRAPH that lately "went the round" of the daily papers, to the effect that Bishop ALFORD, of Hong Kong, had resigned, or intended to resign his See, has met with an authoritative contradiction.

COTTON SUPPLY AND CONSUMPTION.

The following comments from a mercantile circular are useful and instructive:—

An equilibrium is restored in about every fifth year between supply and consumption. In looking at the averages of former years, we find that for periods of three years there is considerable variation in the supply as compared with the consumption. The following estimate was made by us, in a cotton statement made in 1857, which may throw some light on this subject:—

Taking periods of ten years, in the three years ending 1825, the average annual growth of United States cotton was about equal to its total average consumption, being respectively between 500,000 and 600,000 bales, the price being within the same period 11d. at Liverpool for good uplands. In the ten years ending 1835, the annual production was 979,000 bales, an increase of 80 per cent. or eight per cent. per annum, the consumption having increased in about the same ratio, the price at Liverpool being 9d. In the decennial period ending 1845, the average crop was 1,824,000, about the same rate of increase as in the last preceding period, the consumption having augmented about 85 per cent., and the price being 6½d. In the subsequent ten years, terminating in 1855, the production was 2,545,000, average increase about 40 per cent.; price 5½d., the consumption having increased only about 40 per cent. But in nearly equally dividing the last period, 1850 with 1855, we shall find that in the first six years there was a very small and the last four years a large increase. The equilibrium had been restored about the year 1852, and prices had gradually risen as the production lessened and consumption increased. From 1825 to 1845 cotton fell from 11d. to 5½d., the effect of over production. In coming down to the last decade, we see the influence of a restoration of the equilibrium between the supply and consumption, prices having advanced from 1845 to 1855 about six per cent. Now, whether we shall fall back to the period between 1835 and 1845, 7d. for good upland, as the future standard, is a subject for conjecture; but we feel confident that we shall never again recede to the prices between 1845 and 1850.

These remarks have an application to the present crisis in the cotton trade. Down to the year 1857 there was an evident tendency in the consumption being in excess of the supply, from the higher price of labour increasing the cost of production; but at the present period we have to superadd an increase of that price, amounting to 100 per cent. (for the maintenance of a slave before the war cost $30 per annum, while the wages now of a freedman cost $60), the loss of capital and consequent augmentation of the cost of cultivation from a rise in the rate of interest—one of the elements of that cost. There are two reasons, therefore, why the decade before the war, or any specific period, cannot be assumed as a standard of comparison for the future: 1. The loss of labour. 2. The destruction of capital.

The loss of labour is not, perhaps, entirely irreparable. There is a possibility of partially substituting white for slave labour, as we have said, by immigration. It is not the absolute annihilation of the money value of 4,000,000 slaves, estimated to be worth $3,000,000,000, and the consequent payment of wages to twice the cost for their maintenance before the war, but the destruction of capital in stock, fencing, implements of agriculture, and all the other appliances that constitute the machinery of a well-regulated cotton plantation. This loss is irreparable. It is this destruction of productive power in the South that renders any comparison with the most unfavourable era of the cotton culture fallacious. It is the disorganisation of Southern society to which we must look for such a diminution in the supply of Southern cotton that must affect its future price. It is to the disturbance of economical relations that we must seek for the cause that is about to adjust the value of cotton and its manufactured products to a new scale of prices, in conformity with the purchasing ability of the consumers of yarn and cotton fabrics. If they are able and willing to pay an advance in the prices of these products, equivalent to the advance of 100 per cent. in the money value of the raw material, an advance to even 12d. in the price of cotton will not check its consumption.

We have, in fact, fallen on a new era in the cotton trade. In the adjustment of prices to a new scale of values, we are without precedent or example. The past is no guide to the future. It follows, from these facts, we are not warranted in assuming the same limit to consumption or prices which compelled a resort to short time in the decade before 1860, when the limiting price was 8d. for middling upland, while the price of 10d. would fail to do so in 1868. The question is then narrowed to this point: What per centage of advance in the value of the manufactured products of cotton wool will afford a remunerating profit to the manufacturer? If sold in England for the above description of cotton about 20c. in gold and 28c. in currency is assumed as affording a remunerating profit to the manufacturer, as well as a reasonable profit to the grower, about 100 per cent. before the war, the prices of yarn and goods must rise proportionately, irrespective of the rate of duty and the expenses of importation to remunerate the manufacturer; or the consumption of the raw material must be diminished to establish an equilibrium between the demand and supply.

It is evident that we have no data on which to found any estimate except we rely on loose analogies. We shall, therefore, offer no estimate as to the future probable supply and consumption, resting satisfied with those general reasons we have offered in favour of the theory that the consumption must be in excess of the production for some years to come. There are so many contingencies to affect the growth, that figures would only delude. The consumption is not so liable to influences that may affect it. The continuance of peace and the cheapness of money are the two circumstances favourable to increase of consumption, if we except the failure or abundance of the wheat harvest, the low or high price of breadstuffs, acting indirectly on the price of cotton, as the purchasing power of the bulk of the community for clothing is increased or diminished according to the amount of their expenditure for the staff of life.

THE steamers of the Messageries Imperiales are now despatched from Marseilles at 4.30 P.M., instead of 2 P.M. as hitherto.

CHARTERED MERCANTILE BANK OF INDIA, LONDON, AND CHINA

The annual meeting of the proprietors was held on the 19th inst., at the Bank premises, No. 65, Old Broad-street; G. G. NICOL, Esq., in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN, in moving the adoption of the report, while regretting that there had been a falling off in the business of the bank, referred with satisfaction to the fact that the amount of the reserve was amply sufficient to cover all losses. The result of the half-year's working, he was afraid, would disappoint the shareholders, as it had the directors. When they met last half-year the board expressed a confident opinion, in which they were thoroughly warranted, that the profits of the second half-year would show a decided improvement. In that opinion they had been disappointed, the causes being continued stagnation in trade, and the impossibility of carrying on business with any profit or satisfaction. Those causes, however, damaging as they had been to them and to other banking institutions, were only of a secondary nature when viewed in connection with the unfortunate failure of the four months' usance.

In making out the accounts consideration had been given to the suggestion of Mr. Brown, that they should be prepared in a different form; but while the directors had not considered it advisable to depart from the course originally prescribed by their auditors, they had not the least objection to put the shareholders in possession of all the information which the form suggested by Mr. Brown would have given them. With that view, he might state that the losses incidental to the last year, and which had been written off, amounted to £13,654. 17s. 6d., of which £10,000 belonged to the previous half-year. The working expenses, which in the previous half-year were about 15 per cent., showed a reduction this half-year, the directors having succeeded in effecting a slight retrenchment. However, he wished to remind then that the working expenses could not be reduced lower than 14 per cent., and that it would be extremely unwise to push economy too far in that respect.

The next point to which he wished to refer was the item of £47,882, written off for bad and doubtful debts connected with old accounts. The unfortunate accounts of 1865 and 1866 had been the subject of much anxiety and disappointment to the board, and when they last met he stated that they fully expected that the surplus profits of the succeeding half-year would be sufficient to provide for those debts. In that hope they had been disappointed for the reason he had already given—namely, that the profits fell far short of their expectations. They had dealt with the bad debts in their books as far as they could, but there still remained a few which they could not properly adjust and which were accordingly carried forward. They still hoped, and confidently believed, that at no distant period they should be able finally to extinguish them in a more satisfactory manner than they could do now. As regarded the future he was happy to say that matters looked encouraging. During the past two years the business of the bank had, owing to a variety of causes, been almost in a state of abeyance, but since the beginning of this year considerable changes had taken place in their affairs. Since the 1st of January, there had been a great increase in their deposits, and their prospects, he was happy to say, were exceedingly good. If the profits were not so large as in former years, they were at all events beyond the danger of heavy losses, and at present there was not a single shilling of their money in jeopardy. (Cheers.) The India and China trade was never in a sounder state than it was now, and he thought that with the experience they had gained they should be able to conduct their business satisfactorily and with a fair profit.

Mr. BROWN, while expressing the utmost confidence in the chairman and directors, thought that, having regard to the rumours which were floating about, it was better they should know the amount of the losses, and receive the fullest information on that point. He expressed his dissatisfaction with the form of the accounts, remarking that if they knew the gross profits they could form an opinion as to the capabilities of the concern. With reference to the chairman's remark, that an alteration in the accounts would necessarily involve a departure from custom, he begged to remind him that we were living in days of innovation, and that there was no reason why they should not "turn over a new leaf."

Mr. BUTLER-JOHNSTONE, M.P., said that the high estimation in which the directors were held for probity and respectability induced him recently to invest between £8,000 and £10,000 in the bank, in addition to his previous interest. His faith in the concern was still unshaken, but at the same time he should certainly like to get fuller information respecting the losses. He had never sold a share, and that having perfect confidence in the stability of the bank, he did not intend to sell one. (Hear, hear.)

Replying to Mr. Brown, Mr. Butler-Johnstone, and other proprietors,

The CHAIRMAN said the directors would have been very glad if they could have given an estimate of the bad debts of 1865 and 1866. All he could say, however, was that the reserve fund was more than sufficient to provide for them, and the board expected that by the end of this year they would have extinguished everything of that kind without touching the reserve, having paid a dividend in the meantime. The overdue bills amounted to £150,000. He added that, in consequence of the increase of business which he had before mentioned, the directors thought it possible that after paying the usual small dividend on the 1st of July next they would see their way to an increase of the dividend. With regard to the form of the accounts, he remarked that no Indian bank made out the accounts in the way required by Mr. Brown, and that it would be invidious on their part if they took the initiative. The working expenses in 1866 were £111,697, and in 1867 there was a comparative reduction of £4,000, notwithstanding the opening of an additional branch.

A SHAREHOLDER suggested that the system of audit was open to some objection; but another Shareholder quite confuted his ideas on the subject, and it was agreed by the meeting that no change should be proposed.

The retiring directors (Mr. E. J. Gilman and Sir F. J. Halliday, K.C.B.) were then re-elected, as were also the auditors, Messrs. Coleman, Turquand, and Co. and Messrs. Smith and J. J. M'Kenzie. A vote of thanks to the chairman brought the proceedings to a close.

ROUTE TO INDIA THROUGH TURKEY.

Mr. Hyde Clarke lately read a paper to the Royal United Service Institution, "On the Military Advantages of a Daily Mail Route to India through Turkey and the Persian Gulf." We have at the present moment only one overland route, and that of a precarious character, the Egyptian one—one considered by some persons to be essentially English, and yet it is one liable at any time to be interrupted by the efforts of the Viceroys of Egypt to accomplish independence, or by the preponderance in that country of some foreign Power. There is another route, the middle route, which has only been partially explored and never put in practice, that by the railways of Europe, Constantinople, Asia Minor, the Valley of the Euphrates, Bagdad, Bussorah, and the Persian Gulf, with which, for nearly fifty years, the name of General Chesney has been inseparably connected, and in the promotion of which so many distinguished members of this institution have taken part. The time is now fast approaching when, if we do our duty, we shall complete this great undertaking; and if we do so, we shall effect very much more than the construction of a railway route, for we shall, at the same time, and without separate or further outlay, accomplish great political operations, which will not only strengthen our military resources, but tend thereby to protect ourselves in Europe and Asia at large from the danger of attack. The object of Mr. Clarke's paper is to point out the advisability of this completion. He says:—

"Rapid intelligence is at all times an essential military necessity, and the first element in effective movements. If this is the case in the field, or in a campaign, it is of the greater moment when the army of operations is so far removed from its real base as India is from England. This was most sensibly demonstrated during the mutiny, and our Governments have since devoted much attention to the improvement of the telegraph and postal communications. An essential part of the telegraph communication has been established by the middle route now under consideration, and it requires little argument to show that its maintenance is imperative, even if a cable route should be laid south, and particularly in consequence of the Russo-Prussian route being made effective.

"Postal communication has its absolute military value apart from commercial value. In neither case is this value determinable by the pecuniary return in postal revenue. It includes the transmission of orders, reports, requisitions, and returns, and the quicker the transmissions the more effective will be the condition of the discipline and administration. As by the southern route railway transit can at the utmost be extended to Brindisi, while through Russia it must be circuitous, so by the middle route is it direct, and it is the quickest mode available.

"This brings us to the point of what is the period within which mails can be conveyed by the middle route. Taking twenty-five miles per hour in the first instance by railway, and ten miles by sea, this will give us—

London to Bussorah...	144 hours	6 days
Bussorah to Bombay...	160 „	6 2-8 days.
Total		12 2-3 days.

"By acceleration of railway trains at a more advanced period, and assuming a rate of thirty miles per hour, we get—

London to Bussorah	180 hours	5 days.
Bussorah to Bombay...	160 „	6 2-3 days.
Total		11 2-3 days.

"From Bussoorah to Kurrachee the voyage would be about five days, giving a total transit to Kurrachee of eleven days in the earlier periods and ten days on greater acceleration, thus realising Lieutenant Waghorn's prophecy.

"With a railway along the coast, at a speed of twenty-five miles per hour, the distance from London to Kurrachee will be ultimately accomplished in eight days, to Bombay in ten, and to Calcutta and Madras in ten or eleven days.

"Some persons will make a very small account of the saving of one day between London and an Indian station, but the saving is more, for there is the saving of the day on the return mail, and on the future correspondence. In this instance, so soon as the railway is extended to Bussorah, instead of a weekly mail to India we should get more frequent communication, and with a complete railway transit we should obtain to all India what we have to most parts of Europe—a daily through mail.

"Thus at present the course of post to Bombay is fifty-one days, this will be progressively reduced to twenty-five days and to twenty days, giving us eighteen courses of post in a year, instead of seven, and materially increasing and improving the communication of departments, and of course rendering still greater facilities in connection with the telegraph. In ten days a document could be obtained from most parts of India, or a written or detailed order transmitted there on application by telegraph. The private advantages must be correspondent to the public benefits."

THE BANKRUPTCY OF LYALL, STILL, AND CO.

Mr. George Lyall again appeared at the Court for his discharge on the 21st ult., which was opposed by Mr. Liebert, of Manchester, a large creditor. The counsel for Mr. Liebert brought out the various charges of appropriating the goods of Mr. Liebert, which have been fully noticed in our columns. There is one extraordinary anomaly in this case, that while Mr. Lyall has to bear all the obloquy of the firm's transactions, his two partners, Mr. Still and Mr. Maclean, are entirely freed by their discharge in the Hong Kong Court. In cases where the chief creditors and the head partner are in England, the discharge should be withheld pending reference to England. The case stands adjourned until about the middle of June.

Continental Intelligence.

HAMBURG, May 19.

At St. Petersburg the second instalment of the official tables respecting the Russian trade in 1866 has just been published, and contains the part relating to foreign commerce, especially with Asia. The value of goods exported in that year overland amounted to 21,858,803 roubles, being 3,934.495 roubles more than in the preceding year, and 11,264,921 roubles in 1856, so that in the last ten years it has more than doubled itself. The principal articles were manufactured goods to the value of 12,928,489 roubles, then raw materials and half-worked up goods 6,413,171 roubles, articles of food 1,712,307 roubles, apothecaries' stores, 12,864 roubles, and sundries 791,972 roubles. Of the precious metals the exports were only 2,891,364 roubles, showing a considerable falling off, as in 1865 they were 5,207,988 roubles. The total value of the exports to Asia was 24,750,167 roubles, which was balanced as nearly as possible by the imports amounting to 24,714,783 roubles, being 1,385,864 roubles more than in 1865, and showing an increase of 7,712,594 roubles over the imports of 1856. The lion's share fell to raw produce and certain articles of food, duty free, by the new tariff of 1865, value 10,095,791 roubles, then articles of consumption 7,658.384 roubles, manufactures 5,341,371 roubles, raw and partly manufactured articles 1,564,485 roubles, and apothecaries' stores 54,752 roubles. Gold and silver were imported to the extent of 608,349 roubles, so that the total amount, including the sum of 44,297 roubles, realised by the sale of goods seized for attempts to smuggle, was 25,367,429 roubles.

The countries with which the business was conducted are thus given:—

	Exports.	Imports.
Trans-Caucasus	R.5,183,026 ...	R.8,338,212
Port of Astrachan	637,613 ...	1,569,034
Orenburg and Siberian frontier .	10,847,335 ...	9,479,162
China via Kiachta and the Amoor	5,190,829 ...	5,328,375

The Custom-house duty on the above produced 3,044,825 roubles, being 2,314,094 roubles less than in 1865, which is partly accounted for by the reduction in the tariff which came into operation in 1866.

The great annual fair at Irbit has this year proved a signal failure, in consequence of a variety of concurring causes. The number of buyers and sellers that attended was much smaller than in previous years. One of the reasons alleged for this is that the goods bought by the merchants at the last Nijni-Novgorod fair were delayed in their transit by the unusually early setting in of the frost, by which the river traffic was interrupted and the price of land carriage considerably enhanced, so that two roubles per pood of 40 lbs. were paid for transport from Bilsk to Irbit, and 1 r. 60 cop. from Tomsk. At first the prospects were good, and a large business was done in the fur trade, but then the heavy failures of large houses at Moscow and Nijni-Novgorod were announced, and created a dismal panic, which continued till the end of the fair. The rise in the value of all articles of food has also had a most depressing influence, and has now reached such a height as to cause great inconvenience to the lower grades of civil functionaries; thus the schoolmasters and others have formed co-operative societies to buy their articles of daily requirement at wholesale prices and save a few roubles per month.

A letter from Tomsk gives a fearful picture of the demoralised condition of the lower classes consequent on the enormous extension of the consumption of spirituous liquors in Siberia. Formerly people were able to make a living by gold washing, but now twenty thousand hands are out of employment, because grain is so dear, being used in increased quantities for the distillery of spirits. In the Government of Tomsk alone twenty-eight new distilleries have been opened since last summer.

The standing financial committee of the Austrian House of Commons has agreed to a supplementary grant of 250,000 florins to be borne on the budget of this year to defray the expenses of the expedition to the Far East.

COMMERCIAL.

In cleaned rice a fair amount of business has been done at steady prices; in rough grain no transactions reported. Cassia lignea still in demand and again higher. Pepper firm; 8,000 bags of Singapore, partly for arrival, have been sold at 3¾ sch. bco. The tea market is strong, and several hundred chests of Congou, Souchong, Pecco, and other current descriptions have been cleared off. Spelter was at first neglected, but within he last few days a demand has sprung up and rather better prices were paid. Among the transactions may be noticed:—

Monetary and Commercial.

The hearing of the appeal against the distribution of the dividend to the creditors of the Commercial Bank of India is fixed for the 4th of June. The dividend proposed by the liquidator, Mr. Holyland, was 2s. 6d., but since that time more funds have come into his possession from old assets, and the £10 call on the shareholders, so that a much larger distribution can be made when the appeal has been disposed of.

REPORT presented to the FOURTH ORDINARY MEETING of the SHAREHOLDERS, held at the OFFICES of the COMPANY, SHANGHAI, on the 3rd April, 1868.

It is with much pleasure that the Directors lay before the Shareholders the usual Half-yearly Balance-sheet and Statement of the business of the Company for the six months ending 31st December, 1867, and point to the Balance in hand on that date, Tls. 578,195.23, in addition to the paid-up Capital of Tls. 250,000, being Tls. 82,727.01 more than at 30th June, 1867.

This result is the more satisfactory, as the payments for losses in the China trade are usually most heavy during the period July to December, and on two former occasions have necessitated a reduction from instead of an addition to the Balance as per previous half-year's accounts.

The total Premia received during the six months are about Tls. 17,000 less than those of the corresponding period of 1866, notwithstanding which the out-turn of the business is so much more favourable that this is not to be regretted, but rather viewed as a small sacrifice of Income which has enabled the Company to be without risks which might have incurred losses of much greater magnitude.

The Balances in the hands of the various Agents have all been remitted to the Head Office in Shanghai, except the sum kept in Hong Kong and London necessary for carrying on the Company's business at these ports.

In concert with the other Local Insurance Offices, the Directors resolved in the beginning of the present year to discontinue the discount of 15 per cent., and to revert to the former one of 10 per cent. for cash payment at Premia; also, on account of the dangerous navigation of the River Min, to abolish the return of ½ per cent. for steam towage from Foochow, and to charge ½ per cent. additional when vessels are not towed.

In accordance with the provisions of the Deed of Settlement, the Directors—Messrs. W. J. Bryans, F. H. Bell, A. Michie, and E. H. Lavers—retire by rotation, but, being eligible, offer themselves for re-election. Mr. F. Porter (who has been temporarily appointed in place of Mr. E. F. Duncanson, resigned) is also proposed as a member of the Court.

The Auditors—Messrs. R. Miller and P. Maclean—offer themselves for re-election.

By order of the Court of Directors,
JOHN S. MACKINTOSH, Secretary.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS.—Unerring precision.—When the health is breaking down from the continuance of some weakening discharge, when ulcers refuse to heal, and extending mischief is threatened, then is the time to try the potency of Holloway's healing Ointment and purifying Pills. No treatment for giving ease and safely leading to a cure can be compared to this. The Ointment cleans and cools the foulest and most angry sores, diminishes the inflammation, reduces the swelling, prevents the growth of proud flesh, and spares both pain and danger. Thousands testify from their own personal experience to the unvarying success attending the use of Holloway's medicaments in cases of ulcerated legs, enlarged veins, scurfy skin, and swelled ankles.

HOLLAND.

ROTTERDAM, June 2.

According to the latest news, from a very authentic source, the Cabinet in spe will be composed as follows:—Mr. C. Fock, Burgomaster of Amsterdam, Minister of the Home Department; Mr. Roest van Limburg, ex-Ambassador at Washington, Foreign Affairs; Mr. P. P. van Bosse, Finance; Mr. F. G. R. H. van Lilaar, Justice; Mr. E. D. Waal, Colonies; General Van Mulken, War Department; Captain-Lieutenant of the Marines, L. G. Brocx, Marine Department. If this communication is true, and I have reasons to believe that it is, then certainly the Conservatives have no reason to blame the majority of the Second Chamber of the States General, which condemned the former Cabinet. Indeed, it cannot be said that they are desirous of filling the vacant places, for only one member of the actual Chamber appears upon the new list. I fervently hope that this Cabinet will remain in office. The discontent was so general that, had the crisis been prolonged, the public would have unquestionably adopted extreme measures. I need not add that this Ministerial combination is the work of Mr. Thorbecke, who was invited by His Majesty to form a Cabinet when Mr. Mackay was obliged to relinquish the task. The new list is quite Liberal, and I have the firm conviction that the new Minister of the Colonial Department will be greeted with the greatest approval in India. That Mr. Thorbecke has not reserved a portfolio for himself no one can wonder who recollects the manner in which the leader of the late Cabinet was intrigued.

Six years ago the Minister of the Colonial Department called the attention of the Chambers of Trade to the question of how the Government had to provide the money for the administration in India, or rather which method was preferable, by sending money from here to Java or by selling produce in India. The Chambers of Amsterdam and Rotterdam immediately recommended the latter measure. But no alteration has been made in the manner in which the money is provided. Both the Chambers have again addressed the Government to the effect—first, that gradually more produce should be sold in India; second, to request that the Government bills shall be sold by public auction, and that only guilders and half-guilders shall be sent from here in such quantities as are needed for actual circulation. These strong appeals on behalf of free trade have now a favourable chance of being realised, at least if Mr. De Waal accepts the portfolio of the Colonial Department.

The festivals at Heiligerlee to inaugurate the monument erected in remembrance of the battle against the Spaniards, in which Adolf van Nassau perished, have been held. The King was represented by the Prince of Orange. On this occasion the iron-clad De Panter, built in England, received the name of Heiligerlee.

During the whole month of May the finest weather prevailed. The crops of wheat, potatoes, &c., are promising so much, that already the prices of grain and fruits are becoming lower every day.

On the 29th of May a festival took place at Nieuwe Diep, when the Japan medical officers, Itoe Gempak and Hajasi Kinkai left that place, where they had completed their studies. In the name of the Japanese Government, and also by the students themselves, several rich presents were made to the authorities of the maritime hospital.

By this mail the first number of the Gazette de Java will reach our colonies. As a curiosity I state that this paper is printed at Paris as the special organ of the demi-monde. The title is derived from the Argot, spoken and written by "ces dames," and which they call le Javanais. It is the ordinary French language with this exception, that all the vowels are doubled.

His Majesty has granted permission to Mr. A. J. Bauduin, our Consul at Hiogo, to accept the Cross of the Order of St. Stanislas, Second Class, conferred upon him by the Emperor of Russia.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

COFFEE.—Since the auction of the Dutch Trading Company, at which 77,762 b. were sold at 1c. to 1½c. above valuation, the market has remained very firm. There is a good demand for abroad, but there is little offered. Holders decline to operate without an advance. The private transactions include 3,742 b. Java and Padang, ex Whampoa and Maria Sarah, at 33c. to 35½c.; 1,060 b. Java, ex County of Elgin, partly at 34½c.; 547 b. Java, ex Ortelius, at 38c. On the 5th inst., 7,734 b. Java, ex County of Elgin, Java, Argo and Mary, and Hillegonda, will be offered in auction. The valuation is, for Triage 25c. to 30c., and for the better qualities 30c. to 44c. The unsold stock of the Trading Company amounts to 588.214 b., whilst 124,000 b. are afloat for this company. The private stock is 61,880 b.

RICE.—8,750 b. Java, floating per Bezoekie, were sold at 8½f., whilst 1.048 b. ex Otto, were offered at 9½f. 4,391 b. Java, ex Dageraad and Paul Johan, were sold from 8¾f. to 10¼f. The prospects of the excellent crops of wheat and potatoes operate prejudicially upon this article.

SPICES.—The market remains very dull and inactive, and there are no particulars to report. Of Pepper only 810 b., ex Otto, were sold at 16¾c. The stock amounts, of Nutmegs 1,816 casks, Mace 567 casks, Cloves 260 casks, Cinnamon 195 mats, and Pepper 1,812 b.

RAW SUGAR.—On the 26th of May the Trading Company offered 55,289 mats Java in auction which were all sold, but somewhat under the valuation; 1½f. to 2f. being paid above the prices of the March auction. There was a very animated demand for the parcels of Nos. 15 and 18, which were destined for export. It is estimated that about 20,000 mats were taken for Germany and Belgium. The result of this auction has made an excellent impression. Since the auction some private transactions have taken place from ½f. to ½f. under the valuated prices of the auction.

TEA.—On the 19th inst. will be sold in auction 403/12 chests Japan, which are value at 90c. to 95c.; 30/4 and 326/8 China Congou at 80c. to 102c.; and 7607/4, 149/8, and 498/12 Java (Trading Company), which are valued as follows:—

						Valuation.
Broken Tea...	...	84/4	—	—	—	95c. to 98c.

Uxim ...	...	—	14/8	31/12	—	140 to 165
Joosjes ...	...	—	112/8	166/12	—	100 to 200

In anticipation of this auction, the market has been for the last few days inactive, but very firm.

BANCA TIN.—The market is dull, the only transaction being 3,600 slabs at 54¾f. In the beginning of last month the market opened very strong, with buyers at 56f.; but the uncertainty regarding the 40,000 slabs withdrawn in the public sale of the 31st March has created some depression, and holders have become rather anxious to sell, so that the price is lower. The closing quotation is 54½f. The unsold stock is 169,393 slabs. Some lots of Billiton tin have changed hands since my last report at 54½f. to 54f. on the spot, and 55f. to 54½f. to arrive. There are no sellers under these quotations. Stock, 7,827 slabs.

TOBACCO.—In the course of this month some thousands of bales Java, crop 1867, will be offered for sale; in the meanwhile the market is inactive. Manila tobacco was higher last week. The stock is very trifling, and holders decline to operate without a further advance. Stock, 16,057 b. Java and 25 b. Manila.

HIDES.—The market is very active. The following parcels have been sold: 2,070 ps. Batavia buffalo. ex Daniel Rankin; 110 do. ex Koffyboom, and 8,332 ps. Java buffalo, ex Alhambra.

ARRACK.—The market is very dull, only 80 casks Sourabaya, ex Alhambra, having changed hands at prices which did not transpire.

JAVA INDIGO.—The market is very firm, and several parcels will be offered at auction on the 4th inst. The opinion is that higher prices will be paid, the stock being unimportant.

MISCELLANEOUS.—Camphor: In demand, but the sellers decline to pay the full prices of the last auction. Preserved Ginger: 350 chests China, ex Mefisto, sold at 72c. to 73c. Rattans: 285 piculs ex Wateloo, 263 piculs ex Java, 150 piculs ex Dageraad, 103 piculs ex Jedo, and 165 piculs ex Whampoa, have been sold. Cutch: Very firm, but without transactions. Gum Damar: Some parcels changed hands at full prices. For Vanilla there is some demand now that prices are somewhat lower.

MONEY MARKET.—There has been more business during the last few days. Prices in general have been well supported, and the greater part of the stock showed steadiness. The demand for money is exceedingly light. Dutch Two-and-a-Half per Cents., 55⅛; Three per Cents., 65; Four per Cents., 87. Java Bank, 165. Trading Company, Four-and-a-Half per Cents., 131¼.

LONDON, MONDAY, JUNE 15, 1868.

THE PROPOSED NEW TELEGRAPH TO INDIA.

IT is with no little regret that we record the failure of another effort to induce Her MAJESTY'S Government to recognise the national importance of an efficient line of telegraphic communication with India and the East. What is justly described as "an influential deputation"—for it comprised amongst others the names of Mr. CRAUFORD, M.P., Lord W. HAY, Sir CHARLES BRIGHT, Sir S. CANNING, and Captain SHERARD OSBORN—waited on Sir STAFFORD NORTHCOTE at the India-office to lay the facts of the case before him, and to urge the propriety of the suggested line being at once undertaken by the Government; or, if there were any valid reason against that, to ask for a guarantee such as would enable a company to attempt it under favourable circumstances. The SECRETARY gave a decided negative to either proposition. The arguments adduced by the deputation and the pith of Sir STAFFORD'S reply we have given at some length in another part of this paper; it is sufficient to say here, that the effort of the deputation ended in hopeless discomfiture. The almost worse than useless condition of the present line is exemplified by a memorial of the Glasgow Chamber of Commerce, which states that during a period of six months there were sent from a firm in Glasgow to Calcutta twenty-one messages, at a total cost of £124 19s., or on the average of £5 19s. each; that one message was delivered on the 26th day after its despatch; that another, despatched from Glasgow on the 24th of August last, has never been acknowledged by the Calcutta house; that, excepting these two messages, the remaining nineteen required on the average upwards of six days for transmission, the longest period occupied being fifteen and the shortest (this being an exceptional case) two days. During the same period twenty-six messages were received in Glasgow from Calcutta, costing about £8 each, requiring for transmission, on the average, very nearly five days (the longest period being thirteen and the shortest two days). Only two of these latter messages were rendered accurately, there being about five errors in each of the others, ten occurring in one and fifteen in another. These are but a few of the proofs brought forward of the urgent necessity that exists for Government interference; yet the only concession vouchsafed is a vague promise that the Government "will do everything in their power to improve existing lines." This is poor satisfaction indeed.

At the same time we are glad to note a prospect of immediate improvement in the communication on this side of Alexandria. The Anglo-Mediterranean Company has already obtained the requisite capital (£260,000), and will commence operations without delay. This company has arranged for the purchase, in perfect working order, of the land line now nearly completed from Susa (where the French wires terminate) to Modica, in Sicily, and has also contracted for the laying of a deep-sea cable, of a construction specially adapted to the bed of the Mediterranean, between Malta and Alexandria. This cable is now in full course of manufacture by the Telegraph Construction and Maintenance Company, and will be laid in August, under the superintendence of Sir S. Canning. Between Modica and Malta the medium of communication will for the present be the existing cable of the Mediterranean Extension Company, but a duplicate cable will be laid hereafter. Although this line passes through Italy, it will be worked throughout by the English clerks of the company—a very great advantage. Thus in about four months we may expect to have a line of communication as nearly faultless as possible, as far as Alexandria; beyond that, we must wait, and hope in the Anglo-Indian Company. It must not be supposed, by the way, that the Anglo-Mediterranean is in any way hostile to the undertaking just mentioned; on the contrary, we understand that arrangements have been made by which the Mediterranean wires of the one will eventually form a link in the scheme of the other. It is stated that a renewed effort will soon be made to continue this line to India by way of the Red Sea.

CONSULAR AND DIPLOMATIC APPOINTMENTS.

THE rumour that was lately current of Sir RUTHERFORD ALCOCK'S approaching return to this country has not yet received any authoritative confirmation, nor, on the other hand, is it contradicted; the balance of probability, we should say, inclines to its correctness. Sir RUTHERFORD'S retirement from this field would of necessity occasion a good many changes, and some important posts would have to be filled up. In China the three gentlemen whose names first present themselves as likely to gain considerable preferment are Messrs. WADE, ROBERTSON, and WINCHESTER; in Japan there are no Consular officers of equal standing with the two latter. Probably neither of these three would replace Sir RUTHERFORD ALCOCK, for Sir HARRY PARKES has done good service in China, and, moreover, there is already a precedent in Sir RUTHERFORD'S own career for the transfer of a minister from Yedo to Peking. A repetition of this step seems to us more than likely, and in that case it is almost certain that one of the three gentlemen we have just named will be the new Plenipotentiary in Japan Mr. ROBERTSON has had a long term of office in China, and would perhaps hardly care, at this period, to enter on a new field; Mr. WADE'S inclinations, considering his intimate knowledge of Chinese character and his deep study of the language, would probably lead him to prefer remaining at Peking; while Mr. WINCHESTER, in addition to a long and useful career in China, has had considerable experience at two ports in Japan, and for some time ably filled the post of Charge d'Affaires at Yedo. We shall therefore not be surprised to see Dr. WINCHESTER, who is now, we believe, on his way home from Shanghai, go out again shortly as Minister to Japan. The vacancy at Shanghai will, no doubt, be filled by Mr. MEDHURST, from Hankow.

THE ISTHMUS OF SUEZ.

A CORRESPONDENT who has just passed through Egypt sends us some interesting particulars of the present condition of the Isthmus. Suez continues to progress, and is, in fact, becoming a place of vast importance. The past year shows great changes, the Abyssinian war having doubtless given a considerable impetus to trade, and perhaps the sudden termination of this undertaking will tend to check the rate of progress for the present. Suez people are all agreed that the canal will be a success if only another four millions can be raised in addition to the eleven and a-half already expended on it. It is now considered certain that even large steamers will be accommodated by it. The P. and O. Company's supplies of coal for Suez all pass through the canal, being transshipped into lighters at Port Said, and sent alongside their steamers at Suez in the same vessels, which is of course a great convenience. They have lately sent 12,000 tons through in this way, and the canal contractors are said to receive 8,000 tons per month in the same manner. The new line of rail from Suez to Ismaila and thence to Alexandria is now nearly complete, and will be opened for traffic in a few months; passengers by the overland route will then be enabled to go through direct and avoid Cairo, by which a saving both of time and fatigue will be effected. The new hotel at Cairo is said to be by far the most cleanly and comfortable there, the furniture and fittings being all new and good—but it is hinted that there is still room for improvement in the management. The president of the Canal Company has issued a circular containing an account of the general state of the works, from the 15th of March to the 15th of April, and from this date to the 15th of May; to which is annexed a table of the receipts from transit by the canal from 1867, and the first three months of 1868. In the first quarter of 1867 the receipts were 255,149f. 67c.; second ditto, 262,752f. 27c.; third ditto, 300,321f. 56c.; fourth ditto, 474,597f. 35c. During the first quarter of 1868 they were 544,961f. 85c., showing an increase on the corresponding quarter of 1867 of 289,812f. 18c. In another column we give some extracts from an interesting account of a visit to the canal works, by Mr. LOBNITZ, of Glasgow.

THE HONG KONG ASSOCIATION.

AT length a reply has been received from the Colonial-office to the memorial addressed to the Duke of BUCKINGHAM by Mr. WHITE, on behalf of the committee of this Association. It is quite on the ordinary official model. The memorialists are informed that his GRACE "has read with much interest "the views and suggestions"—rather curious phrascology by the way—and that the Mint would be closed, which they knew before. Our readers however will be glad to learn that the affairs of the colony are receiving the "careful consideration" of the Secretary. The letter is as brief as it is vague, so we give it in full.

Downing-street, June 5, 1868.

SIR,—With reference to your letter of the 4th April, I am directed by the Duke of Buckingham and Chandos to state that his Grace has read with much interest the views and suggestions which it contains upon the general financial condition of Hong Kong.

I am directed to inform you that the Colonial Government has been authorised to close the Mint, and thus free the Revenues of the Colony from the expense attendant upon working that establishment, and I am to assure you that the whole question of the expenditure of the Colony is receiving the careful consideration of the Secretary of State.
—I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

J. White, Esq., M.P. (Signed) T. F. ELLIOT.

The petition of the colonists to the House of Commons will have to be presented very soon, if anything is to be done with it at all this session. The document has already appeared in our columns, though not in its entirety, and as the utmost possible publicity is desirable to pave the way for a full discussion of the matter in the House, we reprint it, with all the signatures.

To the Honourable the Commons of the United Kingdom, in Parliament Assembled.

The Humble Petition of the Undersigned Residents in the Colony of Hong Kong

Showeth:—That the charge upon the revenues of this colony of £20,000 a year, as a military contribution in aid of the expenses entailed upon the British Government by the maintenance of troops in China, has proved to be a burden which the colonial finances are unable to bear. Three years ago, when the contribution was imposed, these finances were in a sound and prosperous condition. On the 1st of January, 1865, the surplus of assets over liabilities was $298,000, while in the beginning of 1867 there was only a nominal surplus of $24,000 shown on the public accounts. This sum, moreover, was so far from being available that the Government was driven to use for current expenditure money belonging to suitors in the Supreme Court, and when this was called for, to borrow $100,000 from the local banks at a high rate of interest.

That the considerations which induced the Duke of Newcastle to demand a military contribution of £20,000 a year from Hong Kong are expressed in a despatch from his Grace to Mr. Mercer, then Acting Governor of Hong Kong, dated September 5th, 1863, in which he says:—"Although I am aware that the receipts from land sales may be expected to fall off, I think it undeniable that the general financial position of Hong Kong is, and is likely to remain, in a highly sound and prosperous state; I can hardly doubt that exclusive of the balance in hand, amounting as I have said to £98,000, there will be an annual sum of £30,000 or £40,000 available for public works, and what may be called extraordinary purposes."

In a succession of despatches extending over the next twelve months, Mr. Mercer and Sir Hercules Robinson remonstrated urgently against the proposed tax. They pointed out that the colony was not able to bear the burden imposed, and if it had been able could not justly be called on to do so. The troops stationed in Hong Kong were sent out here "because England's share in the foreign trade of China is estimated at over thirty millions sterling; because this trade is mostly carried on in British vessels from the open ports in China, at each of which we have British settlements and British subjects, for whom we claim exemption from territorial jurisdiction; because in the managements of this vast trade, and in the Government of our own subjects scattered along the whole seaboard of China, in the foreign settlements, now fourteen in number, we are necessarily brought into constant intercourse with the Chinese Government, and there can be no doubt that the presence of a small body of troops somewhere nearer China than India has an excellent effect in averting difficulties, while they form a base of operations if misunderstandings should unfortunately arise." Sir H. Robinson declared the troops superfluous as far as the safety of Hong Kong was concerned, and undertook to be responsible for the maintenance of good order in the colony with the aid of the local police force alone. He also pointed out that the military authorities occupied land in the centre of the town which if it could be resumed by the colony would let for £10,000 a year, so that in a pecuniary sense the community were positively losers rather than gainers by the presence of the troops. The colony, in fact, "was established, not for the purposes of colonisation or for the advantage of future colonists, but solely because it was considered it would be a convenience to the mother country on political and military grounds."

That in 1847 a committee of your honourable House reported in reference to Hong Kong, "Nor do we think it right that the burden of maintaining that which is rather a post for general influence, and the protection of the general trade in the China seas, than a colony in the ordinary sense, should be thrown in any degree on the merchants or other persons who may be resident upon it:"—The committee on military defences in the colonies (1860) include Hong Kong by implication amongst those in which garrisons are maintained for objects altogether independent of and distinct from the defence of the particular countries in which they are situated, and the committee were of opinion, "that as these garrisons are maintained without reference to the wants and wishes of the inhabitants, they should be dealt with exceptionally, and not included in any general scheme of colonial contribution."—Again, so late as in 1861, the select committee of your hon. House on Colonial military expenditure, included Hong Kong in the class of "military garrisons, naval stations, convict depots, maintained chiefly for objects of Imperial policy—the responsibility and main cost of the defence of which properly devolve on the Imperial Government."

That in reference to the capacity of Hong Kong to pay the £20,000 a year, it will be seen the Duke of Newcastle had argued that a surplus revenue from £30.000 a year might be reckoned on by Hong Kong in future. Sir H. Robinson earnestly strove to convince his Grace that he was mistaken, and that this surplus could not be anticipated. Events, as your petitioners have shown, have justified the arguments of the late governor. The Duke of Newcastle, however, declined to alter his opinion on the subject, and wrote: "It is impossible for me to doubt that the security given to the inhabitants and trade of Hong Kong by the presence of H.M. forces, would be cheaply purchased by an annual payment of £20,000 and therefore I should not be doing justice to the inhabitants of this country if I failed to require that the Imperial Treasury should be relieved to that extent, as soon as possible, from the burden of supporting that force." While this correspondence was going forward, the colony was under a pledge to invest £50,000 in building a mint, which had been suggested by Sir H. Robinson as a means of benefiting the colony, and of saving a large sum lost on exchange to the Imperial Government. When the demand for a military contribution was made, Sir H. Robinson stated that he would never have proposed the Mint if he had been aware of the intention to impose this tax. He therefore urged that the £50,000 might be regarded as military contribution paid in advance, and be looked on as an advance from the Home Government on account of the Mint, to be repaid as the expected profits should accrue. Mr. Cardwell, however, into whose hands this suggestion fell, could not "allow the payment to be encumbered by any circuitous arrangement with the British Treasury." The colony was thus required not only to pay the military contributions, but to expend in another direction its accumulated surplus capital, by the sacrifice of which it might otherwise have staved off for a few years the embarrassments by which it has now been overtaken.

That remonstrances having proved of no avail, the Governor under compulsion brought the proposed vote before the Legislative Council. Official members, who are not at liberty to vote in opposition to orders from the Colonial-office (see Sir H. Robinson's despatch Sept. 7th, 1864,) are in a large majority on this council, and the vote was consequently passed, but the council immediately afterwards passed, by a majority of eight to one, a resolution declaring that the maintenance of troops in Hong Kong was not necessary for the protection of colonial interests. A public meeting was then held, and a memorial to the Secretary of State for the Colonies, deprecating the contribution, and signed by nearly the whole mercantile community was sent home. Mr. Cardwell, however, declined to accede to the prayer of this memorial, and from the 1st January, 1865, the contribution was exacted. During the current year, however, the payments have fallen into arrears, as the colony has been reduced to a condition of insolvency. On the 1st of January, 1863, the surplus of assets over liabilities was $475,000, or £99,000, but since that date the expenses of establishing the Mint have absorbed over $300,000, for which investment the colony may be said to have received no return whatever, as the undertaking has proved such a complete failure that its gross earnings have amounted to little more than $10,000. The annual accounts of the colony meanwhile have shown a deficit in every year since 1863, as will be seen by the following figures taken from official records:—

1864	132,884	...	159,022	...	26,138
1866	160,224	...	195,824	...	35,600

During the present year all old accumulations having been absorbed, it was found impossible to continue the regular payments of the contributions, and they fell into arrears; but your petitioners understand that the Secretary of State for the Colonies sent out to the Government of Hong Kong imperative orders that these arrears should be paid, and that if necessary the required sums should be raised by new systems of taxation. In consequence of these orders the present Governor, Sir R. MacDonnell, was driven to avail himself of an ordinance providing for the establishment of stamp duties, passed in 1866, against the vehement remonstrances of nearly the whole community. Partly by means of this new tax, which frightens the Chinese and endangers the commercial existence of the colony, and partly by means of sums which have accrued from the issue of licences to Chinese gambling-houses, it is possible that the arrears of the contribution and the amount due for the current year may be extracted from the colony. Meanwhile, however, the Praya or quay which skirts the harbour side for more than two miles, which may perhaps be considered the main thoroughfare of the town, and on which most of the principal warehouses stand, remains in the delapidated state to which it was reduced to by the autumn typhoons. The Government has no funds with which to undertake its effective repair, and has made an effort, the issue of which is still uncertain, to fasten the legal responsibility for the repair of the Praya upon the marine lot-holders. To the future your petitioners look with dismay.

That briefly recapitulating the arguments brought forward by Sir H. Robinson and in this humble petition, your petitioners represent the military contribution to have been unfairly imposed upon Hong Kong because the garrison was not sent here for the sake of the colony. On the contrary, the island was obtained from China, and made the price of the peace of Nanking, because the British Government wished to establish a garrison upon it. To reduce the expenses of the place, merchants were encouraged to come here, buy land, and pay regular ground rent, in return for which they were offered the incidental advantages of residence in a British colony. This succeeded so well that the land tax and rates which they paid cleared the expenses of the Civil Government in 1855, and have continued to do so ever since. But, deluded by the appearance of a full treasury, containing the accumulated premia paid for land lots, which was, in fact, the capital of the colony, and should never have been included in a revenue account at all, the Duke of Newcastle came to the conclusion that the revenue would yield a progressive surplus. He therefore decided that the colony should first of all pay for the establishment of a mint with the money it had in hand, and afterwards pay a regular military contribution of £20,000 a year with its expected surplus. His Grace imposed the contribution in the face of the report by the committee of your honourable House, as your petitioners have shown. The injustice of levying this tax was thrust out of sight, because it was supposed that Hong Kong could so easily pay the amount demanded. So far was this supposition erroneous that in attempting to do so the colony has been reduced to the verge of bankruptcy.

Wherefore your petitioners humbly pray that your honourable House will be pleased to take such measures as may procure relief for the colony of Hong Kong from the burden of paying a military contribution to the Imperial Government.

NEW PORTS IN JAPAN.

(From the London Gazette.)

FOREIGN-OFFICE, June 9.—Lord Stanley, Her Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, has received from Sir Harry Parkes, K.C.B., Her Majesty's Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary in Japan, copies of the following notification, which has been issued by him with regard to the delay in opening the city of Yedo and port of Niigata to foreign trade:—

"YOKOHAMA, 5th April.

"Notification.—As the changes which are at present taking place in the constitution of the Government of Japan may disturb for a time the general security of Yedo and Niigata, the undersigned, Her Britannic Majesty's Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary in Japan, entertains the opinion that it would be unsafe for British subjects to take up their residence at that city and port until affairs are in a more settled condition. He has accordingly to make known to all subjects of Her Britannic Majesty that execution of the arrangements for the opening of that city and port to British trade on the 1st proximo is temporarily deferred, and that further notice will be issued as soon as it is considered that British subjects may safely reside and trade at these places. (Signed) "HARRY S. PARKES.

Hiogo, March 28, 1868."

THE Societa Anonima Italiana, by which the mail service between Brindisi and Alexandria is performed, is about to extend its operations to Venice. In future the steamers for Alexandria will leave Venice every Saturday at 2.30 P.M., and Brindisi every Monday at 2 P.M.; and on the return voyage will sail from Alexandria every Sunday, three hours after the arrival of the homeward India mails. The contract time is, between Alexandria and Brindisi, 82 hours; between the latter port and Venice, 37½ hours. After the opening of the Mont Cenis Railway there will be daily through trains between Paris and Brindisi.

Summary of News from the Far East.

JAPAN.

HIOGO AND OSAKA.

From Hiogo and Osaka our latest dates are to the 12th April. There is no political news whatever, and trade was in the same dull state. From recent letters in the Japan Times we take the following paragraphs:—

The Japanese Government has issued a notification at Osaka to the effect that Mexican dollars are to become a legal tender in Japan at the rate of three boos each. No provision seems to be made for weighing or testing their intrinsic value, so it is easier to imagine than describe the effect such an edict would shortly have upon the monetary system of the country. It has not however been notified to us through our Consuls, and of course the latter will point out to the Japanese the impossibility of introducing a foreign coin in any other shape than that of bullion. It is to be hoped that all these difficulties about the currency will induce the Government to hasten the issue of the improved coinage promised with so many other good things on the 1st January, 1868.

Osaka appears to be abandoned by the foreign merchants, only two of the firms resident there on the 3rd February, and both of these represented by consular agents, having as yet returned thither since the place has been declared re-opened. In fact the regulations for trade, requiring all imports and exports to be entered at Kobe, have completely destroyed any chance of doing business there, except such as may be transacted by an occasional visit or sending up a banto. The bar also presents a most formidable obstacle to the progress of foreign trade, as no marine insurance policy extant would cover the risk of conveying cargo across it, and so far as our experience of the last three months goes, it is impassable on an average two days out of seven. If ships were allowed to anchor off the mouth of the river and cargo entered at Osaka, this danger would be in some measure obviated, as then they would not discharge unless the bar was in a favourable state, and the question would be merely one of extra lay days. At present, however, you may start from Kobe without a ripple in the water, and when you arrive on the bar find a dangerous surf, besides the difficulty of hitting the proper time of tide, which could always be done from a ship lying half a mile off. It is said that the Japanese Government talk of deepening the river, and it is quite probable, as they show a disposition to do all sorts of things in the new broom line. Some naval men say it is practicable, others deny it; but there is no doubt that constant dredging would be necessary to keep the cutting clear, and this the Japanese have not the perseverance to keep up.

A notification has been issued from the Consulates there giving liberty to foreigners to buy and lease land and houses from the Japanese within the town of Kobe, excepting the ground set apart for the foreign settlement (most of which is under water), and reserving also the same breadth of ground back to the hills in the rear. A thoroughfare of 100 feet wide is also to be reserved along the beach. Some purchases have accordingly been made, but as yet little or no difference has been made in rents, which remain preposterously high. As for the foreign settlement now known as "Parkes' Folly"—this, it is said, is to be sold for what it will fetch, without any upset price. For reasons given above, it is hardly likely to repay the expenses of "preparing" it.

YOKOHAMA.

Advices from this port are to the 19th April. The outward French mail of February 18 was received on the 11th of April, and the English mail of February 26 was hourly expected when the present despatches left. The latest London telegrams were to March 15.

The Japan Times informs us that on the 17th April a Government notification was published, announcing that Ohara Sakino Gijiu, a kuge of the Mikado, had arrived to take charge of Yokohama for the Emperor. He came on the 15th in a steamer belonging to Kiishiu, formerly called the City of Nantes, and some excitement was created among the Government officials as the vessel with the Mikado's ensign was seen flying at the fore. The Mikado's crest, we may mention, is a circle with spokes radiating from the centre, very like a chrysanthemum flower. On the 16th the Kuge had an interview with the French Minister at Benten, and subsequently passed through the main street of Yokohama, on his way to the British Legation. His dress differs from that of a Daimio, being much plainer and simpler, and instead of the broad lacquerred hat which is familiar to us, he wears the less known shoe shaped headdress. He is a young man, by no means handsome or intelligent-looking, and in fact, of demeanour anything but imposing. He states in his notification that he has arrived with troops of Hizen, Satsuma and Chikugo; so that it is not improbable—as the whole Tokaido, from Hakone to Yedo, is now in possession of the southern troops, and as there appears not the least chance of disturbance or danger—that our own guards will be withdrawn and charge of the gates and other posts handed over to him, a step which would be very popular with the overworked foreign soldiery.

It has been incorrectly stated that Ohara Sakino Gijiu has replaced the Governor appointed by the late Shiogoon. This is not the case. Ohara has brought with him no civil officials whatever, and for the time being the Custom-house and Police Department are in the same hands as formerly. An inferior Daimio, one of the Tozama class, whose residence at Kanagawa, our favourite resort for pionics all visitors thither know, has been appointed Governor, but he is at present in Kioto. He will probably come up to take his post with the Minister for Foreign Affairs, whose avant courier, in fact, Ohara Gijiu is understood to be.

Otherwise, political matters remain much as when we wrote last. We have since ascertained that the Mikado's envoy, who is still beyond Hakone, the gate to the ex-Shiogoon's dominions, left Kioto with orders to raze Yedo to the ground, to destroy the castle and forts, utterly to abolish the metropolis of the family of Iyeyas. In our last we mentioned that Ooyeno-no-mia, now the Stotsbashi, had gone down to confer with him, and we now hear that his remonstrances have had so much effect that the Envoy has consented to refer again to Kioto for instructions. Ooyeno-no-mia has returned to Yedo, where everything is perfectly quiet. All the Daimios have left the city, and many of them are said to be awaiting in a suburb to the north of the place and on the other side of the river, the course of events. The forts are quite deserted; all the guns spiked, and those commanding the city dismounted and the carriages in many cases broken; the magazines open, and all left without a single guard. The southern troops hold the whole of the Tokaido, and are in Yedo itself in some force, but no attempt has been made as yet to take possession of the castle, and every

TIENTSIN.

A Tientsin correspondent, writing on the 13th April, says:—"All accounts state the rebels as having gone to Honan province. The route to Shanse is still, however, not practicable for the Shanse traders, owing to the Imperialists being on it, and I suppose as usual very much addicted to marauding. We did not hear that the rebels were destroyed, so I presume that they had always the roads open to Honan. We shall no doubt see them back in this region some day, and probably in much greater force than on this occasion. The wheat crops are looking well, and the peasants are very busy preparing the other ground for millet. We have every reason to think that we shall see good harvests gathered this season. Rice is now very cheap, and grain generally."

THE REBELS.

After throwing Tientsin into a fever of excitement, inspiring some apprehension in the capital, and disturbing the equanimity of the Emperor himself, the rebels seem to have retired whence they came. No details have yet reached us of their later proceedings; but this very fact suggests the inference that they have withdrawn of their own accord. The Imperialists are not wont to hide their glory under a bushel. If they had expelled their opponents from Chih-li by force of arms we should not have lacked a glowing account of the myriads slain; whereas our Tientsin correspondent only hears that they have retired from the province. A keener sarcasm on Imperial prowess could hardly be offered. From north, south, east and west, Governors and Governors General were summoned to the scene of action. Prince Kung was named Generalissimo of all the armies in the field; Li-hung-chang was degraded from the active command, in favour of Tso-kung-pao, for his apathy; and all these changes have resulted in nothing. A few indecisive engagements were reported on the first arrival of the Nienfei in the province; and the energy of the Imperialist commanders appears to have been afterwards concentrated on the favourite Chinese tactic of a "surround;" but they seem to have failed as signally in strategy as in attack. The rebels have escaped to their favourite haunts in Honan, from whence they will soon re-issue with recruited ranks, to repeat their raid. However, it seems they really have gone for the present; and the only obstacle to free communication between Tientsin and the interior is the presence of Imperial troops, who are feared for their marauding propensities nearly as much as the Nienfei. But they will of course be soon withdrawn, and we may hope that the trade with the interior, which has been so long neglected, will be resumed. It remains only to learn whether Mahomedan rebels may have been plundering in Shanse simultaneously with the occupation of Chih-li by their temporary allies. If so, a cause for diminished trade may continue to exist in the partial impoverishment of that province, whose traders are the great purchasers of piece goods in Tientsin market. Nothing, however, that has yet transpired tends to show that such is the case. Only half the scheme which was first attributed to the rebels seems to have been carried out. The Honan Nienfei have penetrated Chih-li; but Shanse seems to have escaped the threatened scourge. Further information on this head will be looked for with much interest.

SHANGHAI.

From this port our dates extend to April 25. The English mail of March 6 arrived out on the 21st April, conveying London telegrams to March 14; via Kiachta however telegraphic advices had already been received to the 24th.

The North China Herald furnishes the following items:—A portion of the Nanzing dues has been paid in Ningpo "drawbacks"—and export drawbacks to boot. Seeing that the export trade from Ningpo is not flourishing at present, the claimants will not easily recover their money from a port in which they are little interested. But this is not all. The Commissioner of Customs at Ningpo ignores even this arrangement. He has received no instructions on the subject. So, after waiting seven years, the "Nanzing" claimants get about half their money in unrealisable documents.

We hear that Dr. Macgowan's services have been engaged by the Chinese Government, to prepare a work on mining and metallurgy. It is satisfactory to find these subjects are attracting their attention.

At a recent sale of land on the Wangpoo the lot which adjoins Dent's Wharf was withdrawn—tls. 15 per mow being the highest offer. People present did not seem to know what value attached to a riding course share, consequently no offers were made.

1866	56,161,807
1867	57,895,713

And the total values of imports:—

1867	69,329,741

The total value of foreign imports into Shanghai has been taels 44,331,073, against taels 44,768,000 last year, and of exports to foreign countries, taels 29,228,074, against taels 25,324,670. Of piece goods, 2,400,000 pieces were imported into Shanghai in 1867, against 2,370,000 during 1866; 30,100 piculs of raw silk were exported, against 21,900 in 1866; and 524,000 piculs of tea, against 499,000. The present volume does not contain reports by the different commissioners, which are looked for with interest. The form and arrangement of the tables is again much changed.

The rumour which has been some time in circulation to the effect that the Chinese Government propose at an early date to send a deputation to England, with a view to obtain reliable information as to the political details of various arts and manufactures, is now, we think we may venture to say, corroborated.

The experience of the past has at length so far taught the men in high places that they are becoming convinced of certain important deficiencies in their own industrial departments.

Now that the new Mixed Court is opened, the building in the Consular compound is useless. We hear that the Taotai intends to pull it down and re-erect it in the city—there to be used as a hall for ancestral tablets, or some such purpose. The long awaited Magistrate under the new Mixed Court regime is said to have been at length appointed, in the person of a Peking official named Tang, who is unknown to foreign fame.

The steamers Fe-loong and Osaka will in future run to Nagasaki, Hiogo and back to Shanghai, stopping two or three days at each place.

A Chefoo correspondent writes:—"We have actually found copper, at last, within the coveted two miles—in small quantities so far, but of admirable quality."

With reference to the collapse of the Hong Kong Mint the North China Herald says:—"We do not know that the Mint has failed so much from the fact that there is no field for such a project as from miscalculation and mismanagement. Certain we are that dollars and smaller coins from the Hong Kong Mint have since the beginning been in demand here, and a few odd dollars which have reached Shanghai have been preserved as curios. We are not mistaken when we assert that many residents here have not even seen a Hong Kong dollar, and it would seem as if an effort had been specially made to deprive Shanghai of the Hong Kong coinage. So far from being thrust upon us, as we might have expected from a Mint struggling desperately, Hong Kong coins have never been obtainable. Every one who knows anything of Shanghai is aware that the prevalence of a ten cent and five cent coinage would be particularly beneficial to the entire foreign community. Our present lowest coin may be said to be the English shilling, worth twenty-five cents; so that although foreigners have often to pay ten cents for sampans, coolies, &c., they have no suitable coin, and are thus put to considerable inconvenience. The consequence is that twenty-five cents are often paid where ten would be sufficient, in order to avoid further trouble, and the necessity of involving ourselves in copper cash operations."

There may be some delay before the embassy of industry is sent on its way, but no time is being lost in qualifying those who are to compose it to make the best use of their opportunities.

Sir Rutherford Alcock has issued a long circular in reply to the various memorials on the revision of the Treaty. It opens up many important points regarding mutual treaty obligations, to which we shall refer at length in our next issue.

The case of the assignees of Mackellar and Co. against the Chartered Bank of India, to recover about 55,000 taels for moneys arising out of cross bills between Mackellar and Co. and the Bank, had a long hearing on the 20th April, and the judgment was reserved.

Touching the secrecy preserved regarding the aim and objects of the Burlinghame mission, the Supreme Court and Consular Gazette has the following observations:—

Six months ago a letter, signed "Civis Britannicus," commenting on the supposed objects of the then new Burlinghame Mission, appeared at this port. The views put forward by the writer, though to a certain extent personal, were well worthy of consideration, but the profound secrecy with which everything connected with the objects of the mission was veiled prevented at the time anything being known definitely by the outer world. Since then, however, the veil has been lifted for the first time, and, curiously enough, the Viceroy of Nanking has been made the exponent. We learn that Mr. Burlinghame is to explain to Foreign Powers why China cannot allow the development of her mineral and industrial resources. Seen by the light we now possess, though still dimly it is true, the views put forward by "Civis Britannicus" seem to gather some show of reason, and the connection of Mr. Hart with the new mission seems to come out more distinctly day by day.

In a recent number we reflected on the apathy shown by that gentleman with regard to the lighting of the harbour approaches of Shanghai and the disposal of the tonnage dues, a complaint followed up by our contemporary the North China Daily News in almost identical phraseology. Public rumour assigns two reasons for this course of conduct, neither of them very creditable to Mr. Hart's sagacity; one being an absurd jealousy lest his subordinate should gain public credit for having originated and matured the scheme without his co-operation; the other that the tonnage dues have been deflected to pay the expenses of Mr. Burlinghame's mission; the latter a device certainly worthy of a Chinese statesman, to deflect funds intended for local improvements to support an Embassy to show all improvement in China hopeless. From what we know of the previous career of Tseng-kwo-fan we have little reason to doubt the source whence the announcement of the object of Mr. Burlinghame's mission originated. Every circumstance tends to show the increasing dread of the Tseng-li Yamen, lest any advance in the provinces should overturn the toppling and crazy edifice of the Ta-Tsing rule, and we are sorry to add that every additional circumstance tends to prove the intimate connection with that policy of Mr. Hart.

At one of the early meetings, after its resuscitation, of the North China Branch of the Royal Asiatic Society, Mr. Hart, in commenting on a paper presented to the Society, spoke of the undoubted advantages of a general though gradual opening up of the country. Sudden changes, as became a speaker holding his position, were depreciated, but a system of general though gradual advance was announced as the most suited for the development of the country. Similar views were put forward in many quarters, and festina lente became the watchword, the mere utterance of which was to be a ready means of escape from a troublesome or dangerous position. How far the promise has been carried out a passing glance will show. Festina has indeed become more than a watchword, but the hastening has been neither slow nor forwards, but, on the contrary, with constantly accelerating steps towards anarchy and disruption. The stability which might have been acquired by timely reforms seems now more hopeless than ever, and Mr. Burlinghame departs for Europe to prove that the patient is now too weak to allow of the administration of the only remedy suitable for the disease. It is not long since we expressed our views with regard to the peculiar position occupied by Mr. Hart, and gave utterance to our fears that sooner or later, unless tempered by a wise discretion, his policy would be found opposed to the best interests, not only of foreigners, but of the Chinese nation at large. Recent events seem to prove the truth of our prediction. If we have misjudged Mr. Hart the remedy is in his own hands; the impenetrable silence with which he has hitherto continued to shroud his actions has left us no other resource than to judge of them from their effects.

Sir Edmund Hornby has given judgment in C. T. Jones's bankruptcy. The bankrupt is granted his discharge, subject to the following condition—one-third of his future earnings or income, and the whole of any after-acquired property, to be set aside for the discharge of his debts. We append a few extracts from the judgment, which is somewhat lengthy:—

The bankrupt in this case applies for his discharge. He is opposed by his creditors, amongst whom appears the British Consul, representing Her Majesty's Government, and he opposes the discharge prayed for on the ground that during the time the bankrupt occupied an important official position in the Consulate he appropriated divers sums, which in his official capacity he had received on Government account, to his own use. I have carefully gone over the evidence in support of the proof tendered and admitted of this debt due to Her Majesty's Government, and I have reluctantly, but without the slightest doubt, come to the conclusion that the bankrupt did receive the moneys of which the debt consists on account of the Government, and that he did appropriate them to his own use, and that in so doing he has made himself liable to all the consequences of the Act 24·25 Vic. cap. 96.

The misappropriation of the public moneys has already formed the subject of a criminal trial, when the jury were discharged, not being able to agree on a verdict, and a nolle prosequi has since been entered by H.M.'s Government, who have thus abandoned the intention of prosecuting the bankrupt again at the bar of a criminal court.

I conceive, therefore, that I am relieved from the necessity of ordering a trial under the 159th section of the Act, since had it been desirable in the interests of public justice it was open to the Government to have taken this course, and to have a second time sent the bankrupt before a jury; but because this leniency has been shown to the bankrupt I am not, in my character and position of Commissioner in Bankruptcy, the less bound to inquire into the conduct of the bankrupt. . . . I cannot look upon such conduct as the simple result of misfortune or carelessness. Beyond the purchase of the Recorder newspaper and the building of a small farm, I cannot find that he has been engaged in any speculation, rash or prudent; and after making full allowance for the losses (if any) incurred by those two liabilities, there still remains a large balance of money entirely unaccounted for. Whether the balance has been spent in riotous living, or whether it has been concealed, there is no evidence before me; but the fact remains the same that it is unaccounted for in the slightest degree.

I cannot conceive that the Legislature intended a man guilty of the misconduct of which the bankrupt has been unquestionably guilty should be enabled to come into this Court and get a discharge from his liabilities. I have also to consider the interests of his creditors. I shall, therefore, grant the bankrupt his discharge, subject to the condition that one-third of his future earnings or income be set aside for the discharge of his debts, and that any after-acquired property be also rendered available for the same purpose. So long as these conditions are observed, so long will he be free from arrest; but if he fails to observe them the grant of the discharge is ipso facto rescinded; his protection from arrest ceases, and he is liable to each of his creditors in the same way as a judgment debtor is liable, and as against him they will possess all the rights over his person and property which judgment creditors possess over that of their debtors.

HONG KONG.

The outward mail of 18th March (French) arrived out on the 29th April. The dates are now down to the 1st May, the steamer leaving five days before the usual interval of fourteen days, owing to the monsoon. The news is most trifling, and the Hong Kong papers are filled chiefly with northern extracts and police reports.

The Mint question is definitely solved. The staff, with the exception of those required to assist in the packing up of the machinery, had all been dismissed, and the establishment was to be finally closed in May. The work of the last six weeks gave satisfactory proofs of the capabilities of the Mint, the number of coins struck being 3,000,000, while it is calculated that an annual total of 13,000,000 would suffice to clear the expenses.

The case of Dent and Co. has been disposed of, the estate taken out of bankruptcy, and placed under the administration of Messrs. Turing, Kresser and Lemann. The following is the decision of Chief Justice Smale in the case :—

It having been suggested that further delay may greatly prejudice the interests of the creditors, I accede to their wishes in now giving my decision. I think that the case before me is eminently one in which I should —following the practice of Lord Justice Knight Bruce—impose terms on the parties before me as a condition precedent to the order, possibly an irregular one, which I purpose to make, therefore—

1. Upon the official assignee and his two solicitors expressing themselves to be individually satisfied in respect to their fees, and their costs, charges, and expenses, and respectively declaring that they have no claim against the estate in bankruptcy.

2. And upon counsel for Messrs. Turing, Kresser, and Lemann undertaking for them that upon their becoming trustees respectively under any deed of the bankrupt's estate they will respectively release and indemnify the official assignee in respect of all claims and suits whatsoever.

3. And upon an undertaking by Mr. Dent, for himself and partners, to execute a deed to the purport and effect of the deed which has been produced to the court on their own parts, forthwith as soon as the court in Shanghai shall have annulled the bankruptcy.

4. And upon counsel for all the creditors who have proved, and for the creditors assenting who have not proved, and for the attornies under powers of attorney of such creditors respectively, undertaking respectively for them and their constituents to execute the same deed within one month after the execution of the said deed by the said bankrupts.

5. And upon the said Messrs. Turing, Kresser and Lemann undertaking by their counsel within one year from their being respectively appointed trustees to file copies of their accounts as trustees in this court, and so from time to time, at the end of every year, until all the accounts of the trust shall be closed, with the registrar of this court as of record.

Let this bankruptcy be anulled, with liberty to all persons appearing on this petition to apply to enforce the terms and undertakings aforesaid, and otherwise as they may be advised.

Messrs. Dent and Co.'s affair is thus noticed by the Daily Press :—

It is no disrespect to law or lawyers to say that the withdrawal of any great dispute from a court of law for the purpose of settling it by private arrangement is almost always of necessity a good thing. This is pre-eminently the case with such proceedings as those of a colossal bankruptcy, in which the absorption of the assets, whatever they may be, by law expenses, is a clear loss to creditors who are already great sufferers. It is obvious, therefore, that the decision given by the Chief-Justice on Saturday must be satisfactory to the majority of persons interested. It may be that the action of the trustees may yet clash in an embarrassing manner with the jurisdiction of the court in Shanghai, but we are not aware that this is the case; and, at all events, nothing could be more inharmonious than the jurisdiction of the Courts of Shanghai and Hong Kong, so that there will be nothing lost, even if some difficulties do arise. These could not but have arisen in any case. The bankruptcy of Messrs. Dent and Co. has remained so much of a mystery from first to last that it is a subject about which we shrink from saying much. About the broad policy of dealing with it privately, so that the community at large remains now very much in the same state of mind about the whole affair, that it was in when the first rumours of calamity reached this colony, a good deal may be said on both sides. The judge has taken strong ground in declaring that the course he pursued was to save solvent firms from the danger of careless allusions, which might be brought out in evidence. Perhaps the only objection to that argument is that it proves a little too much; and if privacy in law proceedings were to be sanctioned in every case where the evidence might possibly be injurious to third parties, the doors of most law courts would probably be locked during the trial of most civil suits and many criminal prosecutions. In reference to the proceedings in the present momentous case, it can hardly be denied that either one of two very opposite courses would have been preferable to that which has actually been taken. If the affairs of the firm had never come before the court at all, but had at once passed into the hands of trustees, a good deal of entirely useless expenditure and painful delay would have been economised; or if, when they were once thrown into bankruptcy, the court had seen its way to more vigorous and distinct decisions, these could either have been accepted or appealed against in less time than has been wasted.

Mr. N. B. Dennys, the late proprietor of the China Mail, an adjudicated bankrupt, appeared to pass his final examination. The Chief Justice put a few questions as to the price paid for the China Mail, $28,000, the amounts for which it had been mortgaged, and the price for which it had been finally sold, $12,000. He remarked that it was very evident that the bankrupt's difficulties had been brought about by paying for an article double its value, and by being unskilled in mercantile pursuits, a very necessary qualification he thought for the proprietor of a newspaper to possess. No creditor having appeared to prove, and no one appearing to oppose, the Chief Justice accordingly remarked that he should make no objection to the bankrupt passing. In regard to the final discharge, which was thereupon applied for, the Chief Justice postponed the granting of this for a week, in order to give an opportunity for the arrival of advices from some creditors who were resident in England, and who had been written to, not, however, because of anything that arose in the bankruptcy but merely as a formal matter.

BORNEO.

LABUAN.

The following dated 18th April, is from a correspondent of the Straits Times :—

"Labuan was lighted with gas for the first time on the 1st of April. At four P.M. a large number of persons were present at the consecration of the gas factory, when a Te Deum was sung. The guests then proceeded to the Government offices—a platform covered with red cloth had been erected and was occupied by a military band. At half-past four Mr. M., of the I. O. U. Company, ascended the flagstaff with a taper intended to light the lamp, whilst Mr. P., of the same company, turned on the gas, the band playing the national hymn. The music had not ceased until the whole island was lighted up by break of day. Rumour has it that Mr. Morel, of the late Labuan Coal Company, has signed an agreement with the Government to construct two ports, one for coal and the other for trade in general; they will be separated by an immense jetty traversed by railways. The works will cost ten millions of dollars and take three or four years to complete; the first instalment of dollars is expected by the Mona, which is hourly expected. This will cause a financial depression, as there is already a superabundance of unemployed capital. There is every chance of Labuan starting a bank, which must flourish if only well managed and conducted on the same principle as the late Coal Company, so characteristic for its candour and straight forwardness."

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

SINGAPORE.

Advices hence are to the 9th ultimo. The outward mail of 27th March was received on the 30th April, with telegrams to the 15th April. The Straits Times observes :—"The P. and O. steamers are showing themselves extremely punctual under the new contract." The same paper gives the following summary of news :—

The Legislative Council was opened on the 6th May in the Town-hall with the usual ceremonies. A guard of the Madras Sepoys was on the ground, and the usual salute was fired from Fort Canning. Owing to some unlucky accident, two artillerymen were blown away from a 68-pounder during the salute, but there seems to have been no one to blame but the unfortunate men themselves.

The speech of his Excellency the Governor was rather clumsily worded, but very guarded in its tone, and there is apparently nothing to lay hold on by the most inveterate growler. There is not a word more about taxation, and so all the protective associations may as well dissolve themselves at once. Various important papers and draft Acts or rather Ordinances, as they are to be called by Bill in future, were laid before the members.

The Revenue is in a satisfactory condition, if we are to believe the Auditor-General, who declares that during the first nine months of the new administration, that is, up to 31st December, 1867 there was a saving on the Estimates of over $75,000. The public now know all about the Supreme Court Bill, and above all about the wearisome patience-trying Water-Works. If nothing unusual occurs, we may expect to get water within three months from the beginning of this month. This is about as satisfactory as an incredulous thirsty public can expect, and they are bound to be duly thankful accordingly.

It appears that the colony, in the estimation of the authorities, cannot get on without a bishop, and his Grace the Secretary of State wants to know from the Legislative Council what they are prepared to pay for getting one. Considering that the community is nearly all Scotch and German—all stanch Presbyterians—and Roman Catholics who perhaps are larger in number, this proposal is just a little too much for human patience. Why should such tender care be taken of Episcopalian lambs, and the existence of benighted Presbyterians and Roman Catholics be ignored with such cool aristocratic indifference? The salary of a bishop is not a matter of any consequence to the colony, but it is the acting on such a principle which arouses the wrath of any impartial man.

From the Penang papers we learn that the Betel-nut Islanders have formed a branch association for the protection of the interests of the Straits Settlements against gubernatorial crotchets and proclivities. We have heard nothing of the doings of the Singapore Association, but we suppose that they are keeping a sleepless eye on current events, and to that no doubt is owing the colourless insipidity of his Excellency's speech.

Our races came off on the 5th and 7th of May, but as they were rather poor there is no occasion for any remark regarding them.

By the Arratoon Apcar we learn that a collision had taken place on the 24th April, about twenty-five miles below Calcutta, between the British ships Agamennon and Ethel, both homeward bound with valuable cargoes. It appears that whilst being rowed down the river they came into collision with each other through the force of an eddy, and both vessels sank almost immediately. The crews were fortunately saved and taken back to Calcutta by three steam tugs.

The following are the more interesting paragraphs in the Governor's speech :—

Gentlemen of the Legislative Council:

In opening the second Legislative session of the Settlements, before proceeding to indicate what are the measures of importance which, either in compliance with the instructions of Her Majesty's Government or in furtherance of the interests of the colony, will be submitted to your consideration, it is right that I should notice such matters of public interest as have occurred during the recess.

You have been already furnished with an abstract of the revenue and expenditure of the Settlements during the nine months ending the 31st December, 1867, the detailed returns will now be laid before you, and you will notice with satisfaction that the expenditure of the Settlements during this period was considerably within the revenue, and that of a sum of about $124,000 directed to be raised by way of loan for certain special objects, upwards of $32,000 was furnished from current revenue, which, with an actual excess of revenue over expenditure of $43,000, makes the entire saving during the nine months over $75,000.

Having given much attention to the manner in which the affairs of the towns are managed under municipal councils composed partly of nominated officials and partly of elected non-official members, I have come to the conclusion that I am called upon to put an end to an arrangement the result of which is unsatisfactory, so far, at least, as the Government participation in its control is concerned. I have expressed my opinion on this point to the municipalities, and have received replies from each of them on which I have made a minute, and I have to invite your consideration to the subject as one of much importance to the interests of the Settlements.

The works for supplying with water the town of Singapore having been a long time in hand, I have called on the colonial engineer for a report on their state, and the causes which have led to this delay. This report which will be laid before you I am glad to say exonerates the existing public works department from any blame in the matter, whilst it holds out a prospect of the early completion of this important work.

By an alteration in the contract for the conveyance of the European mails, the steamers of the Peninsular and Oriental Company have been released from the obligation of touching at Penang. A strong appeal has been made to Her Majesty's Government showing the serious injury which must result to the Settlement if this arrangement be not cancelled, and I am not without hope that this will be conceded, and that we shall be relieved from the necessity of making provision to supply the postal requirements of the Settlements, a measure which would probably entail heavy expense.

The pressure under which trade has suffered of late has had its effect upon some branches of the revenue, but on the whole the financial condition of our affairs is satisfactory. Of course when taxation is raised to so great an extent directly from the people any material change in the number or character of our population would have a serious effect on our revenue, but so long as our present circumstances continue, I think our revenue ought to be sufficient to meet all legitimate demands that can be made upon it.

PENANG.

As might have been anticipated from the active public spirit lately manifested in Penang, the residents in that settlement have lost no time in forming an association there to aid and to act in concert with the "Straits Settlements Associations" already organised in London and Singapore. A preliminary meeting for this purpose was held on the 25th April, at the Exchange-room, and was attended by the following gentlemen :—Messrs. M. F. Davidson, J. Buttery, J. Macfarlane, M. A. Anthony, H. J. D. Padday, L. Nairne, J. Allan, W. C. S. Padday, A. Gentle, C. C. Wiget, S. A. Anthony, C. O. Harbin, H. R. Reid, W. H. Foston, and F. C. Bishop.

The following report is given by the Penang Gazette :—The proceedings having been duly opened by the sheriff the meeting proceeded to elect a chairman, and on the proposal of Mr. J. Allan, seconded by Mr. L. Nairne, Mr. M. F. Davidson was unanimously elected to fulfil the important post. Mr. Macfarlane acted as secretary pro tem., in the absence of Mr. B. Rodyk, who had been previously requested and had consented to act in that capacity, but was unavoidably prevented from attending the meeting. The chairman in addressing the meeting briefly stated that all present had met together with the view of forming an association for the purpose of watching over and protecting the commercial and also the general welfare of our island, and to proclaim against any act of local legislature that might prove detrimental to our interests. The Chairman further stated that all present had doubtless heard of the Associations at present formed in London and Singapore for the same praiseworthy motive, and he (the Chairman) trusted that these Associations, in conjunction with our own, would use their best endeavours for furthering the interests of our colony, and be able to successfully resist any pernicious innovations of our ancient rights and privileges.—The following resolutions were then passed :—

"1. That an association be formed this day, to be called the Straits Settlements Association of Penang, to co-operate with the associations already formed in London and Singapore.

"2. That the Association shall consist of all those present at this meeting, and such other gentlemen as are interested in the prosperity of this settlement, and who may desire to join.

"3. That the Association shall elect a chairman, secretary, and a committee of five members, any three of whom, with the chairman and secretary, shall form a quorum, and that the Association shall act through them.

"4. That the committee appointed shall have power to fill up vacancies in this body, subject to the approval of the first general meeting thereafter.

"5. That any necessary expenses shall be defrayed by the association out of a fund subscribed by the members when called upon to do so.

"6. That the following gentlemen do form a committee :—L. Nairne, Esq., J. Allan, Esq., H. Padday, Esq., F. C. Bishop, Esq., and J. Macfarlane, Esq.

"Amendment by Mr. J. Macfarlane, seconded by Mr. C. O. Harbin, that Mr. L. Nairne declining, Mr. A. Gentle be substituted."

After this resolution had been passed, and a vote of thanks returned to the chairman, the meeting separated.

Commercial Report.

CHINA AND JAPAN IMPORTS.

YOKOHAMA.—Up to the date of the departure of the mail no improvement had taken place in the position of commercial affairs. On the day of departure, however, there had been some evidences of renewal of activity, and there was a general opinion that a cessation of the existing political difficulties would not fail to bring about a favourable change in business affairs. Grey shirtings: A few sales for re-export constituted the only business done. For other cotton goods the demand had entirely ceased. Woollens: the only business done had been in Black Camlets, which had sold as high as $18.30, and in the cheaper kinds of black cloth. Blankets: None on the market; the demand continued. No other Woollen Goods were in any enquiry, and quotations must be taken as nominal. Metals remained as quoted in our last, with little doing. We hear of sales of Tin Plates at $8 to 8.50. The quotations were:—Cotton Yarn—Nos. 16 to 24, per picul $41 to 42; 28 to 32, $42 to 44; 38 to 42, $38 to 39. Grey Shirtings—7 lbs. per piece, $2.30 to 2·45; ditto, 8.4 lbs., $2.80 to 2.85; ditto, 8.6 to 8.8 lbs., $2.80 to 2.90; White Shirtings, 56 to 60 reed, per piece, $3.10 to 3.40; ditto, 64 to 66 reed, $3.50 to 3.70; ditto, 68 to 72 reed $3.70 to 4.10. T-Cloths, 6 lbs., $2 to 2.10; ditto, 6.8 to 7 lbs., $2.20 to 2.50; Camlets, S, per piece, $16 to 17; ditto, SS, $15.50 to 16; ditto, SSS, $13 to 14; ditto, BB, $16 to 17; ditto, BBB, $16 to 17; Camlet Cords, $3.75 to 5.25; Orleans Plain, $3.75 to 5; ditto Figured, $4.30 to 5; Iron, Nail Rod, per picul, $3 to 3.50; ditto, Hoop, $4.25 to 4.50; ditto, Bars, $2.75 to 3.50; ditto, pig, $1.30 to 1.50; ditto, Wire, $6.50 to 7; Lead, $7 to 7.75; Tin, $17 to 18.

SHANGHAI.—Cotton Goods: For some time subsequent to the departure of the last mail a quieter feeling pervaded the market for Plain Cottons, consequent upon less favourable advices having been received from Tientsin. Later accounts, however, being of a more hopeful nature, a slight reaction had taken place, and Grey Shirtings, 8¼ lbs., which at one time were quoted Tls. 2.2.4 to 2.2.8 per piece, were at the close valued at Tls. 2.2.5 to 2.3 per piece. Purchases "to arrive" had for the most part ceased. White Shirtings had been in small inquiry at last mail rates. T-Cloths had met with a fair demand, best makes being those in most favour. Fancy Cottons had not been asked for. The Agamemnon (str.) and Forward Ho had arrived from England with cargoes of manufactured goods. Woollens: Spanish Stripes, Medium, Broad, and Habit Cloths had been in a little more inquiry at the low rates current. Camlets had met with but little attention. Long Ells had been in better demand, but values showed no quotable change. Lastings showed no signs of improvement. Figured Orleans had been in speculative inquiry, and large sales had resulted at quotations. Metals:—Nail rod iron had been in fair demand, but other descriptions had not been asked for. Lead had been in small inquiry, and prices had ruled slightly weaker. Tin plates dull of sale at lower value. Quicksilver declined in price. Coals:—Since the 14th April the only arrivals had been 1,025 tons Formosa coals, which sold at Tls. 7.0.0 to 7.5.0 per ton from ship. All other kinds were without transactions, and with the exception of Cardiffs, stocks of all kinds were nil in first hands. The current quotations were as follows:—Grey Shirtings: 7 lbs., 1.9.0 to 1.9.6 per pc.; 8.4 to 8.6 lbs., 2.2.5 to 2.3.0; 9 to 9.12 lbs., 2.7.0 to 3.2.5 White Shirtings: 56 reed, 2.1.0 to 2.2.0; 60, 2.2.5 to 2.3.0; 64, 2.3.5 to 2.4.5; 66, 2.5.0 to 2.5.5; 72, 2.6.5 to 2.7.0; 80 to 84, 3.0.0 to 3.1.0. T-Cloths: 6 lbs., 1.4.5 to 1.9.0; 7 1.8.0 to 2.1.5; 8 to 8.4, 2.3.0 to 2.8.0. Camlets, English: S, 56 yards, 12.7.5 to 13.2.5 per p.; SS, 12.5.0 to 13.0; SSS, 10.5.0 to 11.0. Spanish Stripes: 0.6.0 to 0.7.5 per yard. Iron: Nail Rod, 2.6.0 per pl.; Hoop, 2.4.0 to 2.5.0; Flat and Round, 2.6.0. Lead, 6.5.0 to 6.6.5 per pl. Tin Plates, 5.0.0 per box. Steel, 4.0.0 to 4.5.0 per tub.

HANKOW.—There had been less anxiety evinced on the part of dealers to get into stock until a better inquiry manifested itself for Grey Shirtings, and quotations, which at one time were lower, were firm by last accounts at last mail's rates. White Shirtings had been in fair demand, but rates showed no improvement. For T-Cloths the enquiry had been moderate at last quotations. Grey Drills had been in fair demand at fully previous figures. In Fancy Cottons there had been no change to record. For Camlets the demand had continued limited. Lastings were firm, but the enquiry had been small. Long Ells had been forced off, and prices had consequently further given way. Figured Orleans sold at former low figures.

HONG KONG.—The following is from Messrs. Olyphant and Co.'s Circular, dated 30th April:—Cotton Yarn: A good business has been done in this article, principally in Nos. 16 to 24, which are about $2.50 per bale dearer, but other numbers are not much wanted, and sales have been made at a decline about equal to the improvement in Nos. 16 to 24. Stocks have been further increased by late arrivals from London. Piece Goods: Manufactures are still much neglected, and prices generally are a little lower, but there is some inquiry for 7lbs. T-Cloths at last quotations, and holders of best chops 8.4lbs. Grey Shirtings are fairly firm. 40 yard English Drills are wanted for Northern markets, and are again dearer; 30 yard maintain their values, and we can note no change in White Shirtings. A small quantity of American Drills, 40 yard, has been quitted on easier terms. Woollens: Long Ells have further advanced. Spanish Stripes are somewhat weaker. Dutch Camlets rather dearer. Blankets are out of stock, and sales to arrive are reported to have been made at $6.50 per pair—10 lbs. Lastings and English Camlets are without change. Metals: Almost all descriptions continue in demand, and Nail Rod Iron, Wire, Tin, and Lead have advanced in value, particularly Wire and Lead. There is no stock of the latter in first hands. Bar and Hoop Iron, Steel and Tin Plates, are firm at last quotations, but Quicksilver and Spelter are lower. Coal: The only arrival has been one cargo of 560 tons Sydney to consumers. No sales have been reported, and we make no change in our quotations. The quotations were:—Yarn, Nos. 16 to 24, $110 to 122.50 per bale; 28 to 32, $135 to 140; 38 to 42, $140 to 147.50; Cotton Goods, Grey Shirtings, 7 lbs., $2.30 to $2.40 per piece; 8 lb., $2.65 to 2.70; 8.4 lbs., $2.85 to 2.95; 8.8 lbs., $2.95 to 3; 9 lbs., $3.35 to 3.45; 9.4 lbs., $3.50 to 3.55; 9.8 lbs., $3.65 to 3.75; 9.12 lbs., $3.85 to 3.95; 10 lbs., $4.10 to 4.20; White Shirtings, 54 to 60 rd., $2.15 to 2.45; 64 to 66, $2.80 to 3; 68 to 72, $3.15 to 3.75; T-Cloths, 6 to 6.2 lbs., $1.85 to 2; 6.5 to 6.8 lbs., $2 to 2.10; 7 lbs., $2.20 to $2.55; 7.2 lbs., $2.40 to 2.50; 8 lbs., $2.80 to 2.90; 8.4 lbs., $2.90 to 3; 9 to 10 lbs., $3.25 to 3.50; Assorted, $3.90 to 4; Woollens, Long Ells H Scarlet, $8.50 to 8.60; H Assorted, $8.20 to 8.40; HH Scarlet, $8.70 to 8.75; HH Assorted, $8.40 to 8.60; Spanish Stripes, Scarlet, $0.80 to 0.85 per yard; Assorted, $0.78 to 0.83; Blankets, 10lb., $5.75 to 6.25 per pair; 7lb., $3.80 to 4.00; Metals, Iron, Nail-rod, $2.95 to 3.10 per picul; Square, Round and Flat bar, $3.20 to 4.40; Hoop, $3.40 to 3.60; Wire, $8.50 to 9.50; Steel, $4.20 to 5.80 per tub; Lead, $8.70 to 9.00 per picul; WB, $9.20 to 9.50; Tin, Malacca, $24.50 to 25.00; Straits, $20,50 to 22.75; Tin Plates, $7.10 to 7.60 per box; Quicksilver, $64.00 to 65.00 per picul.

CHINA AND JAPAN EXPORTS.

TEA.

YOKOHAMA.—During the short period that had elapsed since the last dispatch a very moderate business had been done; about 600 piculs had been settled, consisting of Good Medium to Fine Grades; prices ruled the same as last quoted, and the market closed without any change. Arrivals had increased stocks to about 1,000 piculs. The Rifleman sailed on the 15th April with 333,291 lbs. for New York. Quotations:—Common, $18 to 22 per picul; Good Common, $22 to 24; Medium, $24 to 26; Good Medium, $27 to 30; Fine, $31 to 32; Finest, $33 to 35; Choice, $36 to 45.

SHANGHAI.—Black: There was no stock remaining, and consequently no business had to be noted. It is too early yet to speculate on the prospects of the coming season, and experience would show that the opinions of the natives at this stage of the proceedings are of little value. Green: The small stocks previously existing had been cleared off at unaltered prices; consisting principally of Shanghai-packed teas, at prices ranging from Tls. 24½ to 30. One chop of common country tea had been purchased at Tls. 30 per picul. There was no stock remaining.

HANKOW.—The arrangements for the new Teas were nearly completed. It is stated that the amount of capital engaged in the trade is larger than that employed last year. The total number of hongs is less, the deficiency being in the inferior districts of Oopack and Oonam, while in some of the favourite countries the number is in excess of last season. Quotations were merely nominal, and there was no stock on hand.

FOOCHOW.—No transactions had taken place either at this port or at Kiukiang.

SILK.

YOKOHAMA.—Supplies had been on a miserable scale, and quite insufficient to keep business current. Available qualities had been taken at about the same rates as before quoted. The Silks arriving had been in large proportion from the Oshu and Northern districts, and it would appear that the communication with Mybash, Sinchu, and Shimonita is more and more interfered with by the disturbed state of the country. Settlements, including 206 bales, which went forward per M. I. str. Phase, amount to about 400 bales. The stocks were estimated to amount to about 400 bales. The quotations (laid down in London, all charges included at exchange 4s. 4d. six months sight) were as follows:—Mybash, Sinchu, &c., 1, 2, 34s. 10d. to 35s. 10d.; ditto, 1, 2 and 3, 32s. 1d. to 33s. 11d.; ditto, 2, 3 and 4, 28s. 5d. to 31s. 2d.; ditto Inferior, 25s. 7d. to 27s. 10d.; Oshu Best, 33s. to 36s. 2d.; ditto Medium, 28s. 5d. to 31s. 2d.; ditto Inferior, 24s. 11d. to 26s. 9d.; Coshu 1, 2 nom., 31s. 2d. to 32s. 3d.; ditto Medium, 27s. 6d. to 30s. 5d.; ditto Inferior, 23s. 9d. to 26s. 7d.; Sodai 1, 2, 27s. 6d. to 31s. 2d.; ditto Inferior, 23s. 9d. to 25s. 7d.

SHANGHAI.—There was no alteration to notice, prices remaining unaltered, and purchases having been restricted to a very small compass. The mulberry trees being backward there was every probability that the new Silk would be rather later than usual, and it is to be feared that prices will open quite as high as last year, if the high rates at which contracts were reported to have been made for leaves are any criterion. The last P. and O. str. left on the 16th April with 491 bales Chinas and 216 Japans for England, and 96 and 394 bales for France, the P.M. str. Costa Rica, on the 17th April, with 4 bales Chinas, piculs 2.35, for New York, and the Messageries Impériales steamer, on the 22nd April, with 79 bales Chinas (7 bales of which were for New York) and 155 bales Japans for France, and 129 and 51 for England.

CANTON.—There were no settlements to advise, and no change to note in prices. Dealers, although willing to sell, could not be induced to accept the offers made them. Reports from the country were not so favourable for the new crop, rains and cold weather having, it was said, destroyed a large part of the first yield. It was impossible to form any idea of the quality of the coming supplies. We give the following quotations, which show no alteration from those of last mail:—Tsatlee, No. 1, $500 to 510 per picul; Tsatlee, No. 2, $470 to 475; Loongkong, $500 to 510; Re-reeled Cumchook, $530 to 545.

At HONG KONG.—Tonnage continues scarce, and rates remain firm. The following is only home charters:—Jane Woodburn (299 tons), Canton to New York, £3 12s. per ton of 40 cubic feet. £5 has been offered to and refused by a tea clipper to load at Manila; for a direct port to Saigon and back the rate is 37½ cwts. per picul.

At SINGAPORE.—Tonnage is scarce, and a good demand exists for China, while rates for home are firmer; there is also some inquiry for vessels to load home from Bangkok with rice. To London the rate is £3. 5s. per ton dead weight and light freight.

At PENANG.—The Ceylon, 265 tons, has been fixed at £3 5s. for tin and pepper, £3 10s. for hides and rubber, and £4 for measurement, and has a large portion of her cargo engaged.

THE PENANG MAIL SERVICE.

Mr. Baring, M.P., has brought the matter of the Penang Mail Service to the notice of the House of Commons by asking the following question:—Whether the Post-office Department contemplated the renewal of the direct postal communication by steam-packets with Penang, which that settlement had enjoyed for the last twenty-two years; and, if so, what were the measures to be adopted?

Mr. Sclater Booth, of the Treasury, said that this subject had been for some time under the consideration of the Post-office authorities, but he was unable to state whether they had arrived at any decision on the subject. The matter was still under their consideration, and perhaps his hon. friend would repeat his question on a future day.

The Straits Association have prepared and issued a pamphlet on the case, showing the injustice of omitting Penang in the new mail service, and it is intended to bring the matter forward again in the House, in order that the case may be impressed on the Postmaster-General.

AMERICAN advices announce the arrival of Mr. BURLINGHAME and suite at New York. Before leaving San Francisco they were entertained at a splendid banquet.

FRENCH MAIL SUBSIDIES.

THE following letter, addressed to the Editor of The Times, relates to the course of the French Government in taxing the nation to pay heavy subsidies for mail services to countries where there is no bona fide French trade; it has especial reference to the new contract with the Messageries Imperiales:—

"Sir,—Struck with the force of the observations which appeared in the City article of The Times of the 9th inst., on the subject of the contract about to be submitted to the Chamber of Deputies for the establishment of a French line of mail steamers in the South Pacific, with a subsidy of three times the mileage rate paid by our own Government for a similar service, I am induced to offer a few remarks on a projet de loi also to come before the Chamber shortly for an extension of the mail services in the East now carried on by the company of the Messageries Impériales, this proposed extension of operations being marked by the same difference which distinguishes the action of the French Government from that of our own in the West—namely, the grant of a subsidy greatly in excess of that payable to the English company for performing identical work.

"Assuming that the experience of many years has enabled the English Government and the English steam companies to arrive at a fair estimate of the amount of subsidy necessary for the support of a particular mail line, it is not easy to discover the grounds on which the French companies require, and the French Government are found as willing to grant, subsidies so greatly in excess of what may be looked upon to some extent as an ascertained standard.

"The Messageries Company were at much pains to explain to their shareholders and the public, in some of their early reports, that the Peninsular and Oriental Company received for their first mail contract with the East a much higher rate of subsidy than that for which they were able to perform the mail services of a later period, and that for this reason it had been arranged that the French contract should work on a graduated scale and a diminishing rate of subsidy during the twenty-four years of its duration. The argument was not, however, illustrated by a comparison of figures, for reasons which will be presently obvious.

"When the Peninsular and Oriental Company, in 1842 and 1843, pushed the pioneer force of their fleet into the Indian Ocean success was altogether problematical, but they created and developed a trade which expanded in a few years into very important and unexpected dimensions. Great establishments proper to steam navigation sprang up at Calcutta, Hong Kong, and Bombay, while places such as Suez, Aden, Point de Galle and Singapore grew into busy stations, each infusing life and activity into the other by means of the communication kept up, and the support afforded by the large fleet of steamships running at fixed and frequent intervals between the Far East and the terminal ports of Marseilles and Southampton.

"It was only natural that the managers of a powerful and enterprising institution such as the company of the Messageries Impériales should cast a longing eye upon a trade flowing in and out of their own port of Marseilles. They had their line of steamers to Alexandria, and they saw beyond Suez not the unexplored commercial regions into which the Peninsular and Oriental Company ventured eighteen years before, but a fertile and cultivated district, the soil of which (if the word may pass) had been won and reclaimed by the power of steam; produce and passengers were passing to and fro on the high roads laid down by the English company but the soil and the highways were equally open to the French company they had but to send their ships and set up their own agencies and stations to reap a share of the harvest.

"They consequently adopted a course not altogether consistent with existing circumstances, in going before their Government in the garb and character of pioneers, saying, give us the pay of pioneers for a long term of years, lend us State capital, promise to take our stock in trade off our hands if you go to war and damage our business, and we will go forth and try to make a commerce with the East.

"Their application was entirely successful. They obtained a contract for twenty-four years; the rate of subsidy for the first term of three years was 19s. 8d., the average rate for the whole term was 15s. 8d. per mile. The rate of subsidy for the first or tentative contract of eight years with the Peninsular and Oriental Company was 17s. 1d.; for the last sixteen years it has been under 6s., and for the next twelve years it will range between 6s. 1d. and 7s. 8d.

"In their present application to their Government for a contract for an increased service the Messageries Company still stipulate for a subsidy greatly in excess of that payable to the English company, and the excess they are to receive must be regarded as so much money liberated from the ordinary requirements of their business, and available as a fund wherewith to play a most unequal game in competing for the traffic by which each company must mainly subsist.

"The French company claim equality with the English in the matter of the speed and accommodation of their steamers, and they do not urge that their expenses exceed those of the English, but the demand for such a great excess of subsidy above that which satisfies the English contractors implies either a consciousness of inferiority in some respect or a desire to win the race at the cost of the tax-payer.

"The English Government are, to the extent of the difference between the minimum and maximum of the subsidy—namely, 1s. 6d. per mile—partners with the Peninsular and Oriental Company in the new contract just commenced, and this circumstance invests the proceedings of the French Government and the Messageries Company with a national interest they would not otherwise possess.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

"W."

THE SUEZ CANAL COMPANY.

M. de Lesseps has met his shareholders once more in Paris, and laid before them the reports and accounts for the past year, together with statements relative to the actual condition of affairs at the present moment. Like almost all official documents, and especially French documents, the report is unnecessarily long, the same statements cropping up in more than one place. Those parts of it which interest English readers may be given in very moderate compass.

With respect to the financial statement it appears that the total expenditure to the end of April last amounted to 288 millions of francs, and the receipts from all sources to 346 millions, leaving a balance in hand of 58 millions. The emission of 333,333 debentures at 300 francs each, repayable in fifty years at the rate of 500 francs, with a yearly interest of 25 francs each, has resulted in the placing of only 108,393 to the present time. This would not generally be looked upon as very gratifying, but M. de Lesseps speaks of it "as a satisfactory result, showing the legitimate confidence which the undertaking inspires, and the sympathy which it receives." The Emperor has permitted the society to adopt the lottery principle for the placement of the remaining obligations.

The great canal is positively to be opened on the first day of October, 1869. About that neither M. de Lesseps nor any of the engineers and contractors have the slightest doubt, and, we must add, taking the figures and statements as we find them in the report, we see no reason, unless cash should run short, why time should not be kept. It is true that there is an immense deal of work to be done, thirty-two millions of tons of earth, dry and wet, to be excavated, out of a total of seventy-four millions; but, according to the statement of the engineers, the means now in action are equal to the excavation of two million tons per month. The business at Port Said and the results of the transit on the canal present a highly satisfactory appearance, and we heartily congratulate the company thereupon. The following are the figures from the report:—

Movement in the port during the ten months ending the 15th of April, 1868, 1,000 vessels, with an aggregate of 232,072 tons, of which 89,417 tons French, or an average of 725 tons per day, against 406 during the previous year.

Receipts for transit on the canal:—			Francs.
„	3rd do.	... ...	300,321
„	4th do.	... ...	474,597
1868	1st do.	... ...	544,961

The tonnage having increased from 9,417 tons in the first half of 1867 to 29,420 tons in the first four months of 1868; and the passengers from 46,814 in the year 1867, to 15,486 in the first four months of 1868.

Twelve thousand tons of coal have been carried along the canal from Port Said to Suez this year for the French and English Navigation Companies, and we are told by the report that the price at Suez has dropped from 85 to 100f. to 60 and 70f. the ton.

The report, speaking of the arrangements at Port Said and the capabilities of the canal, says that the cargo of the Cromwell, consisting of 53,000 bales and cases, was transported from that port to Suez between the evening of the 19th of March and the morning of the 24th of the same month.

FRAUDS IN SILKWORMS' EGGS.

The Florence correspondent of The Times writes as follows:—

"You are aware that of late years there has been a very large importation of silkworms' eggs from Japan to Italy, with a view to repairing the ravages of disease among the worms in this country. To a considerable extent the plan has proved successful, although the descendants of the Japanese by no means invariably escape—at least, in the second and third generation—the mysterious affliction which has long played such havoc with one of the most important and lucrative of Italian productions. Latterly, complaints have been heard even of the eggs imported direct from Japan. To all appearance they were of good quality, but it seemed they were not proof against the prevailing epidemic. A circular that has just been addressed to the presidents of agricultural committees by the Minister of Agriculture and Commerce accounts otherwise for the deterioration. A system of fraud has been detected. The Minister declares it to have come to his knowledge that a great number of cases containing empty papers of the kind in which the Japanese eggs are usually sent have been received by a Milan house. These papers are duly stamped and inscribed in Japanese; they bear the Custom-house mark usually put on them at Yedo on their way to the Yokohama market. The Minister declares it beyond a doubt that these papers were intended to receive Italian eggs, which would be sold to the public as genuine Japanese—thus discrediting the only eggs on which is now based a hope of reviving sericulture in this country. The discovery appears to have been due to the refusal of certain Japanese houses to submit their papers of eggs to the inspection and stamp of the Italian agents and consuls in Japan. The Minister promises great vigilance to defeat these frauds, for, he adds, he has reason to believe that other persons are on the alert to follow the example of the Milan house above alluded to. According to an official publication in 1863, the total value of the cocoons produced in the provinces which now compose the kingdom of Italy was upwards of four millions sterling. To obtain this there had been imported 56,129 kilogrammes of eggs, at a cost of 24 millions of francs, or nearly a million sterling."

THE RUSSIANS IN CENTRAL ASIA.

It appears there was little exaggeration in the report originally transmitted from Bombay, which announced a great battle between the Bokharians and the Russians, resulting in the victory of the Russians, and the death of the Emir of Bokhara in the field. Official information from St. Petersburg confirms this despatch in all but one particular. It is not said that the Emir was killed, but it is authentically stated that the Russians did advance to Samarcand, that they engaged, on the 2nd of last month, a Bokharian army 80,000 strong, utterly routed it, with slight loss to themselves, captured the enemy's artillery and camp, and, finally, occupied Samarcand without resistance. It is further stated that the hostilities were forced upon the Russians by the "bad faith" of the Emir, and that the ground they thus gained was gained entirely against their will. It would be of little avail to question the sincerity of these representations, but in common candour we may remark that the case alleged for the Russians is precisely such as we times out of mind have alleged for ourselves. We have always declared that our conquests in India were forced upon us, for the most part, by political necessity. We have charged one native Prince after another with "bad faith," and we have expected the world to believe us. In short, what, according to the Russian account, has now happened to them in Central Asia is simply what, beyond all question, has repeatedly happened to ourselves in India. This, however, is a point of no practical importance. The Russians, involuntarily or by design, have made, we must presume, a stride in advance. Whether they have occupied Bokhara as well as Samarcand seems uncertain, nor can we exactly say what amount of actual advantage, strategical or political, the victory may represent. Possibly they find they have too much upon their hands, but, upon the whole, we may reasonably suppose that they have taken one step more towards that supremacy in Central Asia at which they are believed to aim, and which we have been taught to regard with alarm. This undoubtedly is the light in which the case will be viewed in India, and the whole unmanageable and insoluble question of our policy in this respect will be raised once more. We trust it will be allowed once more to drop. It would be impossible for any one to prove that the Russians have no designs upon British India, though it cannot be unreasonable to imagine that there is room enough in Asia for both us and them. We cannot even say whether they are advancing with any set purpose or deliberate intent towards our frontier; but what we can say is, that if they should so advance it is not by any means certain they would be bad neighbours to us, and that if they are to be bad neighbours, we cannot mend the matter by advancing to meet them.

COURT OF BANKRUPTCY.

IN RE GEORGE LYALL.

This was an application for an order of discharge by the bankrupt, who was a merchant carrying on business at 13, Leadenhall-street, in copartnership with C. F. Still, under the firm of Lyall and Still, and also at Hong Kong, and elsewhere in the East, in partnership with C. F. Still and G. F. Maclean. Mr. Bagley was counsel for the assignees; Mr. Reed and Mr. Finlay Knight opposed on behalf of Mr. Liebert, of Manchester, a large creditor; Mr. Sargood supported the bankrupt.

The assignees did not oppose; but on behalf of Mr. Liebert, whose debt amounts to £40,000, the application for discharge was resisted, mainly on the ground that the bankrupt had contracted debts without reasonable expectation of making payment. It appeared that the bankrupt joined Messrs. Still and Maclean in partnership in 1863. They were engaged in the tea trade, and their transactions were of considerable magnitude. In 1865 a deficiency of £65,000 had accrued which in 1866 had increased to £141,477; the actual deficiency at the time of the bankruptcy being £143,300. It was urged that the bankrupt had supported a failing trade by gradually increasing his purchases, and that he had continued his business much longer than he ought to have done. Goods of considerable value were received by the bankrupt from Mr. Liebert and consigned to Mr. Maclean, at Hong Kong, advances being obtained upon them from time to time from the banks. A mass of correspondence between the bankrupt and Mr. Maclean was put in, in order to show that the firm was in embarrassed circumstances long before the failure occurred, and reference was particularly made to a letter written by Mr. Maclean in October, 1866, in which, alluding to the difficulties of the firm, he said, "mail after mail they have been getting worse and worse, and I am now at the climax, and I confess I do not see any way out of them, except by some desperate measure."

The case stands adjourned.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE MONT CENIS LINE.—The Times correspondent at Florence writes—"At the time of the trial trip over the Mont Cenis, it was definitely settled by the directors there present that the line should be opened for passenger traffic on the 8th inst., and the decision was telegraphed on the 23rd of May from St. Michel to Paris and other places. By a letter which reached me yesterday from St. Michel I learn that owing to no final arrangement having yet been come to with the Paris, Lyons, and Mediterranean Railway on the one hand, and the Alta Italia Railway on the other, with respect to the correspondence of trains and the establishment of a joint time-table, the opening of the Mont Cenis line has unavoidably been again for a few days postponed. A telegram from the Paris direction, received here subsequently to my letter, says that the 15th will be the day. Meanwhile a number of persons have been across by trial and special trains, and all those of whom I have heard the report express themselves delighted with the trip. I yesterday saw a letter from a French engineer, who crossed a week ago in five hours by one of the last trial trains, on his way from Florence to Paris, and who had previously expressed himself with some distrust as to the merits of the line. He seems now at a loss for words sufficiently eulogistic to express his opinion of its security, comfort, and perfect success."

STEAM SHIPBUILDING ON THE CLYDE.—Messrs. W. Denny and Brothers, of Leven, have launched an iron screw, named the Abyssinia, built for the British India Steam Navigation Company. The dimensions of the Abyssinia are 240ft. 6in. by 30ft. and 19ft. Her burden is 1,065 tons, builders' measurement, and she will be supplied by Messrs. Denny and Co. with direct-acting surface condensing engines of 200-horse power nominal. Messrs. Wingate and Co. have launched from their yard at Whiteinch a screw of 187 tons builders' measurement, named the Celt, 100ft. by 20ft. and 10ft., and fitted with engines of 30-horse power nominal. This small steamer has been built to the order of Mr. J. B. Sheriff, of Glasgow, and is intended for the West Highland trade. Messrs. Randolph, Elder and Co. have launched from their yard at Fairfield, Glasgow, a screw-steamer of 1,339 tons, builders' measurement, and 250-horse power nominal. This steamer, which has been named the Biafra, is of the following dimensions:—Length over all, 285ft. 6in.; breadth, 32ft.; depth (moulded), 20ft. 9in. The Biafra has been built for the African Steamship Company, and is intended for carrying mails to the West Coast of Africa. Her engines, which are being supplied by Messrs. Randolph, Elder and Co., are on their patent compound high and low pressure principle, with surface condensers. Messrs. Blackwood and Gordon have launched a paddle named The Lady Mary, intended to be used for passenger traffic between Ardrossan and Arran. This steamer has been built to the order of the Duke of Hamilton for the convenience of his tenants in Arran and summer visitors resorting thither. Her dimensions are:—Length, 173ft.; breadth, 20ft.; depth, 8ft. 6in. She will be fitted with oscillating engines of 110-horse power.

A USE FOR CHINESE "TAILS."—A correspondent writing from Paris tells the following story:—"I was in a hairdresser's shop a few days ago, when a man entered who offered for sale a large lot of Chinese tails. I mean human hair tails, such as adorn the heads of the subjects of the Celestial Empire. The bargain was soon struck at the low rate of two francs and a-half per tail, and the vendor was encouraged to bring as many more as he could procure. The hair was coarse and black, and did not seem to me fitted to add to the attractions of any female head, so I inquired to what use it could be put. 'Use!' exclaimed the hairdresser; 'Soyez tranquille. I am not anxious about that. There is such a demand for hair just now that we are too happy to buy whatever we can get.' I tell you this story, as it may furnish a useful hint to some of your lady readers, on fashion bent but still of frugal minds. They will be glad to know that by asking for Chinese tails they may procure cheap hair for country toilets, or more especially for sea bathing."

JAPANESE SILKWORMS IN EUROPE.—Accounts concerning the oriental silk crop continue to vary, but good ones seem to preponderate. In Lombardy it is likely that the crop will be superior to last year's. The cocoons begin to come to market, and at every railway station travellers will see baskets, bags, and bundles of the white and yellow wealth on their way to the nearest town. Generally speaking, and judging from a large number of letters and reports received from the principal silk-growing centres, a good yield is obtained only from worms proceeding from Japanese eggs. The eggs of worms hatched from Japanese eggs often prove a failure as regards produce of silk, but there are exceptions, as in the Province of Bergamo, where the crop is reported good even from the second generation. Attempts are still made to naturalise that variety of the Japanese worm which feeds upon the oak leaf instead of the mulberry, but a great many of them die, and some growers imagine this to be because in Japan they live in the open air instead of being, as here, confined in rooms. They are curious and beautiful insects, differing in form from the ordinary silkworm, and of a brilliant grass-green colour, with protuberant glossy white spots upon the sides, which have exactly the appearance of pearls.

A HINT FOR TRAVELLERS.—A well-known German traveller, F. Jager, in his "Sketches of Travels in Singapore, Malacca, Java" (Berlin, 1866), describes the powder of the Pyrethrum roseum as a specific against all noxious insects, including the troublesome mosquitoes and those which attack collections. He says:—"A tincture prepared by macerating one part of the Pyrethrum roseum in four parts of dilute alcohol, and, when diluted with ten times its bulk of water, applied to any part of the body, gives perfect security against all vermin. I often passed the night in my boat on the ill-reputed rivers of Siam without any other cover, even without the netting, and experienced not the slightest inconvenience. The 'buzzing,' at other times so great a disturber of sleep, becomes a harmless tune, and, in the feeling of security, a real cradle-song. In the chase, moistening the beard and hands protects the hunter against flies for at least twelve hours, even in spite of the largely increased transpiration due to the climate. Especially interesting in its action on that plague of all tropical countries, the countless ants. Before the windows and surrounding the whole house where I lived at Albay, on Luzon, was fastened a board six inches in width, on which long caravans of ants were constantly moving in all directions, making it appear an almost uniformly black surface. A track of the powder, several inches in width, strewed across the board, or some tincture sprinkled over it, proved an insurmountable barrier to these processions. The first who halted before it were pushed on by the crowds behind them; but, immediately on passing over showed symptoms of narcosis, and died in a minute or two, and within a short time the rest left the house altogether."

THE SIAMESE ROYAL FAMILY.—The King of Siam has published an official list, with the names of all his children, the dates of their birth, and of the dates of those deceased. The whole number is 81, of whom the eldest was born in 1823, the youngest in 1868. Sixty-six are now living. The late second King had 63 children, of whom 30 are now living.

THE JAPANESE TROUPE.—Last week the wife of Hamai Kari Sadakichi, chief of the troupe now performing at the Lyceum Theatre, presented her lord and master with a little girl. This, it is said, is the first child of pure Japanese blood ever born out of Japan.

HAMBURG, June 2.

A petition has been presented to the German Parliament by Herr A. Bernstein, praying that a national expedition be sent to Celebes or some other favourable position in the Far East to make scientific observations of the total eclipse of the sun that will take place on the 18th of August. Count von Bismark expressed himself in favour of the petition, and promised to lay it before the Federal Council. That Assembly, however, declined recommending its adoption by the Parliament, and proposed to leave it to the decision of the separate Governments. Notwithstanding this, the subject was brought forward for general debate in Parliament, and created a long discussion. The Federal Commissioner, Herr von Delbruck, objected to making it a national undertaking, on the ground of the expense, and there being no funds available for the purpose, or, as he put it, "the Federal Constitution contains no clause granting powers and money to observe eclipses of the sun." The amount mentioned in the petition (6,000 dollars) would moreover be very inadequate, for the German Astronomical Society had also sent in a petition, and their estimate of the expense was 16,000 dollars, to which must be added at least 10,000 more for travelling expenses, and the President (Count Bismark) even made it 30,000 dollars, even without employing a German ship of war, as proposed. On the division that ensued the House agreed to the proposal by all against seven votes. It is understood that the expedition will consist of eight observers, representing the different branches of science, and including a photographer with the needful apparatus. Madras is fixed on as the station at which the observatory is to be established, whilst the Austrian scientific expedition will have its head quarters at Aden.

Dr. A. Petermann, of Gotha, who carried off the founder's gold medal of the Royal Geographical Society this year, and which he well deserves for his indefatigable efforts in the cause of geography, has fitted out at his own responsibility an expedition on a small scale to try and reach the North Pole this summer. It consists of a small sailing brig of only eighty tons—not 800 tons, as I have seen stated in a English paper—built in Norway, strengthened and fitted out at Bergen, in that country, that sailed on the 23rd May. The vessel has been named the Germania, and is commanded by one Karl Koldewey, a Hanoverian, who has performed several voyages to Hammerfest and Archangel as chief mate of a Bremen vessel, and as such has been a good deal in the ice. His second in command is named Hildebrandt, the son of a clergyman near Bremen, who has also served as chief mate; the rest of the crew are Germans, accustomed to the northern whale fishery, and two Norwegians from Tromsoe, who have wintered at Spitzbergen, and are acquainted with the Esquimaux language, thirteen men all hands told—an ominous number—whilst the expedition is called the "German North Pole Expedition of 1868." The expenses are calculated to amount to 15,000 dollars (about £2,000), and Dr. Petermann invites the public in Germany to support him by contributions, which are flowing in very freely, the King of Prussia heading the list with the munificent gift of 5,000 dollars out of his Privy Purse. According to the latest list published, about 10,000 dollars had been collected. From a private letter received a few days ago by your correspondent from Dr. Petermann, he announces his intention of visiting this city in the course of this week, when he will probably convene a public meeting and address them on behalf of his spirited undertaking.

But the expedition will be exposed to a serious competition in fighting its way to the North Pole, by another one fitting out by the Swedish Government in the port of Carlscrona, the King having granted the use of the screw steamer Sofia, one of the strongly built so-called winter post-office packets, made to withstand any amount of knocking about in the ice. The main object of the Swedish expedition is to lay down a base line and measure a degree of longitude on the island of Spitzbergen, after which they will proceed north and endeavour to reach the Pole. But Dr. Petermann's Germania, though only a sailing vessel, has a good start, as the Sofia cannot sail before the end of this month, and will be detained at Spitzbergen till the end of August, though I must not omit to add that the Swedes have taken all that into consideration, and have purposely made that arrangement, their experience teaching them that it is just during the autumnal months of September, October, and November that the Arctic Sea is most free from ice. The steamer will be manned by sailors of the Royal Navy, and the command given to a naval officer, but the expense of the expedition will be borne partly by private contributions, and partly by the Academy of Sciences at Stockholm, the only conditions required by the Government being to insure the vessel for her real value of 108,000 Swedish rix dollars (about £6,500), and deposit the policy of insurance with the head of the Post-office department; and, secondly, to distribute the scientific collections brought home between the museums of Stockholm and Gottenburg.

Having been kindly permitted to peruse the code of instructions drawn up by Dr. Petermann for the guidance of Captain Koldewey, I am enabled to add that the greatest discovery of the voyage is to be called after Konig Wilhelms; that every means are to be taken to bring home a couple of Esquimaux (a man and a woman, if possible), as the population is supposed to be more numerous the further one proceeds to the north; that in case of being baffled in their endeavours to pierce the barrier of ice, they are to search for a country to the east of Spitzbergen, said to have been seen in 1707 by some Dutch whalers, and called by them "Gilles Land;" but that their first object is to make the east coast of Greenland in the latitude of between 74½ and 75 degrees, and visit the observatory erected on Pendulum Island by General Sabine (which island the learned doctor has now re-christened "Sabine Island"), from whence they are to follow the main coast line of Greenland (but avoiding bays and fiords), and discover if possible its true configuration within the Arctic circle.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS ASSOCIATION.

We have already alluded to the letter addressed by the Chairman of the Straits Settlements Association to the Duke of Buckingham, expressing the apprehensions aroused in the minds of all persons interested in those places by the speech in which Governor Sir H. Ord alluded to the possibility of further taxation being imposed. This letter, which was dated the 22nd April, contained an able exposition of the past and present condition of the trade of the Straits Settlements, and also embodied an overwhelming and quite unanswerable mass of evidence to show the impolicy of any course that would in any way alter their character as free ports. This letter has elicited the following reply from the Colonial Secretary, which is, in our opinion, far too brief to be satisfactory.

"Downing-street, 30th May, 1868.

"SIR,—I am directed by the Duke of Buckingham and Chandos to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 22nd April, calling attention to that part of Sir H. Ord's speech to his council in December last, which had reference to duties on exports and imports and reviewing the financial condition of the colony and the estimates of revenue and expenditure for the present year.

"I am to state in reply that his Grace entirely concurs with you in the propriety of an economical expenditure of the revenues of the Settlements. I am to point out to you with reference to the amount included in the estimates for the Government-house, and which was $100,000 and not $150,000, that the resolution appropriating the sum to that object was carried unanimously in the Legislative Council, having been moved and seconded by two of the unofficial members to whose opinion on questions of expenditure Her Majesty's Government are always disposed to attach much weight.

"In conclusion, I am to state that Her Majesty's Government have no intention of instructing the Governor to recommend to his council the imposition of import duties.

"I am, Sir, your obedient servant,
(Signed) "T. FRED. ELLIOT.

"The Chairman of the Straits Settlements Association."

TRIAL TRIP OF THE "TRAVANCORE."

The latest addition to the splendid fleet of steamships owned by the Peninsular and Oriental Company—viz., the Travancore, a vessel built and engined by Mr. John Key, of Kirkcaldy—was taken out for a trial on Wednesday, the 10th inst. She left the Southampton Docks at 11.30 A.M., proceeding direct to Stokes Bay, where one run was made on the measured mile, and then steamed round the Isle of Wight, returning into Southampton water at six o'clock, and the London portion of the visitors left by the 7.15 P.M. train. The Travancore is a screw steamer of 400-horse power nominal (indicated power during the run, 1,405); her gross tonnage being 1,899¼, and registered ditto, 1,185; length, 281ft. 6in.; breadth of beam, 35ft. 5in.; and depth of hold, 27ft. 8in. Her true mean speed when on the measured mile, with a strong southerly wind blowing, was 12·245 knots; steam, 24lb.; vacuum, 22in.; revolutions of engines, 59. She had 754 tons weight of coals, water, and stores on board, and her draught was 16ft. 6in. forward and 18ft. 2in. aft, the mean being 17ft. 4in. There was a large party of ladies and gentlemen on board, including Captain Cuming, R.N., Admiralty Superintendent at Southampton; Mr. Frank T. Scudamore, one of the secretaries of the Post-office; Mr. Chetwynd, Accountant-general of the Post-office; Mr. W. Page, Mr. Edmund Yates, Mr. Bidwell, Mr. Boucher, and Mr. Joyce, of the Post-office; Mr. Willis, Mr. Cockraft, and Mr. Anderson, of the Admiralty; Colonel Macpherson, late Acting Governor of the Straits Settlements; Mr. D. Campbell, secretary of the African Steampacket Company; Mr. T. M. Mackay, of Leadenhall-street; Mr. Key, builder of the ship; Mr. P. Hadow (the recently-elected chairman), Mr. Thornton, C.B., Mr. L'Estrange, Mr. James Allan, and Mr. Henry Bayly, directors of the Peninsular and Oriental Company; Captain Bain, Mr. A. M. Bethune, Captain Black, Mr. A. Lamb, Captain Engledue, and other officials of the company. During the run home the party on board partook of a sumptuous dejeuner, under the presidency of Mr. Hadow, who availed himself of the opportunity to propose the health of the builder of the Travancore, and expressed the satisfaction which the performances of the vessel had given to the directors and others. The toast having been responded to by Mr. Key, Mr. Frank Scudamore proposed "Success to the Peninsular and Oriental Company," which, he said, really meant success to the commercial and maritime interests of the nation, for anything which would injure so important an arm of the great postal service of England must exercise a corresponding influence injurious and detrimental to the whole commerce of the country. The Travancore, which is commanded by Captain R. Methven, one of the oldest officers in the service, left on the 13th with the outward India, China, and Australian mails, and on her return from this voyage she will be despatched to the other side of the Isthmus of Suez for service on those stations. The Magdala is expected to be ready for sea in about six months, and the Hindostan in about thirteen months.

THE HONG KONG GARRISON.

The Pall Mall Gazette, in drawing attention to certain points in the Army Estimates that seem to demand some explanation, dwells on the anomalous method in which the Hong Kong corps is treated, the suppression of the European force of 676 men, and the substitution of an Indian regiment of 880 men being actually made to appear as a decrease in the number of troops employed! The manner in which this is done will be understood by a perusal of the subjoined extract; we will merely remark here, that the annual cost of the new force is set down in the estimates at £30,000:—

The first point to which we desire to draw attention is the increase in the strength of our army. We are aware that this increase is apparently only an increase of 285 men; but it is really a much more serious one. If our readers will take the trouble of referring to the fourteenth page of the estimates, they will find a comparison—which is accurate with one exception—between the strength of the army last year and this. (Here follows an abstract of the tables, showing an apparent net decrease of 695 men.) It will be seen at once that the whole, or almost the whole, of this decrease is in the colonial corps, and if our readers will examine the estimates for themselves, they will find that the decrease in the colonial corps is more than accounted for by the suppression of the Hong Kong corps, which a year ago consisted, it was estimated, of 676 men. But, in reality, this Hong Kong corps never existed at all except in the War-office estimates. It never even found its way into the official organ of the Secretary of State, the monthly Army List. Its abandonment, therefore, does not strike a single man off the effective strength of the army, though it diminishes the bold front of the army estimates by 676 men. But though the Hong Kong corps has been given up, a kindred force has been created under the name of a regiment of native Indian troops for service in China. This regiment consists of 880 men, and, for some reason unknown, it does not appear among the rest of our forces on the 14th page of the estimates. It stands, however, in its full strength on the second and third pages, where it converts the apparent decrease of 595 men on the British establishment to a real increase of 285 men; and it appears again in a very tangible form on page thirty, where it represents a charge of £30,000 a year. As, however, credit is taken for the 676 men of the Hong Kong corps, which is was estimated did exist last year, but which really never existed at all, it follows that the real increase in the strength of the army is an increase not of 285, but of 285 plus 676, or 961 men. It is clear that, if our army is not strong enough for the duties it has to perform, we must submit to an increase in its establishment. If, for instance, there are not troops enough at home for the real necessities of Great Britain and Ireland, we must add to our army. But in that case the increase should be asked for and granted on its real merits, and should not be effected by the pretence of raising Indian troops for the purpose of relieving European troops from a particularly unhealthy duty.

The Duke of Cambridge, in his evidence before the committee appointed to inquire into the duties of the army in India and the colonies, stated exactly what should have been done. His Royal Highness, in reply to the 2,969th question, said:—"It is intended at this moment to raise a native regiment, or to arrange in some way for a native regiment to be at Hong Kong, in addition to the European troops already quartered there. But even in that case the general aggregate of the European troops of the army is to be reduced to the extent of the new regiment of natives which is now going to be sent to Hong Kong." That is the Duke of Cambridge's statement in May, 1867, and we venture to say that it is in exact accordance with the views of those who desire, like ourselves, the employment of native Indian troops in certain colonies. It was never proposed to add to the British troops in a colony a supplementary force of Indians; it was conceived that by the employment of Indians we should be able to withdraw a certain portion of the British force from the colony, and thus, in some measure, relieve the army of one of the most unhealthy duties it has to perform. It is fair to add that the Duke's own opinion is a very different one. He has never concealed his dislike to the substitution of Indian for European troops, and he has openly stated that his dislike to the scheme is partly founded on a belief that its adoption would infallibly lead to a mischievous reduction in the strength of the British army. But the Duke's opinions show in the most forcible way what was the original intention of those who devised this regiment of native Indian troops; in the Duke's own words, "the general aggregate of the European troops of the army is to be reduced to the extent of the new regiment of natives." So far as we know, no new employment for the army has arisen since his Royal Highness made that statement. A regiment of 880 native Indian troops has been raised at a cost of £30,000 a year for service in Hong Kong, but the total reduction of the strength of the infantry (and it is infantry work which these Indians are to do) is a reduction of 113 men. Surely such a state of things demands, at any rate, explanation.

THE BRINDISI ROUTE.

The Florence correspondent of The Times says:—"The success of the Mont Cenis Railway is likely to revive the agitation for the passage of the Indian mails through Italy. The advantage of that route is more than ever obvious now that Susa can be reached from London in thirty-six hours. At this time of year it seems that the Italian boats go from Alexandria to Brindisi in seventy-two hours. I know of a recent case of this being done. Persons who came by that boat give an excellent account of the service on the line from Brindisi to Bologna. On the other hand, the arrangements at Brindisi are not all that could be desired. A good hotel is wanted, accommodation for repairing steamers, a prolongation of the railway to the port. It is urged that neither the company nor the Government is rich, or at present prosperous; and I have heard it hinted that if the British Government would undertake to send the mails by that route the required improvements would soon be made. This is reversing the natural order of things; when the route is shown to be preferable to any other it is quite sure to be availed of. The transfer of the Peninsular and Oriental Company's starting place from Marseilles to Brindisi was foreseen and stipulated in the last contract with our Government. The service being well done the fact of there being only a single line through Italy would not suffice to prevent its being preferred when the route offers such a great advantage as sixty or seventy hours' acceleration, that time being all deducted from the sea passage which so many dread. It is a geographical necessity that our communications with India should be through Italy, and neither the Marseilles interest nor the French railway interest, nor any of the various pressures, direct or indirect, brought to bear against it can possibly suffice long to retard the change. There has been talk lately of a project for sending the India mails via Ostend and Germany, over the Brenner Pass, so as to set at naught the opposition offered in France to an alteration which would be a great benefit, not only to Great Britain as the mistress of India, but to all those numerous persons in Europe and America who trade or correspond with the East. Brindisi must make its way and become the port of embarkation for letters, passengers, and such costly articles of merchandise as will bear the expense of an overland journey. Meanwhile we hear of the approaching establishment there of a telegraphic agency which will undertake to forward new and private despatches in all directions."

In a subsequent letter the same correspondent adds:—"Between London and Bologna, the line by way of France (of which the Fell railway forms a short but most important section) will not be unopposed. Germany steps forward as a competitor, offering a direct and rapid train, without change of carriages, from Ostend to Bologna. The route is by Brussels, Verviers, Cologne, Bruchsal, Ulm, Kufstein, over the Brenner, to Verona and Padua, to which last place the time occupied is to be thirty-four hours, from Padua to Brindisi twenty-two, altogether fifty-six, or in round numbers, and allowing amply for stoppages, within sixty hours. A line of railway from Verona to Modena would further shorten this route, but there seems little chance of that being made at present, the Italian Government declining to increase its guarantees. As it is, however, the Germans hope they may be able to compete successfully with the line by France. If they do so, it will be mainly in consequence of the indisposition of the French authorities to facilitate the traffic over their territory between England and India when the point of exit from France shall be the Mont Cenis instead of Marseilles. The unwillingness shown to accelerate the communication with Italy has brought many persons to think that it would be desirable to avoid France altogether, and the Germans naturally desire no better than to despoil her, to their own profit, of any advantage she now derives from the traffic of England and North Europe with Italy and the East. The Germans, like ourselves, complain bitterly of the twelve hours' detention their letters undergo in Paris for want of a morning mail to St. Michel. I am informed, and there appears no reason to doubt the statement, that the letters from England and Germany destined for Marseilles, and which reach Paris in the morning, are immediately forwarded, while those for Italy are, we know, laid by until night. This is manifestly unfair to the Italian mercantile interest, to say nothing of the general detriment to the public. The French authorities may rely upon it they are accumulating a great store of ill-will towards themselves by their conduct in this affair. It is in opposition to the spirit of the age thus to impede international communications for the sake of petty local interests. It would not be surprising if some difficulties were yet to be made about establishing correspondence of French trains with the Fell railway."

ALLEGED FLOGGING OF A MERCHANT CAPTAIN.

A very extraordinary report has been circulated in the Jerusalem to the effect that Capt. Jones, of the steamer Far East (under charter to Government as a troop-ship in Abyssinia), had been flogged by order of the Provost Marshal for disobedience of orders. Such a statement was deemed altogether untrue, but the friends of Capt. Jones took the trouble of making inquiries on the subject, and the result was a distinct repudiation of the whole thing. The following are copies of the certificates on the subject which entirely acquit Capt. Jones. The writers of the statement, Mr. Cox, and his brother, who propagated the story in England, will no doubt be made to satisfy Capt. Jones on his arrival in England:—

NOTICE.

It appears that a report has been in circulation to the effect that Captain Jones, of the Far East, underwent punishment on shore for some offence said to have been committed by him. This report is utterly without foundation, is devoid of truth, and is calumnious.

DEATH OF RAJAH BROOKE.

Sir James Brooke, K.C.B., late Rajah of Sarawak, died on the 11th instant at Barrator, his seat in Devonshire. Probably no Englishman in the present century has had a more varied and eventful career, and in no part of the world were his achievements more appreciated than in China and the Straits. Sir James sprang from a family long seated in the county of Somerset, and was born in 1803. He received his education at the Norwich Grammar School, and afterwards entered the Indian army. After some active service, during which he was seriously wounded in Burmah, he abandoned a military career, and, purchasing a yacht, sailed for Sarawak, in Borneo, in 1838, with the intention of endeavouring to put an end to piracy in the Eastern Archipelago. Having ingratiated himself with the Sultan of Borneo, he was raised to a high post in the Government, and commenced with great vigour the work of civilisation. His measures for the suppression of piracy were, however, so severe as to cause considerable outcry in England; his conduct was discussed in Parliament with much acrimony on both sides, and the question brought under the attention of the Government by Mr. Hume. Eventually Sir James succeeded in completely clearing himself from the imputations which had been cast upon him. On his return to England he became the hero of the hour, and, on being created an honorary D.C.L. at Oxford, received in the Sheldonian Theatre quite an ovation. Not long after, when the isle of Labuan was purchased by the British Government, he was selected as Governor, with a salary of £2,000 a year. But his strange and eventful public career was not destined to end here. After the expiration of his government at Labuan, having remained in the service of the Sultan of Borneo as Rajah of Sarawak, he adopted a policy which gave great offence to the Chinese, who destroyed his property, and whose vengeance nearly cost him his life. Sir James, however, was not the man to submit to humiliation at their hands. Having collected a small force, he reduced his enemies to the most desperate straits, put to death hundreds of them, and desolated their settlements. When he again returned to England it was with the especial object of persuading the British Government to take Sarawak under its protection. He pointed out the importance of the position, the commercial advantages which might be expected from it, and the probability that it would otherwise become a possession of the Dutch; but Lord Derby, then Prime Minister, failed to feel the cogency of these arguments, and declined to take action in the matter. Whether the motives which prompted Rajah Brooke in his advocacy of this scheme were or were not disinterested was at the time much questioned, but those who knew anything of his personal character could never doubt the purity of his motives. The immediate cause of death was another stroke of paralysis, a seizure from which the Rajah had already suffered more than once.

Monetary and Commercial.

The half-yearly meeting of the P. and O. Company was held on the 4th instant, P. D. Hadow, Esq., in the chair. The proceedings were comparatively uninteresting, for the directors' report was of such a satisfactory nature that the only thing to be done was to approve it and pass a vote of thanks for the able management that had produced so favourable a result. There was, of course, a handsome tribute to the memory of Mr. Anderson, and beyond this the only noticeable feature was an allusion to the impending change in the French mail service, with regard to which the chairman stated that when the fortnightly service of the Messageries commenced, arrangements would probably be made to prevent the two services clashing one with another. Extracts which embodied the principal features of the report were given in our last issue.

The decision of the Lords Justices of Appeal in the case of Captain Felix Jones, a depositor in the Commercial Bank (that he is not entitled to rank as a creditor, inasmuch as there was no proof that he had accepted the new bank as his debtor in place of the old one) is of great importance, and will probably be appealed to the House of Lords. This will open the door to other actions of a similar nature, which in the end will swallow up a large amount in legal proceedings, and thus impoverish the estate, and diminish its yield to the creditors. It cannot be expected that the latter will now show any further leniency, but will insist on the calling up of the remaining £15 per share from the shareholders forthwith. The dividend of over 2s. 6d., which has been waiting some time to be distributed, will now be further delayed, and the prospects of the creditors ultimately receiving even 15s. in the pound are much injured by these proceedings.

At a general meeting of the shareholders of the Suez Canal Company, lately held in Paris, M. de Lesseps announced, in the midst of unanimous applause, the termination of the work for the 1st of October of next year. In stating the position of the works and the resources available, he mentioned that there was a sum of fifty-eight millions in hand, and that a loan of 100

The report of the Ceylon Company (Limited), to be presented on the 16th inst., recommends a dividend at the rate of 8 per cent. per annum, which will leave £4,401 to be carried forward.

The Messageries Imperiales Company propose to pay a dividend for the past year at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum.

The steamer Travancore takes £49,454 in specie for the East, of which £25,615 is for China, £22,200 for India, and £1,539 for Point de Galle.

The amount of bullion by the P. and O. Company's steamer Poonah, from Southampton on the 13th inst., was in gold, to Galle £1,539, to Bombay £1,400, to Madras £10,000; in silver, to Bombay £10,900, to Hong Kong £24,635, to Foochow £980. Total in gold £12,939, in silver £36,515.

BOARD OF TRADE RETURNS.

The Board of Trade returns for the month and four months ending 30th April last have been issued. The exports again show a falling off in value, the total for the four months this year being £55,998,068, against £56,186,529 in the same period last year, and £62,357,579 in that of 1866. The decrease is in the following articles: apparel, beer and ale, cotton manufactures—in value only, the quantity showing a large increase—haberdashery, hardware, linen yarn and manufactures, machinery, and woollen manufactures. On the other hand, iron and steel and woollen yarn are in excess of the amount last year.

Among the imports raw cotton has largely augmented, the increase being chiefly from the United States; while wool exhibits a diminution of nearly 20 per cent. The articles subject to duty and entered for consumption, in which the principal changes are apparent, are the following: wheat, an increase of about 25 per cent., mainly from the United States; tea, an increase of 30 per cent.; and wine, of 11 per cent. The computed real value of the principal articles imported, for the three months ending 31st March last, was £46,409,094, against £44,326,045 in the first quarter of 1867, and £49,481,688 in the same period of 1866.

We annex a summary of those figures which relate to our Import and Export trade with China and other countries in the Far East.

ARTICLES OF IMPORT.

TEA.

The following is from Messrs. James Steains and Co.'s report :—

Dulness, with a limited extent of business, has been the characteristic of the tea market during the past month, a period broken by those national holidays which always interfere with trade. Nevertheless, prices of Congou have been firmly maintained, and as exporters cannot hold off any longer, we look for yet higher rates for good common up to medium qualities, as the large home and foreign consumption still runs largely on these sorts, whilst the quantity afloat of all kinds of Congous is not more than 4,000,000 lbs. to meet a delivery of nearly 36,000,000 before the new crop comes to hand, and even then it will not consist of common descriptions, so that the drain upon these must continue far on to the end of the year.

Home consumption for London from 1st January to 31st May, 1868 ..	34,340,730	29.668,000
Export do. do.	10.499.224	12,623.000
Sent coastwise do.	14,146,046	15,453,000
Total Deliveries	58,986,000	57,744,000

Black.—Congou: Dust and broken-leaf sorts are again dearer, say 10½d. to 1s. Common to fair red leaf must be quoted 1s. 3½d. to 1s. 4d. Common black leaf cannot be bought under 1s. 3¾d., fair sweet quality under 1s. 4½d. to 1s. 4½d., and at these prices about 12,000 chests have been taken for export during the past fortnight; medium qualities up to 1s. 6d. remain inactive; for all better kinds there is very little inquiry.

Souchongs as last quoted. Oolongs and Scented Teas in only moderate request.

Green.—A fair inquiry exists for medium kinds, but finer sorts are not much wanted.

Japan.—A few transactions have taken place in uncoloured at 1s. 3d. to 1s. 3½d.

SILK.

The market has improved during the past week, and much inquiry has existed, which in the last two or three days has resulted in a fair business at full prices. Preference is given to good and fine silk, especially Japans, for which there is a great demand, but owing to their scarcity business in such is limited. The accounts of the European crops begin to be unanimous as to their not being equal to last year.

COTTON.—In the London market only scanty sales have been effected on the spot, export orders being few, and limited to lower prices than holders are generally inclined to accept, but a decline of about ½d. must be quoted. For arrival, however, there has been more disposition to sell, especially distant shipments, and prices have gradually receded to the extent of ¼d. to ⅜d. per lb. The quotations are:—On the spot—Tinnivelly, fair to good fair, 8¾d. to 9¼d.; Western, fair to good fair, 8¼d. to 9¼d.; Coconada, middling fair, 8¾d. For arrival—Tinnivelly, 8½d. to 9d., February to April sailing, guaranteed good fair; Western, 8¾d., ship named, guaranteed fair; Broach, 8¼d., ship named, guaranteed fair; Oomrawuttee, 8¼d. to 9d., ship named and March-April sailing, guaranteed fair; Dhollera, 8½d. to 9d., ship named and April to February sailing, guaranteed fair new; Bengal, 7d. to 7 15-16d., May to February sailing, guaranteed fair new; Coconada, 7½d., ship named, guaranteed fair red. In the Liverpool market there is still great depression; holders continue to press their stocks upon the market, and prices show a general decline of ¼d. per lb The quotations are:—American, 9¾d. to 13d.; Egyptian, 10¼d. to 16d.; Surats, 7¾d. to 10¼d.

COFFEE.—The downward tendency of prices continues unchecked, and the public sales have again been marked by considerable languor. Plantation Ceylon is offered freely and has sold irregularly, a further decline being established on grey kinds, while the little variation which has taken place in coloury sorts has been in buyers' favour. Since the date of our last report some business was done in Native privately at the reduction previously noted, but holders having since rather forced sales a further fall of 1s. to 2s. per cwt. has occurred. The quotations for Plantation are:—Triage, 29s. to 45s.; gray ordinary to fine ordinary, 52s. 6d. to 62d.; low middling to middling bold, 64s. 6d. to 69s.; coloury, low middling to middling even, 70s. to 77s.; good and fine middling, 77s. to 83s.; fine bold, 84s. 6d. to 89s.; pea-berry, 75s. to 90s. 6d. For Native the following are the current rates:—Small, 40s. to 44s.; ordinary, 45s. to 46s. 6d.; good ordinary, 47s. to 47s. 6d.; real good ordinary, 48s. to 48s. 6d.; fine ordinary, 49s. to 49s. 6d.; bold, 50s. 6d. to 53s.; pea-berry, 53s. 6d. to 54s. 6d. The supplies of East India descriptions, especially of good qualities, have been small, and the only sales to report are of 400 bags Java at 64s. to 65s., and 232 bags ordinary black Manila at 8s. The stock of coffee in the United Kingdom on the 1st inst. was 18,250 tons, against 12,500 tons last year, and 13,600 tons at the same period of 1866. The amount on hand in the five leading ports of the Continent was 75,560 tons, against 57,310 tons in 1867, and 56,010 tons in the preceding year. The monthly sale of the Dutch Trading Company is announced for the 24th inst., and will comprise 92,000 bags.

COIR GOODS.—A good supply of yarn has been brought forward at the auctions, and although the competition has been irregular, the principal portion has been taken. Very little fibre has been offered. Of Ceylon yarn 60 tons chiefly sold, good £42 10s. to £43, middling to good middling £34 5s. to £41, low middling £30 to £33, common to good common, £27 15s. to £29 5s.

CAMPHOR.—We have no business to report in Japan. Of China, 576 boxes, ex Ajax, have been sold at a slight decline on previous rates—viz., good, £6 5s. to £6 7s. 6d.; grayish, £6 2s. 6d. to £6 5s. per cwt.

COCOA NUT OIL.—Since our last report the market has been steady, and some sales of Ceylon from second hands have been made at £50 10s. to £51; 90 casks Cochin sold by auction, fair at £53; two lots, £53 5s.; low middling, £52; and 15 casks from Penang at £50 15s. to £51 10s.

GAMBIER.—Prices have given way 3d. per cwt., about 2,000 bales having changed hands privately at 17s. 6d., and 500 bales have been taken for export at 18s. In public sale 1,146 bales met no biddings, and were all bought in at 17s. 9d. to 18s., but 80 bales since sold at 17s. 9d.

MANILA HEMP.—The demand continues limited at previous rates; the private sales do not exceed 500 bales, chiefly barely fair to fair roping at £46 to £47, and common £42 10s.; in public sale of 1,950 bales only 290 bales found buyers; ordinary brown £40 to £40 15s.; first class sea damaged barely fair £44 10s. to £45 15s.; the remainder, sound, being bought in at £46.

PEPPER.—Black: The market has been well supplied with Penang, 5,013 bags having been offered at auction, of which nearly 4,000 bags have been disposed of at the late lowest quotations; middling to fair 2⅞d. to 3d.; 699 bags middling Singapore were sold at 3¼d. to 3⅜d.; and about 1,000 bags of both kinds have been taken privately at fully these rates. White:

293 bags Singapore sold at a decline of nearly ½d. [per lb.; middling to good 5d. to 5¼d.

RICE.—Prices of most kinds are lower, and it is difficult to find buyers for the continual fresh arrivals. The sales have been small—viz., 2,000 bags Ballam at 8s. to 9s. 3d., 2,600 bags Dacca at 10s. 3d., and 300 tons of the latter to arrive, at 9s. 3d. to 9s. 6d. ex ship, also a floating cargo of 600 tons Bassein at 10s. 6d. for the Continent, or United Kingdom landed. At public sale 380 bags good Dacca were bought in at 11s. 6d.; of 2,161 bags, Ballam, &c., only a small part was sold at 9s., Moonghy, 9s. 1½d.; 359 bags Madras and 7,944 bags Saigon were withdrawn, but of the latter about 5,000 bags have since been taken at 10s. 9d.

SUGAR.—The trade have shown a general indisposition to buy, and a considerable feeling of depression has been prevalent. There is a useful selection on offer, which has failed to attract attention, and only a small business has been done, although holders have evinced a willingness to promote sales. Quotations are 6d. to 1s. per cwt. lower. In the public sales of Manila, 3,333 bags Muscovade were withdrawn, but have been sold since, good Taal at 27s. 6d., good Cebu at 28s. 3d., and 100 bags superior at 29s. 3d. The business reported on the spot by private contract has been confined to:—11,000 bags Muscovade Manila, low to good Taal at 27s. to 27s. 3d., fair to good Cebu at 27s. 6d. to 28s. 3d.

SPICES.—Cinnamon: Of 152 bales Ceylon, mostly of common quality, only part was sold, third to first quality, 1s. 8d. to 2s. 4d. Cloves: 6 cases fair Penang brought 9¾d.; 63 bags Zanzibar were bought in at 3¾d. to 3¾d. Mace: 10 cases were nearly all withdrawn, one lot good pale only selling at 2s. 10d. 17 cases Nutmegs were realised at previous rates, small 1s., middling to good middling 1s. 5d. to 1s. 9d., bold 3s. 8d.

SAPANWOOD.—At the public sales 11 tons Siam were bought in at £15, and of 38 tons Ceylon, 3 tons only sold at £11 per ton.

TIN.—There is little change to report in the market. The sales of Straits since our last report have been limited at unaltered rates. The current quotations for fine Straits are £91 10s. to £92 on the spot and £92 to £93 for arrival. The latest advices from Holland quote Banca 54½ guilders, and the price here remains the same, viz., £94. The Dutch Trading Company have given notice that for the 40,489 slabs Banca left unsold at the half-yearly auction in March, or for quantities of not less than 2,500 slabs, they will accept tenders on the 18th instant at not less than 55 guilders, being the bought in price in March.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS. — Invalids distracted by indigestion and discouraged in their search for its remedy should make trial of this never failing medicine. A lady, long a martyr to dyspeptic tortures, writes that Holloway's Pills made her feel as if a burden had been taken off her; her spirits, formerly low, have greatly improved, her capricious appetite has given place to healthy hunger, her dull sick headache has departed, and gradually so marvellous a change has been effected that she is altogether a "new creature," and again fit for her duties. These Pills may be administered with safety to the most delicate, they never act harshly, nor do they ever induce weakness; they rightly direct deranged and control excessive action

ARRANGEMENTS FOR 1868.

The Proprietor has made arrangements to run six couriers per month in May and June, in the event of delay in the transmission of telegrams by the Russian Telegraph Service. It may not be generally known that the delays during the last season were occasioned by the overflowing of the Rivers Irtisch, Obi, and Yenessei; upwards of 800 versts of Telegraph Line were swept away from time to time. As such inundations occur only once or twice in a century, the Proprietor hopes that the precaution he has taken will prove unnecessary. During the latter two months of last season the line worked very well, and Telegrams were delivered to and from Europe in 18 days; the average time being as follows:—

London and Kiachta by Telegraph	2 days.
Kiachta and Tientsin by Courier	12 „
Tientsin and Shanghai by Steamer	4 „
Total	18 days.

A courier having been killed by a fall from his horse last year, the telegram bag was lost, and has not yet been recovered. In order to prevent a recurrence of the inconvenience, it is the intention of the Proprietor to open all telegrams addressed to his care, and forward duplicates by the subsequent courier to their respective addresses, unless he be specially notified to the contrary. The number of stations in Mongolia will be doubled this year. Contracts have been made to deliver telegrams between Kiachta and Tientsin in twelve days; the non-fulfilment of the contracts as to time entails a penalty upon the contractors of from 1 to 3 taels per hour (6s. to 18s.), thus giving a guarantee that delay will not occur.

After the first two months of the season, which are the most severe as regards the climate, the contractors will reduce their contract time to ten days.

Summary of News from the Far East.

JAPAN.

OSAKA AND HIOGO.

The Japan Times Overland Mail, of May 2, announces that the Mikado has left Kioto and is now in Osaka. His leaving Kioto is in itself a revolution, and we may well believe the report which has reached us that he has offered to the Ministers to throw open the whole of Japan to foreign trade and travel. On the 18th April the Mikado passed in review the European men-of-war lying there—a small steamer, the Najasaki, being put in requisition as his yacht. On the following day one of his Imperial Majesty's uncles and a suite of kuges and Daimios visited the Dupleix. Everything passed off without accident in the happiest manner.

A correspondent at Hiogo states that owing to the irregularity of the Pacific mail steamers there is a strong desire that the P. and O. Company should start a branch service through the Inland sea (between Yokohama and Shanghai, calling at Hiogo and Nagasaki). A fair supply of tea and silk was offering at reasonable rates. Rice and copper cash were also being exported; the chief foreign goods in demand were black cloth, blankets, and rugs, rifles and ammunition.

From Osaka we have no commercial news of any great importance. Everything is quiet, and the symptoms of a revival of trade are on the increase. The Mikado's authority seems to be quietly acknowledged, and if civil war break out again it will be in the North. Subjoined is the ultimatum of his Imperial Majesty to Stotsbashi; opinion is divided as to whether these hard terms will be accepted by the fallen chief and his northern friends, but the balance of probability appears to us to incline to the affirmative. Stotsbashi's policy throughout this long and delicate negotiation has been that of complete and self-denying submission—not to the southern Daimios, but to the Mikado—and this policy he is hardly likely now to change. Perseverance in it is his only chance of an ultimate return to office; for it is not likely to be forgotten that, rather than involve the country in the horrors of a long civil war, he gave up all—place, dignity, wealth and power. His talents are indubitably great, and he possesses in so eminent a degree the friendship and confidence of the Foreign Ministers, that he would be a valuable councillor to the Mikado, while really no good end is to be served by his destruction. It should be noted that Yoshi-Hisa is really the personal name of the late Shiogoon, Stotsbashi being merely the title of the office he previously held. He has left Yedo, but whether to return, in obedience to this mandate, to his father's castle, or to gather strength elsewhere to resist the southern party, is as yet unknown. All that can be said is that resistance at this moment is less likely to be successful than if it had been attempted six weeks ago, and that, considering all things, the probabilities are greatly in favour of his acceptance of the Mikado's terms.

[TRANSLATION.]

"The conduct of Tokugawa Yoshi-Hisa having proceeded to such an extreme as to be properly called an insult to the whole empire, and having caused the deepest pain to the mind of the Emperor, both sea and land forces were sent to punish him. Hearing, however, that he is sincerely penitent, and lives in retirement, the excess of the Imperial compassion shall be exhausted, and the following commands be enjoined upon him; let him be respectfully obedient to them. A period of eleven days is granted to him in which to comply with all these orders.

"As the above period of eleven days is already a matter of great clemency, upon no account will any other request or complaint be listened to. The Emperor having established both his clemency and authority, will not allow any claims of alliance to have any influence with him. So be promptly obedient, and resort to no subterfuges.

"Article 1st.—Yoshi-Hisa having, on the 12th month of the last year and afterwards, insulted the Emperor, attacked the Imperial city, and fired upon the Imperial flag, was guilty of a most heinous crime. The army was accordingly sent out to pursue and punish him. But as he has manifested sincere contrition and obedience, has shut himself up in retirement, and begs that his crime may be pardoned: In consideration of the no small merit of his family which, since the time of his ancestors for more than two hundred years, has administered the affairs of the Government, and more especially of the accumulated meritorious services of Mito zo-Dainagon (the father of Yoshi-Hisa), for these various considerations, of which we are most profoundly sensible, we give him the following commands, which if he obeys, we will deal leniently with him, grant that the house of Tokugawa be established [i.e., not destroyed from the list of Damios], remit the capital punishment [his crimes deserve], but command him to go to the castle of Mito, and there live shut up in retirement.

"Article 2nd.—The castle [of the Shiogoon] to be vacated and delivered over to the Prince of Owari.

"Article 3rd.—All the ships of war, cannon and small arms to be delivered up; when a proper proportion shall be returned [to the head of the house of Tokuwaga, which is reduced to the rank of an ordinary Daimio].

"Article 4th.—The retainers living in the castle shall move out and go into retirement.

"Article5th.—To all those who have aided Yoshi-Hisa, although their crimes are worthy of the severest punishment, the sentence of death shall be remitted; but they are to receive such other punishment as you shall decide on. Let this be reported to the Imperial Goverment. This, however, does not include those persons who have an income of more than ten thousand kokus. The Imperial Government alone will punish such."

YOKOHAMA.

The present over due mail brings advices from Yokohama to the 3rd May. The outward mail of March 6th (the first under the new contract) was delivered on the 28th April, one day late. The New York sailed for San Francisco with the American mail on the same day. The following items of news are from the Japan Times:—

In our last we mentioned the visit to Yokohama of Ohara Sakino Gijiu. A higher officer of the Government is expected here daily, when the administration of affairs in this district will be formally, but quietly, handed over to him. No changes will be made in the subordinate offices, and only three, we are informed, in the higher departments of the local government. The foreign representatives acquiesce in the new order of things, and our quondam ally, "His Majesty the Tycoon of Japan," is abandoned to his fate. This has been strongly evidenced during the fortnight by the conduct of the American Minister with regard to the Stonewall, which arrived on the 24th instant. This powerful vessel, as our readers will remember, was sent by the American Government to the late Shiogoon last year, and had been paid for by his agents some years previously. Had she arrived three months ago the Shiogoon might have been at this moment supreme in Japan; were she handed over to him now the northern chiefs might renew the war with a good chance of success. But General Van Valkenburgh evidently considers the question of ownership to be as yet undecided. On her arrival, he ordered the Japanese flag to be hauled down and the American ensign hoisted, under which flag she is now lying in the harbour. She made a long passage, having left New York on the 28th of August last. This long delay apparently occurred chiefly while the ship was lying in intermediate ports, for her speed is undeniable; she made the run from Honolulu hither in twenty-nine days.

It is a noteworthy circumstance, by the way, that the Hawaiian Government, which takes every opportunity of cultivating friendly relations with Japan, advanced some thousand dollars for the Stonewall's expenses while in the harbour of Honolulu. But for this she might be lying there to-day.

Mr. Erasmus Gower, a civil engineer, whom the late Government engaged to report on some of their mines, and to suggest and direct improvements in their working, has just come down from the north for machinery which he had ordered, and which is now lying here. He speaks most favourably of a coal mine on which he has been at work, and there seems to be a near prospect of its rapid and profitable development. In our next we shall probably be able to give a few details regarding this highly interesting subject.

Three mails ago we reported the total loss of the Russian steamer Wolga, and the probable loss of one of her boats, which left the steamer with thirteen men in her and had not since been heard of. In her were Mr. Whittaker, assistant-engineer H.M.'s Rinaldo, and Mr. McCormick, a civilian passenger, with some coast seamen and Japanese. News has reached us of the missing boat—a Japanese having brought up information that some foreigners were on an island not very far from this. Mr. McCormick, a Portuguese named Jose, and the Manila men and Japanese are saved, but Mr. Whittaker, we regret to state, has succumbed to the hardships of the situation and is dead. H.P.M.'s Vineta went down to the island three or four days ago, but found it impossible to communicate with the shore, in consequence of severe weather and the heavy sea running. As soon as the weather moderates the men will be brought off.

REGINA v. SHORT.

Decidedly the event of the fortnight has been a trial in H.B.M. Consular Court, in which, on the information of the Municipal Dictator (Mr. Martin Dohmen), Mr. Short, a banker, was summoned to show cause why he did not abate a nuisance caused by the prosecuting witness's neglect of his duties; and, in spite of the clearest evidence, and in defiance of law, justice and equity was fined five dollars, and, in addition, soundly rated by Mr. Lachlan Fletcher, the Consul. The Japan Times publishes the proceedings in full, but the facts may be summed up briefly as follows:—

Mr. Short was accused, under a criminal information, of infringing the municipal regulations by "allowing filthy matter to run from his premises into the public street." On appearing before the Consul, he asked which of the regulations he had infringed. This the Consul declined to tell him, and insisted on an immediate plea of guilty or not guilty. Mr. Short naturally refused to plead until informed under what law he was to be tried; and after a long resistance the Consul at length took down his protest. Mr. Short then tendered evidence in support of his protest to prove that the regulations had never been approved and signed by the Secretary of State, and published as directed by the Order in Council. This was refused. Mr. Short then objected that the summons was informal and contained a false statement; the Consul himself admitted this, but said it was "a mere matter of form," and of no consequence. The Queen, he said, was the prosecutor, and was represented by the Court. Mr. Short naturally asked whether the Court could be at once prosecutor and judge, to which the Consul replied affirmatively. Mr. Short pleaded not guilty, under protest. It then appeared that no witnesses had been summoned, and even Mr. Dohmen, the accuser, was not present. Mr. Short accordingly again claimed his discharge, but it was refused, and a constable was sent out to find witnesses. He soon returned, having caught a French marine, who gave some hazy testimony to having at some time or other seen some dirty water flowing out of the compound of lot 79, whereas in the summons lot 78 was the subject of complaint. Mr. Short then produced evidence proving that, if any nuisance existed at all, it was solely owing to a defect in a drain which the Municipality were bound to keep in order. The Court, however, was deaf to all reason, and pronounced the sentence above recorded. On this, the report says, the whole of the spectators in court rose and left the room expressing their disgust. Mr. Short has, of course, appealed to the Supreme Court.

The Japan Times in commenting on this says, "Unless a vigorous stand be made at once here, and unless our efforts are well backed up at home, the opportunity which this case affords us of exposing the thorough imbecility of Consular Courts will be lost, and we shall have to go on for an unlimited period groaning under the tyranny of ignorance from which we have already suffered so much. . . . . Public opinion, once directed to this absurd anomaly, will surely protest against entrusting the power of the law to men totally ignorant of law, against the danger of permitting a Consul to be judge, jury, witness and counsel for the prosecution all at once, as in the case we record to day—against endowing a simple layman, with no special preparation whatever, with the functions of a Commissioner in Bankruptcy, Coroner, Judge in the Admiralty Court, Commissioner in Lunacy, Judge in the Divorce Court, Proctor, Notary Public, &c., &c., &c. Public opinion will surely be too strong for Mr. Hammond and the traditions of Downing-street, and will help us at last—and to the English press we confidently look to agitate for the relegation of Consuls to their proper business of aiding and protecting British subjects, and to procure for us the establishment of a legitimate court of law, where justice may be done, and the law of England administered by duly qualified judges."

CHINA.

TIENTSIN.

Dates by this mail are to the 3rd May, and the following extract from a letter published in the North China Herald gives an idea of the position of the rebels, &c.

MAY 1.

"About one A.M. on the 28th April his Excellency Chung gave information to Mr. Mongan, Her Britannic Majesty's Consul, that Generals Le-hung-chang and Tso-tsung-tang were close at hand with large forces. Mr. Mongan early on the previous day had issued a notification to the public acquainting it that H.B.M. gunboat Dove would supply the residents with arms, and that she was prepared to render every assistance possible in protecting the settlement. On the morning of the 28th April the United States Consul went down the river in the gig of the steamer Manchu, with Captain Clark, to make inquiries regarding the rebels from the villages where they were seen the previous afternoon. He found that the villagers had left their village, and had passed the night on the opposite side of the Pehio. They pointed out a newly-made grave, where they said they had just buried one of their people who was shot through the forehead because he had objected to let one of the rebels carry off his horse on the previous day. They said the rebels had killed another man whose body as yet lay unburied in one of the houses in their village. They said that only some eighteen or nineteen rebels had come to their place. They pointed to a village in a southerly direction, where they said a party of the rebels had passed the night. They thought that another body had gone to Seen-shwing-koo, the town half-way between Takoo and Tientsin. They said also that they had seen burning houses in a southerly direction all the past night. I rode to the Treaty Temple in the forenoon and found that the Imperial force had been largely reinforced on the south gate. Some eight hundred men passed through the gate to the outside of the ramparts, while I was there, and took up a position about the eighth of a mile from it. A village was pointed out three miles distant which, I was told, was occupied by a body of rebels. I saw numbers of horsemen near it; but no movement was made by the Imperialists towards it, and no fighting took place while I was at the south gate. The superintendent arrived from the west gate, coming along the ramparts, while I was standing near the gate; and he told a gentleman present that the rebels, from the news he had received from his scouts, were making preparations to leave the neighbourhood of Tientsin. The Imperialists later marched outside the ramparts down towards the river, going in an easterly direction. I have not heard up to this hour (six P.M., April 28) that any fighting has taken place, but should I year any particulars regarding any attack on the rebel body I may yet be able to send you an account of it per Manchu.

"I do not suppose, however, that the rebels entertain the least intention just now of moving on to Peking, for I imagine from the rumours current their object at present is to take Tientsin and make themselves masters of the river from Takoo to Peking, and thereby cut off the rice supplies for the capital, and in this manner make it more easily taken at a later day. If the rebels can maintain their ground on the sea-board for only a short period, they will no doubt very soon get supplies of munitions of war from the sea; it is therefore of considerable importance to the Imperial Government that they should adopt at once stringent measures to prevent this, which I do not, however, hear they have yet commenced to do. The merchant steamers are at present leaving Tientsin loaded with manufactures and opium, holders here fearing that the rebels may any day become masters of the place, when lawlessness may reign throughout the city and suburbs, and the warehouses may be plundered or destroyed by fire.

"I have heard no news from Peking for some days past. Our races come off next week, but God only knows what may take place here in the meantime to interfere with our position at Tientsin."

MAY 2.

„Since writing to you yesterday, nothing of importance has occurred in regard to the position of the rebels. The authorities declare them to have gone south towards Tsang-chow about 150 le from Tientsin; the Chinese people state them to be about 50 le distant; and it is very probable that they are at both distances from Tientsin. The Imperialists are massing troops which have come from Paouting-foo and Hokeen-foo, around this place, and on the route to Peking; and it is consequently becoming more difficult every hour for the rebels to take any aggressiqe measures against this city. The French gunboat Le Breton last evening took up a position just below the Rampart fort, distant about a le below the British settlement, where her large gun at high water could sweep a good extent of ground over the 'plain outside the ramparts to the south east. The Russian Consul is daily expecting a gunboat from Amoor. The United States navy continues to remain unrepresented at this port, notwithstanding the large American shipping interests at stake in the Tientsin traffic. H.B.M. Minister has, I hear, directed Consul Mongan to urge upon the Consuls of Russia and American to address their naval authorities to bear an equal share in the protection of the place with France and England. It is rumoured, now, that the Emperor's uncle, Chung-keun-wang, is soon expected here with Manchoo soldiers."

SHANGHAI.

The outward mail of 18th March (French) reached on the 4th May. Dates are now down to the 9th. Telegrams via Kiachta had been received to the 14th April, and the line has been working very well, several messages, both out and home, being received in eighteen days.

On the 7th May Judge Hornby annulled the bankruptcy of Dent and Co., and the estate will be wound up under trustees as at Hong Kong.

Sir Rutherford Alcock has published a reply to the different memorials addressed to him on the subject of treaty revision, which had been far better left unwritten. There are many points in the document which require notice. The document is more a political essay than a categorical answer to the suggestions offered. On two points, however, it is emphatic—in condemning the suggestion that existing duties should be reduced by one-half, and in admitting the vexatious operation of the transit dues. In the latter question lies one of the main difficulties with which the negotiators will have to deal.

A meeting of land renters was held on the 4th, but the required number of voters not being present, the meeting was adjourned until the 11th. The Herald of the 9th says:—

The Municipal budget announces a surplus from the past year of 11,294 tls.; an income of 174,491 tls. for the ensuing year, and an expenditure of 184,655 tls.—leaving a balance in hand, on the 31st March, 1869, of 2,130 tls. The report of the Municipal Council for the past year contains several features of interest. Amongst others, it is in the highest degree unsatisfactory to learn that the new Land Regulations have yet been assented to by only two—the Dutch and Portuguese—Governments. It is also unsatisfactory to find that certain German firms, whose names are published in the report, decline to bear their just share in the burden of Municipal taxation. The Council wisely recommended that the present site for the new cemetery be adhered to, no other suitable land having been offered; besides which "the removal and re-erection of the chapel and lodge, and raising of the ground, &c., would entail large expenditure." Strange to say, Tls. 1,841 of the sums deposited in the late Municipal Savings Bank have not been reclaimed. The Receipts at the Local Post Office during the past year have been Tls. 3,232; during which time 118,000 letters have been despatched to and received from the outports, exclusive of local deliveries. The Superintendent of Police points out the lightness of the punishment awarded to Chinese thieves, which fails to deter them from crime and enables them to resume their habits at the end of a month after conviction.

We are glad to notice that the S.S.N. and U.S.N. Companies announce a reduction in fares by their river and coast steamers. We have always strongly advocated a step in this direction, and are sure the companies will not lose by their resolution. A trip to the river or coast ports is now attainable at reasonable cost.

A powerful opposition line of steamers to the S.S. N. Company is spoken of, but has not, we believe, been decided on. A reduction in the number of their boats running on the Yantze is announced during the ensuing fortnight. The dull state of the river traffic at present renders a third boat unnecessary.

The Island Queen went ashore, on her way to Foochow, on a rock not marked in the chart, and sustained some damage to her bottom. She put into Chipoo, whither H.B.M.'s steamer Basilisk went to her assistance, to protect her against probable danger from pirates. She found that the steamer had repaired damage and left; and contrived to get on another rock herself. She floated off, however, at high water without sustaining much injury.

The Inspector-General of Customs has announced that a general examination of foreign Customs employés will be held next year, when a certain knowledge of Chinese will be imperatively required.

A screw pile beacon is in course of erection on Block-house Spit—where several vessels have lately come to grief. The beacon will be visible five miles off, in clear weather.

We understand that material changes are likely to be soon made, in the organisation of the Harbour-Master's Department.

The Shanghai Rifle Club has won a Small Bore Match between it and the Hong Kong Club, by twenty-five points. The return Enfield match between the two clubs will be shot off in the course of next week.

Sir Edmund Hornby has delivered judgment in the case of The Creditors' Assignees of Mackeller and Co. v. the Chartered Bank, in favour of the former, as regards the following items out of the Tls. 57,000 sued for—Tls. 3,340., 7,463.78, 1,653.17, 2,300., 4,061.39, aggregating Tls. 18,825.54. [We understand that both parties are dissatisfied with this decision, and it will be appealed.]

In the case of the Russian firms at Hankow versus Jardine, Matheson, and Co., the Chief Judge has refused an application by the defendants for a new trial.

Business has been nearly suspended during the past week, on account of the races—not that most people care much about seeing them, but because race week has come to be recognised as a general holiday, of which half Shanghai takes advantage to go away for a trip.

The reports of mineral wealth in the Shantung hills, which tooks us by surprise some twelve months ago, are beginning to assume greater consistency. It was said last year that gold had been found in the neighbourhood. Mr. Alabaster, we hear, has just revisited the spot in question, and has brought back proof positive of its existence in the shape of that precious metal itself, some of which was washed out under his eyes. The "diggings" are about fifteen miles from Chefoo, and the gold was found within eight inches of the surface. The Chinese in the neighbourhood frequently wash for gold, but appear to do so more or less secretly, from fear of attracting the attention of the mandarins. They say that last year the yield scarcely paid the labour; but they have difficulty in digging deep, as the water flows in, and they dare not erect pumping machinery.

The result of the Shanghai spring races was as follows:—

Stand Sweepstakes	Rattler
Griffins' Plate	Kettledrum

HONG KONG.

The London mail of 27th March arrived out on the 6th May. The dates are now down to the 15th. One of the chief items of interest is that the Military Contribution had actually been enforced by the Governor, in accordance with strict orders from the Home Government. This is a sad commentary on the proceedings of the Association in London. The following is from the Trade Report:—

A meeting of the Hong Kong Legislative Council has been held within the last few days. Four or five new ordinances were introduced, of which the one most generally interesting related to a new measure to be directed against piracy. This Government has been for some time, it seems, in correspondence with the authorities at Canton, through the British Consul, and also with the Minister at Peking, in reference to a scheme for disarming native vessels. It must be understood that almost all Chinese junks on this coast go about with complete batteries of big guns, supplies of stinkpots, and so forth, ostensibly intended for defence against pirates. It is notorious, however, that large numbers of them are themselves pirates, who adopt the character of trading junks as a mere disguise. The question how to deal with them is one replete with difficulty, inasmuch as there can be no doubt that the dangerous character of the coast does expose any junks which may be bona fide honest traders to piratical attacks. Sir Richard MacDonnell has urged, however, that at all events as far as the stinkpots are concerned, these are almost entirely weapons of offence, and last month the Viceroy of Canton issued a proclamation requiring the disarmament of all fishing boats after a certain date in August, and the total abandonment by all junks of the practice of carrying stinkpots. The ordinance now introduced is to enable the Government of Hong Kong to make similar regulations affecting the native craft registered in this colony, and further to advance pari passu with the Chinese authorities of Canton in any further regulations developing the newly-adopted policy which may there be introduced. The new law will be of a rather sweeping character, but it may be regarded as experimental legislation, and if it be found to produce bad results the restrictions could be modified, The Admiral, Sir Harry Keppel, is understood to be in favour of the scheme—indeed, he proved, the Governor said at the Council. "a valuable ally" in the negotiations between this Government and the Chinese authorities.

Another meeting of the Legislative Council was held on the 6th, at which various ordinances were introduced. Mr. J. P. Duncanson was sworn in as a member, in the room of Mr. Francis Parry, resigned.

At this meeting of Council on the 6th the Governor introduced the Supplementary Estimates Ordinance, and said:—The estimated revenue and expenditure of the colony for 1867, was—revenue, 980,520 dols.; expenditure, 997,305.60 dols. The actual revenue and expenditure—including, for the purpose of comparison, the receipts and payments on account of the Imperial post-office has been—revenue, 963,519 dols.; expenditure, 835,032 dols. The revenue, however, appears more productive than it really should do, because a considerable portion, viz., 66,300 dols., is due to a sale of land, which belongs more to capital than revenue, and because a better system of collection of taxes enabled nearly all the rates due for the year to be collected during the year, and consequently left fewer arrears outstanding at the end. The Stamp Ordinance having been in operation only a few months during 1867, produced only 28,232 dols., but the monthly collections show that the receipts to be expected from the shedule then in force would produce in a year about the amount estimated, viz., 110,000 dols. The receipts from the Junk and Registration Ordinance have more than doubled what was expected. The expenditure shows a decrease of about 160,000 dols, but of this 94,000 dols. is caused by the non-payment of the Military Contribution, which forms a debt still due by the colony, and the remainder is principally attributable to the postponement of important public works, more especially the reservoir at Pokefulum, the reclamation of ground at Bowrington, and the paving of streets in Taipinshan. There is also a considerably diminished charge for gaols. The nominal excess of assets over liabilities, at the end of 1867, was something over 25,000 dols., or about that which was anticipated last August, when the estimates for the current year were in course of preparation. The supplementary estimates now submitted, amounting to nearly 135,000 dols., are not for any additional expenditure, but are merely brought forward to cover certain alterations which were found necessary in the appropriation of the expenditure. The 135,000 dols. now asked for, therefore forms a portion of the 835,000 of expenditure above shown, the actual expenditure in accordance with the original estimates having been only about 700,000. The detailed estimates to be sent round to members indicate exactly the services upon which the different appropriations have been made. A considerable sum is shown as expended under the head of police, the larger portion of which is connected with the raising and equipment of the Sikh force. In public works most of the alterations consist of small items which could not well be foreseen a year in advance, and of payments not estimated—because it had been anticipated that the works in respect of which the payments took place would have been completed in the previous year. The greater part of the sums required for roads, streets, and bridges are on account of Kowloon, the Government having been obliged to resume many of the lots sold. In special expenses there was a saving of most of the expenditure connected with a colonial gun vessel, but the purchase and fitting of a gunpowder depot and a floating police-station, and sundry other small expenses, have about exhausted the saving thus effected. The Ordinance was read a first time, and the Council then adjourned.

The Daily Press on the Military Contribution says:—"Parliament, we have urged over and over again, and now we repeat with renewed emphasis, is the only arena where this matter can be fought out with a chance of success for the colonists of Hong Kong. The Hong Kong Association was formed to bring the matter before Parliament, and if its efforts to do this should break down on the present occasion, it seems to us that the only course open to the Association and the colony is to take steps by which its determination to gain a hearing, at all events, may be carried out. If the matter were once fairly discussed in the House, and our claims to justice were overthrown, it might be urged with some reason that it was useless to struggle with overwhelming force. We do not say positively even then that it would be useless. On the contrary, the one great lesson taught by all public events is that preliminary defeat generally precedes ultimate success, and that nothing is fatal to the chances of a political undertaking in a good cause, except want of courage on the part of those who have it in hand. To imagine, however, that we can be defeated at all until our case has been listened to in the House would be absurd. These annoying checks in the beginning are trials of patience, but are in no way indicative of the way in which the trial of the real issue is likely to go, when a hearing may be at last secured."

Amongst minor items of intelligence may be mentioned the arrival in Hong Kong recently of certain Annamite ambassadors, who have been sent to thank the Governor for the assistance he rendered to a party of Annamites, who were taken by pirates some months ago, and sold as slaves in Macao to the Coolie dealers—the "emigration agents" of that settlement. The story of the way in which these unfortunate persons had been seized leaked out while they were still in captivity in Macao and the intervention of this Government procured their release. They were sent to their own country, by means of a subscription raised in Hong Kong.

It is to be regretted that some firms in Hong Kong are selling and delivering European imports to China on a credit of two and three months. They must have forgotten the sad result which attended this course at Singapore. It is sufficient to run the risk of the market, without delivering.

The Pacific Mail Company's steamer China was announced for San Francisco on the 25th May. Telegrams by her from Japan and China are now overdue.

The April number of Notes and Queries has been received, and contains many interesting items. The China Magazine is going on; and Punch, we observe, is to die, after one year's existence.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

—o—

SINGAPORE.

From this port we have dates to the 23rd May. The English mail of April 10th arrived out on the 12th May (one day early) and the French one of April 18th on the 20th May. London telegrams had been received to May 8th. The following summary of news is from the Straits Times Overland Journal of May 23rd:—

The Malacca (with the present homeward mail) arrived from China on the morning of the 21st and leaves with the home mail to-day at 2 P.M. According to the twenty-four hours in port clause in the contract she might have been despatched yesterday, but in deference to the expressed wishes of the community she has been detained until 2 P.M. to-day, her due date of departure.

The fortnight has been a moderately lively one, politically and socially speaking. The Legislative Council have had two sittings, and all the most important documents which were laid before the Council at its opening have been published, and having attracted considerable attention, have caused some discussion.

The question of most interest and importance has been the Supreme Court Bill, which has occupied most of the time of the Council, and is still under deliberation. The main point of interest to the community is, that the judges should be totally and absolutely independent of the Executive, any rule or regulation of the Colonial-office to the contrary notwithstanding. So far as the amended Bill goes, this is secured, but the Governor's Commission gives him power to suspend any official. There is a strong and universal feeling that our judges should be expressly excepted, should not be liable to be touched except by the Queen herself, who alone appoints them.

The Race Ball went off with great eclat and success in the Town-hall on the 12th May. There was a large and brilliant attendance of ladies, and his Excellency the Governor and our learned Chief Justice honoured the company by their presence. The Governor gives a ball in the Town-hall on the 26th May, in honour of Her Majesty's birthday.

To-day (Saturday, May 23) had been appointed by Government to be observed as a public holiday in celebration of the Queen's birthday by all Government officials, but owing to the mail leaving, the mercantile houses and banks cannot observe it as such, and to make up for this, Monday has been generally agreed upon as a holiday instead.

The Bell of Southesk arrived from London at Tanjong Pagar the 30th April with 865 tons of general cargo on board—this was discharged, and 817 tons of Singapore cargo shipped at the wharves in eight and a-half working days. She completed her loading on Saturday afternoon, the 9th instant. Out of this time more than half a day's work was lost by heavy rain. The Bell was only in port altogether twelve days.

We have been informed that the Rev. Julian Moreton, chaplain of St. Saviour's Church, Sarawak, has been appointed (by his Grace the Secretary of State for the Colonies) Colonial Chaplain at Penang.

We understand that Dr. King, assistant colonial surgeon at Penang, has lately resigned his appointment, and intends shortly proceeding to India, where, it is said, he will fill a higher appointment. We believe that Dr. Anderson, assistant colonial surgeon here, is to supply Dr. King's place temporarily at Penang, and Dr. Moniot will be appointed acting assistant colonial surgeon at Malacca, on the departure of Dr. Maingay to Burmah.

We understand that the British ship Theresa, at present in our harbour, has been chartered by the Madras Government for the conveyance of native troops from that port to Hong Kong. It will be remembered that the last two mail steamers from Galle, viz., Ellora and Emeu, brought troops from Madras for Hong Kong.

The weather has been very dry, and the atmosphere rather close and oppressive during the fortnight. Latterly there has been a good deal of thunder, followed, however, by but little rain.

In reply to a memorial from the Chamber of Commerce, the Governor has directed a measure to be drawn up for the prevention or summary punishment of the adulteration of gambier or any other produce. The following is the memorial :—

"The petition of the Singapore Chamber of Commerce showeth, That one of the principal exports from Singapore to Great Britain and the continent of Europe is gambier. That this article is manufactured by Chinese settlers in Singapore, and is besides imported in large quantities from Johore and the residency of Riouw.

"That gambier consists of the juice of the leaves of a shrub boiled down to a syrup and then dried in the sun. In Europe it is used for the purpose of dying and tanning, and when mixed with water and reduced to a liquid form it should give little or no solid residuum.

"That for some years past many complaints have been received by firms in Singapore exporting gambier of the article reaching Europe in an adulterated state, that is, mixed up with other substances to increase its weight and bulk. Tanners in England, who have been in the habit of employing it in their business, complain that instead of getting a pure article as in former times, they now find it to contain from twenty to thirty per cent. of worthless refuse.

"That from inquiries recently made by members of the Chamber it has been found that in Singapore clay is mixed with gambier, and in some cases the article offered for sale appears to consist almost wholly of clay coloured with gambier juice.

"That the practice of adulterating gambier to such a large extent as has been ascertained to prevail is calculated to inflict a heavy loss on the trade of this Settlement, as if allowed to go on it will cause a serious falling off in the export and a steady diminution in value. That already tanners in England who formerly used gambier are now substituting for it hemlock extract procured from America.

"That under these circumstances your Petitioners ventured to bring the matter to the notice of your Excellency and the Honourable the Legislative Council, in the hope that some means may be taken to prevent the injury to the trade of Singapore which the practice complained of is causing, and

"Your petitioners humbly pray that a law may be passed providing the summary punishment of persons proved to be guilty of adulterating gambier or other produce.

"And your petitioners will ever pray, &c.,

Commercial Report.

CHINA AND JAPAN IMPORTS.

YOKOHAMA.—The import dealers had shown more confidence, and though little business had been done, there had been more talk about it. Cotton Yarn had been quitted to a fair amount, the lower prices tempting speculators. 16-24's and 28-32's remained the favourite counts. Stocks had been largely increased. Holders of Grey Shirtings had shown more firmness, and little real business had been done, deliveries having been to a great extent for re-export. In Woollens good assortments of Camlets had been readily saleable. Black was worth $17.50 to $18; Scarlet, $18.50 to $19. Inferior cloth (Unions) 60c. to 80c. per yard; Pilot cloth, 80c. to 95c. The demand for Blankets had fallen off. For Fancy Goods there had been no inquiry. The trade in Arms continued brisk. The closing quotations were:—G. E. Grey Shirtings: 7 lbs. 38½ yards 39 in., per piece $2.30 to 2.40; 8 lbs. 4 to 8 lbs. 8 do., $2.75 to 2.85; 9 lbs. do., 44 in., $3.25 to 3.35. G. E. White Shirtings: 56 to 60 reed, 40 yds. 36 in., $3.30 to 3.60; 64 to 72 reed do., $3.70 to 4.10; T-Cloths, 6 lbs. to 7 lbs., $1.70 to 2.05; Handkerchiefs, assorted, per doz., 65c. to 1.10; Brocades and Spots (White) per pce., $3.25 to 3 30; do.(Dyed) $3.40 3.60. Cotton Yarn—Nos. 13 to 24, per picul, $39 to 40; do. 28 to 32, $42 to 43; ditto 38 to 42, $39 to 40. Camlets, BBB and S, 56 to 58 yds. 31 in., per piece, $16 to 17; ditto, SS, ditto, $15 to 16; ditto, SSS, ditto, $13 to 14; Union Camlets, $10 to 11; Lastings, 30 yds. 31 in., $14 to 15; Crape Lastings, ditto, $5 to 11; Iron, Flat and Round, per picul, $2.75 to 3.20; ditto, Nail Rod, $3 to 3.20; ditto Hoop, $4 to 4.25; ditto, Pig, $1.25 to 1.50; ditto, Wire, $6.50 to 7; Steel, $7 to 8; Lead, $7.50 to 7.75; Tin Plates, per box, $7.25 to 7.50; Quicksilver, per flask, $60 to 70.

HANKOW.—The demand for all descriptions of manufactured goods had been unusually restricted. Grey Shirtings of medium weight had, owing to discouraging advices from the interior, suffered a serious decline in value, and 8¼ to 8½ lbs. were quoted, by last accounts, Tls. 2.2.4 to 2.3.0 per piece. Heavy cloth was scarce, and firmer. For White Shirtings the demand had been trivial. T-Cloths had not been saleable to any extent. Grey Drills, of English make, had found buyers, in small lots, at better rates. Fancy Cottons had experienced a small inquiry, but at lower figures. Camlets had been dull of sale, and the same remark applied to Lastings. Scarlet Long Ells had been in speculative inquiry, and large sales had taken place at about last mail's rates. Medium and Broad Cloths had experienced no change. Spanish Stripes had been in no request.

SHANGHAI.—Cottons: The market for all kinds of manufactured goods had been very quiet during the fortnight, and transactions had taken place to a very limited extent. Shortly after the departure of last mail telegraphic advices were received from England, via Kiachta, which strengthened the market for 8¼lb. Grey Shirtings, the value of which advanced to Tls. 2.2.7 to Tls. 2.3.3 per piece; later accounts from Tientsin, had, however, caused a reaction, and these goods could not be quoted higher than Tls. 2.2.3 to Tls. 2.3.0. per piece; 7lbs. have also given way in value. White Shirtings had found buyers to a small extent only, lower counts being those in most favour. T-Cloths had been in moderate inquiry at about last mail's figures. In fancy goods not much business had been passing. Three vessels have arrived from England with general cargoes. Woollens: Spanish stripes, medium broad, and habit cloths had been in the most limited inquiry. Camlets had not met with much attention. Long ells had been taken to a fair extent, and prices had improved. Lastings had not been asked for. The speculative inquiry for figured Orleans noticed in our last report had quite died out, and sales had been on a small scale during the period under review. Metals: Flat and round, and nail rod iron had improved in value, and for the latter description a good demand had existed. Lead had declined in value, but at the reduced quotations there were buyers. For tin plates and steel the market had been quiet. Coals: The demand had been very limited, and although the arrivals had been unimportant, the market had shown less firmness in consequence. Cardiff were sold from ship in small lots at tls. 12.0.0 to 11.7.5 per ton, but for a full cargo lower prices were offered. English: Sales have been made at tls. 10.7.5 from ship for a part cargo. American: Without arrivals and transactions. Australian: The last arrivals had not been offered on the market. Formosa: Sales reported at tls. 7.5.0 to 7.8.0 by the cargo from ship. Japan: Sales had been made at tls. 7.5.0 per ton from ship. Arrivals had been: 2,804 tons from Great Britain, 782 tons from Australia, and 644 tons from Japan; in all, 4,230 tons. The quotations were:—Grey Shirtings: 7 lbs., 1.9.0 to 1.9.5 per pc.; 8.4 to 8.6 lbs., 2.2.3 to 2.2.9; 9 to 9.12 lbs., 2.7.0 to 3.2.5. White Shirtings: 56 reed, 2.0.5 to 2.1.5; 60, 2.2.0 to 2.2.5; 64, 2.3.0 to 2.4.0; 66, 2.4.5 to 2.5.2; 72, 2.6.5 to 2.7.0; 80 to 84, 3.0.0 to 3.1.0. T-Cloths: 6 lbs., 1.4.5 to 1.8.0; 7, 1.7.0 to 2.1.0; 8 to 8.4, 2.3.0 to 2.8.0. Camlets, English: S, 56 yards, 13.0.0 to 13.5.0; SS, 12.5.0 to 13.0.0; SSS, 10.0.0 to 10.5.0. Spanish Stripes: 0.5.8 to 0.7.0 per yard. Medium Broad and Habit Cloth: 0.9.0 to 1.1.0. Long Ells: Scarlet, 24 yards, HH, 6.3.0 to 6.5.0 per pc.; CPH, 6.4.0 to 6.4.5; Assorted, HH, 6.5.0 to 6.6.0 Lastings, 30 yards: 11.5.0 to 12.2.5. Iron: Nail Rod, 2.6.0 per pl.; Hoop, 2.4.0 to 2.5.0; Flat and Round, 2.6.0. Lead, 6.3.5 to 6.6.0 per pl. Tin Plates: 4.8.0 to 5.0.0 per box. Steel, 4.0.0. to 4.5.0 per tub.

FOOCHOW.—The sales of manufactured goods had consisted of 800 pieces, 8¼ lbs. Grey Shirtings at $3.20 to $3.25 per piece, and 1,200 pieces T-Cloths at $2.60 per piece. Lead was in active demand, and a large quantity just arrived would not more than meet the immediate requirements of the teamen. Sales during the fortnight had been: 1,200 piculs lead at $11 per picul; 100 boxes tin plates at $10 per picul.

HONG KONG.—Messrs. Olyphant and Co.'s circular offers the following remarks:—We have to report the largest fortnight's business in manufactures ever known in the colony, though by far the greater portion of that business has been made up of speculative purchases by foreigners, who entered the market in consequence of the continued advices of advancing prices in Manchester. Attention has been particularly directed to Nos. 16 to 24 Yarn, and 8.4 lbs Grey Shirtings, though 6, 7, and 8 lbs. T-Cloths have also found some favour. Cotton Yarn: Sales of all kinds amounted to about 1,950 bales, including some 300 bales Bombay and 60 of Singapore cargo. The advance in prices is $12.50 to $15.00 per bale, and the market closes very firm, though the inquiry has at present ceased. Piece Goods: We refer above to the large business in Grey Shirtings, and free purchases of T-Cloths; 7 to 8.4 lbs. Grey Shirtings are up 10 to 15 cents, 8.8 to 10 lbs. do. 5 to 10 cents, and T-Cloths 10 cents per piece, and most other descriptions have similarly advanced, Brocades, Spotted Shirtings, and Chintzes being the exceptions. White Shirtings are in large supply, and not much inquired for. English Drills are wanted. There are no American manufactures on offer, the small parcels brought by recent arrivals all going forward to Shanghai. Woollens: Transactions in these goods, as usual at this season, have been very trifling. Assorted Long Ells are nominally a little lower; Scarlet are unchanged. Blankets have further advanced. Lastings and Camlets are rather firmer. Metals: Inquiry generally has been less active, and Nail Rod, Bar and Hoop Iron, Steel and Tin are a little lower. Wire is steady. Lead is again dearer, and Quicksilver has advanced 1$ per picul. Coal: Arrivals have been 560 tons Welsh, 1,820 tons Sydney, and 47 tons patent Fuel—almost all to consumers. The only sale has been 120 tons English at $14. Holders are firm at quotations. The quotations were:—Grey Shirtings, 7 lbs., $2.45 to $2.50 per piece; 8 lb., $2.80 to $2.85; 8.4 lb. $3.00 to $3.10; 8.8 lb., $3.10 to $3.15; 9 lb., $3.45 to $3.55; 9.4 lb., $3.60 to $3.65; 9.8 lb., $3.75 to $3.80; 9.12 lb., $3.90 to $4.00; 10 lb., $4.15 to $4.25; White Shirtings, 54 to 60 rd., $2.20 to $2.50; Spotted Shirtings, White, $2.80 to $2.90; Assorted, $3.80 to $3.90; Turkey Red Shirtings, $2.55 to $2.95; Chintzes, $2.00 to $2.40; Long Ells H Scarlet, $8.50 to 8.60; II Assorted, $8.10 to 8.80; HH Scarlet, $8.70 to 8.75; HH Assorted, $8.30 to 8.50; Spanish Stripes, Scarlet, $0.80 to 0.90 per yard; Assorted, $0.78 to 0.95; Blankets, 10lb., $5.75 to 6.50 per pair; ditto, 7lb., $4.00 to 4.25; Lastings, $14.00 to 15.50 per piece; Camlets, $14.50 to 21.25; Dutch, ditto, $22.50 to 27.00; Iron, Nail-rod, $2.90 to 3.05 per picul; Square, Round and Flat bar, $3.10 to 4.30; Hoop, $3.40 to 3.50; Wire, $8.50 to 9.50; Steel, $4.20 to 5.50 per tub; Lead, $8.80 to 9.00; WB, $9.30 to 9.60; Tin, Malacca, $24·25 to 24.75; Straits, $20.25 to 22.50; Tin Plates, $7.10 to 7.50 per box; Quicksilver, $65.00 to 66.00 per picul; Spelter, $6.25 to 6.50.

CHINA AND JAPAN EXPORTS.

TEA.

YOKOHAMA.—After the departure of the last mail the market became quiet, and little business was done until the receipt of somewhat more favourable advices from home by the mail of the 6th March; since when operations had been on a larger scale, and settlements for the fortnight amounted to about 1,000 piculs, almost entirely for the American market; prices remained without change, but closed firm. Arrivals had been small, and stocks were reduced to about 800 piculs. The P.M.S.S. Co.'s steamer New York took 44,151 lbs. The quotations (laid down in London, all charges paid at exchange 4s. 5½d.) were:—Finest, 1s. 6½d. to 1s. 7¼d.; Fine, 1s. 5d. to 1s. 6¼d.; Good Medium, 1s. 3¾d. to 1s. 5d.; Medium, 1s. 2¼d. to 1s. 3¼d.; Good Common, 1s. 1d. to 1s. 2½d.; Common, 10¼d. to 1s. 0¾d.

HANKOW.—Advices had been received of the opening of the market up country at about the same rate in copper cash as last season, but the value of this coin having depreciated, the cost in Sycee was about Tls. 1 to 1½ under last season. Prices, however, were expected to advance. No musters had come to hand, and no reliable advices as to quality. Arrivals in bulk were not expected prior to the 23rd or 24th May.

KIUKIANG.—Advices from the interior report that of late the weather had been unfavourable for picking the leaf, and it was feared might injure the flavour of the Teas; it would certainly retard the arrival of first parcels by at least a week. An unusually large number of Hongs had been opened, and it was surmised that there would be much competition, and that laying down cost of first parcels would be higher than that of last season. In the Hohow district large quantities of tea were being prepared for the Foochow market.

SHANGHAI.—The Chamber of Commerce report states:—"Black: No business has been transacted, and there is no stock remaining. The picking of the new leaf must have commenced some days back, and in the course of a few days information concerning its quality and price will be received. Anxiety has been shown latterly, owing to the continued rain in the districts, and, should the weather not improve, it is feared that the quality of the crop will be affected by it. The weather this season shows a marked contrast to that of last. This year there has been much rain in the Tea countries, whilst last there was hardly a shower for months. Green: No transactions. Sun-dried musters of the new Pingsuey and Hoochow leaf have been received, and first chops of the former will probably reach Shanghai in little more than a month hence. Natives state that the cost of the Pingsueys will be over that of last year, owing to increased competition in the district."

FOOCHOW.—Advices had been received from all the districts in the interior, and reported an active competition for first parcels of leaf, and the purchase of considerable quantities at prices Taels four to five in advance of last year's opening rates. Pak Lings had been settled at an advance of Taels two to four, and an advance similar to that in Congous had been paid for small parcels of Oolongs. No musters (except of a few Pak Lings) had come to hand, and no information as to the general quality of the crop had been received. Messrs. Rusden, Phipps and Co., in their review of the last tea season, offer the following remarks:—The production of the first crop was not so large as in the previous season, but the remunerative prices paid by foreigners stimulated production later on, so that the total supply of the season would probably have exceeded that of the season 1866-67 but for the unfavourable accounts received from England of the out-turn of the first arrivals. This, by stopping demand, checked supplies; and it will be seen, on reference to the tables, that our total export shows a falling off of about 2,500,000 lbs. One reason for the falling off of supplies has been that buyers from Kiukiang have competed in the Upper Sinchune districts. This has been the case, to a trivial extent, for two or three years previous, but has not before assumed sufficient dimensions to render it worthy of notice; and this is the reason why Teas of the Kaisow character are now received from that port.

CANTON.—The following is from Messrs. Oliphant and Co.'s report:—"We have now to advise the commencement of the season of 1868-69, the market for new Canton Teas having been opened during the interval, we regret to say, at extreme prices, which can hardly be expected to result in good. Buying has been confined, almost entirely, to two houses, and we are somewhat at a loss to account for their precipitate action, the bulk of the purchases being made from box musters, representing chops which are really not yet in existence. In the districts having Foochow for an outlet new leaf has been actively competed for at a marked advance on last season's rates, but of these in the vicinity of Hankow markets opened under last season's prices, though some advance was expected to take place. The markets in the Kiukiang districts had not opened. It is to be hoped that Congou buyers will be less sanguine than their brethren at Canton, but we fear the effect of telegrams now coming forward from London, and the presence of a number of new buyers, well supplied with Credits. The rate of freight for new teas has not yet been fixed, but will probably be £5 to £4. 10s. Tonnage promises to be scarce in China waters for some months to come, and we look for full rates for teas throughout the season." On the 1st May 1,800 boxes Congou were settled at Tls. 27 to 29, followed next day by further purchases at higher prices. The Scented Tea Market was opened on the 8th, and several chops of both decriptions were sold at extreme prices. Settlements were as follows:—Canton District Congous, 7,500 boxes at Tls. 26 to 31; Scented Orange Pekoe, 17,000 boxes at Tls. 31 to 38; Scented Caper, 29,000 boxes at Tls. 27½ to 37; Gunpowder, 7,500 boxes at Tls. 25 to 27; Young Hyson, 500 half-chests at Tls. 30½.

SILK.

YOKOHAMA.—Confidence appears to be to some extent restored in the interior and arrivals had been decidedly freer. The continued anxiety shown by foreigners to secure all fine silk had kept up prices to our last quotations, in spite of the rise in Exchange. Settlements were estimated at 420 piculs and unsold stock at 200 piculs. It would seem almost premature to speak of the new crop, but the silkmen consider its prospects favourable. It was more than probable that a considerable quantity of this year's produce would appear in next year's estimates, for there was certainly a large amount of silk left upcountry, which could not be brought down until the political disturbances ceased. The weather had been favourable, both for leaf and worm. The quotations (laid down in London all charges included at exchange 4s. 5½d.) were:—Mybash and Sinchu, Extra, 37s. 1d.; Best, 34s. 2d. to 36s. 1d.; Inferior, 32s. 3d. to 33s. 5d.; Medium, 25s. 2d. to 29s. Oshu, Extra, 35s. 4d. to 36s. 6d.; Best, 33s. to 35s.; Medium, 28s. 3d. to 31s.; Inferior, 23s. 7d. to 25s. 7d. Koshu, Best, 30s. 1d. to 32s. 2d.; Medium, 25s. 11d. to 28s. 3d.; Inferior, 22s. 9d. to 24s. 4d. Sodai, Best, 29s. 5d. to 31s.; Medium, 26s. 8d. to 28s. 8d.; Inferior, 23s. 7d. to 25s. 6d. Achezan, Best, 27s. 1d. to 28s. 8d.; Medium, 23s. 7d. to 25s. 6d.; Inferior, 17s. 8d. to 21s. 6d.

SHANGHAI.—Mr. Holdsworth's Circular, dated 7th May, is as follows:—"The latest advices received from England since the date of my last silk circular of the 22nd April are by letters to the 27th March, and by telegrams via Kiachta to the 14th April,—the latter reporting the London market firmer. The business transacted in this market during the past fortnight has been of a very trivial nature, the settlements being estimated at about 300 bales, chiefly the lower classes of Tsatlees and Taysaams, and a few parcels of Re-reels and Throwns, which have been purchased at prices about the same as those ruling at the close of the previous mail. Owing to the limited business transacted the quotations may be considered nominal. The receipts from the interior during the past two weeks having been in excess of the sales, the unsold stock has slightly increased, and may be estimated at about 300 to 400 bales, amongst which there is scarcely a parcel of good Silk. The reports from the producing districts respecting the new crop continue satisfactory, the weather having been fine and warm, and, should it remain as propitious during the next two weeks, a considerable increase in the crop of 1868-69, as compared with that of the past season, is expected. In Haining district the worms are reported to be in their fourth stage, in Karshing in their third stage, and in their second in Nanzing and neighbourhood. Hank musters are expected to arrive in about twenty days, and bale samples in about a month hence."

CANTON.—It is asserted that the inclement weather has more seriously injured the first crop of new silk than was previously anticipated, the yield being estimated at but 50 per cent. of last year's. Strengthened by this, holders of the few remaining parcels of old Silk had advanced their prices some $30, at which they were very firm. Sales of 20 bales Tsatlees and 12 bales Loongkongs (not strictly No. 1), at $510 were reported.

Exchange.—A further advance has taken place in sterling exchange during the past fortnight, and it is well maintained at the close of business for the present mail. Business commenced with Bank bills, six months' sight, at 4s. 4d., and credit at 4s. 4½d. The mail from Europe, with dates to the 27th of March, arrived on the 6th instant, as also the direct steamers from Calcutta; and the rate for bank bills, in consequence of their advices, advanced to 4s. 4½d., six months' sight, and credits were placed at 4s. 4¾d. to 4s. 5d. The demand for Bank bills has been small, but nevertheless, owing to the scarcity of private paper, no better rates could be had than 4s. 4¼d. All the banks but one will draw at this rate—thus establishing it firmly, and showing a decided advance on last mail's rates. H.M.'s Treasury bills were competed for as usual by public tender, and accepted at 4s. 3⅞d. to 4s. 3⅞d., but only a small lot offered at this rate, say £12,000. The estimated amount of business by the present opportunity, exclusive of Treasury bills, is about £140,000, say £110,000 bank bills, £120,000 private paper, and ten lakhs rupees.

Bullion.—There is no bar silver on the market. A demand exists and the former extreme rate—say 11½ per cent. premium—would would be readily obtainable. A small parcel of sycee has been sold at 9 per cent. premium and in one or two instances 10 per cent. premium. Some parcels of Newchwang sycee have been sold at 9 per cent. premium. There is some demand for clean Mexicans for Shanghai.

Shares.—The share market has been exceedingly dull during the present fortnight, and there is little or no change to report in rates. Two or three lots of old bank have been placed at 14 to 15 per cent. premium, and at these figures the market closes rather firm, as there is a large order from the north in the market to-day. Several sales of new have been made at 2½ premium, but rates are a little firmer to-day. Steamboat are very dull and no sellers. There have been some small settlements at ½ to 1 premium. Early in the fortnight over 100 Hotels were settled at 30 discount, but they are now weaker and sellers at 32½ discount, at which rate a small lot is reported settled. A small lot of old Whampoa Dock have been placed at 15 premium, and there are sellers of new at 7 premium, but they are very dull at these figures. Union Dock have declined, and there are sellers at 16 discount; lower rates are looked for. An improvement is shortly expected in Bank and Steamboat shares, especially in the latter.

THE CHASSEPOT RIFLE.

The report of Marshal Niel to the Emperor on the efficiency of the new weapon is a document of no little interest, seeing that it affords the only means we have (pending another European war) of judging of its relative powers as compared with our own breech-loader. Another circumstance which invests the report with additional importance to our readers is the exportation of a large number of these rifles to Japan, to arm the troops now being equipped there by the Government on the European model. The report deals at considerable length with numerous trifling defects that have been complained of, and shows how some of these are imaginary, while others have been, or will be, remedied. The most interesting part of it, however, is that which presents an analysis of the actual performances of the new rifle with the one hitherto in use. A comparison of the average number of hits with the old Minie rifle and with the Chassepot at various ranges gave the following results:—At 200 metres, Minie 30·8, Chassepot 69·8; at 400 metres, Minie 15·8, Chassepot 46·6; at 600 metres, Minie 8·3, Chassepot 36·1. At ranges of 800 and 1,000 metres, at which practice with the Minie Rifle was of course impracticable, the Chassepot gave an average of 28·4 at 800 metres and 24·7 at 1,000 metres. The report goes on to say that "at long ranges of 1,000 metres the favourable results exceed the average effect of the old rifle at 400 metres, and reach the double of those obtained previously at 600 metres, the extreme limit of range with the old rifle." These results, it must be owned, are tremendous; and if the Chassepot and Snider arms should ever come to be opposed to one another in earnest, whatever the ultimate result may be, the carnage will be frightful. One thing, however, is very certain—such fighting could not last long.

GUNBOATS FOR CHINA.

The Gnat, 2, double-screw composite gun-vessel, Commander C. B. Theobald, left Plymouth on the 18th ult. for China.

Messrs. J. Reid and Co., of Port Glasgow, have launched a composite twin screw gunboat, named the Pert, built to the order and from the designs of the Admiralty. The dimensions of the Pert are as follows:—Length between perpendiculars, 155 ft.; breadth (extreme), 25 ft.; depth in hold, 10 ft. 9 in.; burden, 464 tons. The engines are of 120-horse power, nominal; they were constructed at Sheerness, and were fitted up on board while the vessel was on the stocks. The Pert is one of a fleet of eight gunboats building for the suppression of piracy in the China seas; her armament consists of two 6½-ton Armstrong guns and two 64-pounders.

CHINESE AND ABYSSINIAN COURAGE.

The following appeared lately in the Daily News:—"Sir,—In some otherwise admirable remarks on Sir Robert Napier and his gallant little army, you observe that 'the enemy was not a Chinese army which could be routed by a mere display of vigour, or by force of making a loud noise.' I may perhaps be permitted to recall to your memory the last two campaigns in Northern China. In that of 1860 the name of Robert Napier first acquired prominent distinction. The Taku forts were captured after a most heroic resistance on the part of the Chinese and Tartar defenders. The slaughter was great, and our loss was by no means inconsiderable. Still more to the point was the experience of the previous year, when, on the 25th June, 1859, we sustained from the same forts a heavy repulse. One of our very first admirals, Sir James Hope, and several of his captains were wounded—some mortally; and out of an attacking force of 1,200 men, we had to deplore the enormous loss of 400 hors de combat. On these occasions, as well as others, the Chinese fought not only with the greatest courage, but with so much skill as to give rise to the erroneous suspicion that they had Russian leaders. I believe that, without undervaluing his fellow conquerors of Theodore, Sir Robert Napier would be the first to admit that he had quite as hard a nut to crack at Taku as at Magdala. Our soldiers and sailors, who have braved death in many forms, and many of whom have lost life and limb in obtaining great commercial advantages for their country, will be the last to disparage the heroism of their Chinese foes, even when the victory by superiority in arms and discipline was comparatively easy. But when the struggle was arduous and sanguinary, it is but fair to accord to even a barbarous enemy the meed of courage which is his due. And from the excellent tone of your comments on the followers of Theodore, I have no doubt you will admit an apology for the vanquished of the Peiho.—I am, &c., "ONE WHO WAS THERE."

STEAM FIRE-ENGINES FOR SINGAPORE.—Two new steam fire-engines of a medium size have just been shipped from the works of Messrs. Merryweather and Son, of London, for the service of the fire brigade of Singapore. The authorities were induced to adopt steam fire-engines in consequence of the feeble effects produced by manual-power engines on large fires, especially in tropical countries, and of the great benefits that have been found to accrue from their now extended use. The engines in question are of the pattern "L'Imperatrice," one of the engines for which this firm were awarded the first prize and only gold medal at the late Paris Exhibition.

PROFESSOR RISLEY and his Japanese troupe have left London for a month, to fulfil a special engagement at Madrid, appearing the first day before her Majesty the Queen of Spain. At the expiration of the month the Japanese and their manager return to England, and make a tour in the provinces.

THE Viceroy of Egypt recently had constructed in France a floating dock of iron, which was towed to Alexandria. It was experimented upon a few days back by means of a steamer beloning to the Messageries Imperiales Company. The result was, that in six hours the steamer was left completely dry, and could be examined.

Advices from San Francisco state that the Pacific Mail Company's steamer Colorado sailed on the 3rd of June for China and Japan, with a large amount of freight, $640,000 in treasure and 240 passengers.

THE SUEZ CANAL.

The Legislative Body has voted, not unanimously, as was expected, but by the large majority of 179 to 8, the Bill which authorises the Suez Canal Company to raise 100 000,000f. by lottery. The minority who voted against the law did so, not because they were opposed to the Suez Canal, but because they disapproved what they think is a most unusual mode of raising money. In alluding to the fact of capitalists declining to come forward, M. Jules Favre observed,—"Capital is free, and whatever be the motive that actuates those who withdraw it, we may be certain that there is every chance of the enterprise being a bad one." He continued:—

"How, then, are you trying to get capitalists to aid you? By combinations which you feel require to be legalised, and which you admit to be at least open to suspicion, for these combinations closely resemble a lottery. I have not forgotten an expression used by the Government Commission, to the effect that a temptation should be held out to capitalists, and this temptation is nothing more or less than a gambling operation, appealing to their cupidity—to that insatiable desire which takes possession of certain imaginations to make fortunes without labour or industry. This is your new allurement; it is precisely the immoral practice which was condemned by the law of 1836. The capital you want is thus obtained; but intelligent and free capitalists have withdrawn, and you make an appeal to stupid capitalists and to speculation. Left to its own natural force, the Suez Canal Company would not find the capital it wants; and it is only by having recourse to what each of us admits to be a bad institution, to a lottery, to cupidity, to passion, to throwing on the gambling table a million a year, that you hope to get it."

At these words there was some interruption, and the Marquis d'Havrincourt observed that even if it were so it should not be avowed in a French Chamber. M. Jules Favre rejoined:—

"I confess I do not understand the interruption. What! there is a principle of equity and of morality at stake, and it must not be declared in a French Chamber! This would be singular cowardice, against which I protest. For my part I do not belong to such a school, and I leave the responsibility of such doctrines to those who do."

The reproach of being bad Frenchmen was, it may be remembered, also flung at those who opposed the Mexican expedition, and it is now repeated against all who condemn, not the canal of Suez, but the means by which money is sought to complete it. And if the enterprise be a bad one, a good Frenchman must not dare to say so. What strikes one as very strange in this affair is, that while all Frenchmen, with hardly one exception, are loud in their praise of the canal, express confidence in the wonderful results to their own country, find no words strong enough for their admiration of M. de Lesseps, and their disdain of those who hint the slightest doubt about it, they still, with enormous capital lying idle, and when this great work is by all accounts so near its completion, will not venture their money unless tempted by the bait of a lottery.

IMPORTANT QUESTION OF INTERNATIONAL LAW.

A lawsuit involving important questions of international law is now before the French tribunals. It is an action which the Government of the United States has brought against Messrs. Arman and Erlanger for the recovery of 2,800,000 francs, paid by Southern agents for vessels built at Bordeaux for the Confederates. The speech of Maitre Moreau for the plaintiffs contained the following allegations:—At first M. Arman gave out that the vessels he was building were for service between Shanghai and San Francisco, and the French Government, believing his story, gave permission to put guns on board. When Mr. Dayman, the American Minister, brought the matter before M. Drouyn de Lhuys, the latter affected a naive incredulity as to a deputy belonging to the majority in the Legislative Body being capable of acting at variance with the policy of neutrality proclaimed by the Government; but after some discussion the authority to arm the ships was withdrawn. M. Arman afterwards pretended that he had sold his ships to the Danish Government, but the Danish Minister denied the transaction. M. Arman then declared that he had parted with them to the Swedish Government, and offered to show the contracts to M. Drouyn de Lhuys. Count Manderstrom was written to, and gave the most categorical denial to the assertions of M. Arman. M. Arman next announced in the papers that his Yeddo and Osacca would sail for China shortly, and soon after he sold both ships to Prussia, and so was paid for them twice, by the Confederate agents and by the Prussian Government. As regards the two steam rams, he indulged in a variety of manœuvres. He sent one to Denmark which he knew would not be passed by the Danish Admiralty, and on its way back to Bordeaux, when in the hands of a Danish crew, it was transferred to the Confederates, armed at sea, and christened the Stonewall. The other steam-ram, the Cheops, M. Arman also disposed of to the Prussians and was paid twice for. As for the San Francisco and the Shanghai, which were built at Nantes, seeing that they could not be delivered to the Confederates, he sold them to the Peruvian Government. After quoting several despatches in proof of his statements, Master Moreau argued that the money paid to M. Arman should be refunded. According to the terms of the American Constitution, Congress alone has the power of levying taxes, paying land and sea forces, &c.; and no State in the Union can contract any alliance, issue letters of marque, or give bills of credit. It was clear that these statutes had been disregarded by the Confederate agents, and that Captain Bullock had no right to dispose of the money which he had paid to M. Arman and his associates. In accordance with international law, added Master Moreau, the Confederate States have never existed, and it would be impossible to prove that they were ever recognised by the French Government. The only official act which mentioned the Confederates was the Imperial decree of June, 1861. The case is still pending.

NORTH GERMANY.

HAMBURG, June 30.

The German Parliament having voted the sum of 16,000 dols. for the scientific expedition to observe the total eclipse of the sun on the 18th of August next, the members have been appointed by the Prussian Government, and will leave by the overland mail as soon as they have perfected the collection of instruments required for their different observations. The three principal members are Dr. Tietjen, of Berlin, Professor Sporer, of Anklam, and Dr. Engelmann, of Leipzig; these with their assistants will erect an observatory at Bombay, whilst Dr. Zenker and Dr. Vogel will proceed to Aden, where they are to take photographic views of the luminary at different stages of the eclipse.

At the annual general meeting of the Austrian Agricultural Society, held at Vienna last week, Dr. Carl von Scherzer gave some interesting details of the expedition to the Far East, most of which, however, are known to your readers from my former letters, and what is new would scarcely interest them, as it has reference to home produce that is suited for shipment to the East, and Eastern produce that might find a profitable market in Austria. He confirms my former statement that the expedition will consist of the Donau and Friedrich, which will be despatched from Trieste in the middle of August, and sail to Singapore, where they will be joined by the commercial members who go out at a later period by the overland mail. The corvette Friedrich is to remain on the station in China and Japan, whilst, after the conclusion of the treaties, the Donau will return home.

A large fire which broke out at Bremen on the 17th was only subdued towards evening, after having raged about eight hours. The conflagration began while taking cotton samples. Stephani Church, although several times caught by flames, was ultimately saved. Warehouses belonging to the firms of Fritze, Boys, Oething and Son, containing cotton and considerable stocks of fine tobacco, were consumed. Two large timber yards were also destroyed. The sparks were carried to the furthest houses in the suburbs. The amount of damage is estimated at a million and half thalers. All the principal insurance companies are involved in the loss.

H.M.'s screw-steamer Marnix, Captain Lieutenant P. Toutenhoofd, was to sail on the 1st of July, bound for Japan.

COMMERCIAL

Three cargoes of Rangoon rice, viz., 11,200 bags per Helios, 10,500 bags per Undine, and 8,700 bags per Victoria, have been sold this week at prices ranging from 12¾ to 13½ mks. bco. per centner. Clean grain inactive, but prices steady. More business has been done in pepper, and among the transactions were 250 bags of Penang sold at 3 5-16ths sch. bco. per lb. Cassia lignea is still rising, and commands readily 12⅞ to 12⅞ sch. bco. per lb. The tea market is firm, and some hundred chests have changed hands at full prices. Spelter neglected; there have been no sales, and the nominal value is 13 mks. 8 sch. bco., both for loco and delivery.

SHIPPING.

ARRIVED.—Voladora, from Manila; Meteore, from Batavia (4,700 hides); Christine, from Singapore (2,040 bags pepper).

SAILED.—Hong Kong, for Shanghai; Otto, to Singapore; Uranus, to Hong Kong.

HOLLAND.

ROTTERDAM, June 30.

The First and Second Chambers have adopted all the Budgets unanimously. The most interesting fact for your readers is the declaration on the part of the Government to the effect that, while its colonial policy will be progressive, no measure will be introduced without the sanction of Parliament. At the same time a liberal solution of the principal questions connected with cultivation will be aimed at. The Colonial Minister, who is a business man, despising long speeches, states that he will not apply preventive measures to the press. He is of opinion that the Government coffee-cultures may be made over to the public without prejudice to the Treasury.

Mr. de Casembroot has interpellated the Government respecting the expiration of the sugar contracts in Java. The Minister of the Colonies, in reply, referred to the published conditions of the concessions, and promised that a legal settlement should shortly be made respecting the question of sugar cultivation. This interpellation was evidently a trick of the Conservative party, who endeavoured to bind the Minister by promises.

The Dutch Trading Company has purchased a sugar plantation in the West Indies. I have reason to believe that it is the firm intention of some private and influential companies to follow the example given by the Trading Company. When the Budget for foreign affairs was brought forward the Minister of that department, Mr. Roest van Limburg stated that he had proposed to his Majesty the King to grant to the Consul-General in Japan, Mr. D. de Graeff van Polsbroek, the title of Minister-Resident. One of the members of the Second Chamber thereupon urged the necessity of granting the consul not only a higher title but also an increased salary, as the consul is now obliged to add to it 50 per cent. out of his own revenues. This fact, it was said, was not only humiliating for Holland, but also most disagreeable for Mr. Polsbroek. The same member recommended the despatch of more men-of-war to the China and Japan waters. He much regretted that no man-of-war was stationed there when the last disturbances occurred. At last Mr. de Casembroot proposed to increase the salary of Mr. van Polsbroek by the sum of 3,000f. Several members opposed this proposal, some of them being of opinion that the Minister had not been sufficiently long in office to judge of the necessity for this augmentation, but the majority of the speakers declared that they would not oppose a measure if it was brought forward with the next Budget to increase the salary of the consul by the sum he should think necessary. The result was that the amendment was out-voted by fifty-three against thirteen votes.

At the last meeting of the Dutch Literary Institute, held at Leyden, the following gentlemen were named foreign members:—Mr. J. W. Colenso, at Port Natal, and Mr. Karel Holle, in the Preanger regencies, Java.

In a former letter I stated that nothing had transpired in reference to the report of the commission appointed to examine the claims of Japanese traders who sustained losses by the last war. According to a statement of the Minister of Foreign Affairs, this report is now under examination by the Council of State, and will shortly be published. I hear that the claimants will have every reason to be satisfied.

Mr. J. Kruseman has been appointed Consul for Italy at Sourabaya.

At Arnheim a national exhibition will open to-morrow (July 1). The objects of industry and art are very numerous.

The examination of East India functionaries has taken place at Delft. For both the examinations thirty candidates presented themselves.

The Netherlands India Trading Bank held its annual meeting of shareholders on the 25th of June at Amsterdam. Mr. E. W. Cramerus stated that the balance showed a net profit for the year 1867 of f.310,810.34½, giving a dividend of 5½ per cent, or f.12.83 per share of 250f. The president regretted that the result was not more favourable, but stated that the business in Java promised soon to become more lucrative. In the place of Mr. E. W. Cramerus, president, who has resigned, Mr. A. Ph. J. Cramerus was appointed. Of course the result has given satisfaction in our financial circles, who are, however, much disappointed at the result obtained by the International Credit and Trading Bank, Rotterdam, of which the balance shows a deficit of f.612,561.46.

According to a Royal decree, the postage upon samples for and from India will be altered when forwarded either via Marseilles or Southampton. The samples will be liable to a postage of 10c. for every 40 grains, whilst they must not exceed 250 grains in weight, 44 inches in length, 22 inches in breadth, and 19 inches in height. No letters must be enclosed, and they are to be packed in such a manner that their contents can be easily examined. They must be prepaid. These stipulations will come into force for the July mail from Holland, and for the September mail from Java.

Some time ago I wrote in reference to a suit in which our hereditary Prince was involved. It was rather a scandalous matter, and much was said thereabout in the French papers. It was stated that H.R.H. bought a seat in the Ardennes, which he paid for with acceptances, which he was unable to honour when they fell due. Of course an action was brought against the Prince, and for the defence it was alleged that the seat was not worth one-third of the amount (300,000 francs) for which the Prince bought it. It being publicly rumoured that the life of the Prince is most luxurious, and that his morals are far from being unexceptionable, he was exposed to very severe attacks from the press. The matter, however, appears to have been much exaggerated. At any rate, the Court of Metz acquitted the Prince, admitting that he was deceived. I have thought it necessary to state these facts, because rumour has given other versions of this scandal.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

COFFEE.—On the 24th of June the Trading Company held its auction, at which 92,386 b. Java and Padang were offered, and sold at full prices, notwithstanding that the market was most inactive previously to the auction. Some specked sorts excepted, all the lots were sold above the valuation. Good ordinary greenish and white greenish Java sold at 34½c. to 34½c., and fine good ordinary do. 35c. to 36c. Undoubtedly the market was firmer in consequenee of the news published by the official Staats Courant, stating that from the crop of Java coffee for this year no more than 600,000 pic. would be delivered to the Government, the crop having partly miscarried by the bad weather. From the quantities bought at auction nothing is offered; but there is, however, now a good demand for ordinary Java.

RAW SUGAR.—The market is inactive; a few unimportant lots were sold at 1½f. under May, and amongst them appear 618 mats Batavia, ex Eastern Empire, No. 10½, at 29½f. Holders decline to bring their lots into the market, and cargoes are all laid up in waiting for an improved market. The stock on the six principal markets of Europe is very moderate—1,196 tons less than in 1867, and 1,845 tons less than in 1866. The Dutch stock in bond was on the 15th of June 44,831,949 ko.

RICE.—Some important transactions have taken place here as well as at Amsterdam; 1,131 b. Java, ex Baltimore, were sold at 8½f.; 1,000 b., ex Aria and Betsy, at 8⅜f.; 1,030 b. Indramayoe table, ex Otto, at 8½f.; 530 b. Java, ex Matador, at 8½f.; 649 b. do., ex Maria Diederika and Amstelstroom, at 7⅞f.; and 781 b. Java, ex Matador, at 8½f.

SPICES.—Still remain dull. Mace: 11 casks, ex Maria Adriana, were sold at prices that did not transpire. On the 2nd of July 108 casks, ex Pieter, and 41 ditto, ex Thaddie, will be brought in the market.

DRUGS.—The market is inactive. Camphor is quoted at 78c., both for China and Japan sorts. Cubebs: The parcels offered were not sold, the buyers refusing the prices asked. Cassia Lignea is quoted 74c. to 76c. Cassia Vera: 544 b. Padang, ex Padang Packet, were sold at firm prices. Oleum Cassia is offered at 4f.; Oleum Cajaputi at f.2.10 per bottle. Gummi Benzoe: Holders decline to operate without an advance. Preserved Ginger is quoted at 74c. to 80c., according to quality. Vanilla: In demand at the low prices. Gutta Percha: 5,000 ks., ex Maria Sarah, were sold at prices that did not transpire.

MANILA CIGARS.—On the 17th June were sold at auction 30 mille 2a Cavitas 1867, at 35f.; 195 mille 2a Habanas 1866, more or less damaged, at 14¾f. to 19¾f. The market closed firm.

TOBACCO.—Java leaves: In anticipation of the auctions, which are to be held on the 9th July, when 3,573 bags Java and 89 bags Sumatra of several trade marks will be offered, the market is inactive. Only 410 bales Java, A. J. Walker, ex Twee Gezusters and Louis Henry, have changed hands. Manila: On the 1st of August will be offered by inscription the crop of 1868-9, 1870, and 1871.

TEA.—On the 19th inst. were sold by the Trading Company 403/12 chests Japan, at 80c. to 81c., and by private contract 30/4, 326/8 chests China Congou, from 78c. to 117c., and 7,607/4, 149/8, 498/12, and 100/16 chests Java, as follows:—

INDIGO.—The tone of the market remains very favourable. Important parcels, together 292 chests, are in the market; the quality is fine, so that high prices will be paid.

BANCA TIN.—The market is dull. The Trading Company has offered the whole quantity of 40,489 slabs, bought in at its last auction, but no biddings are accepted under 55f. The buyers decline to pay that price, so that only 2,500 slabs have been sold at f.55.05. Since 1,800 slabs (private) were sold at 54½f.; the market closes dull and inactive, the nominal quotation being 53½f. to 54f. The measure of the Trading Company has made a very bad impression.

HIDES.—The transactions since my last report include 349 Batavia Buffalo, ex Maria Adriana; 800 Samarang Rinder, ex Ormelie; 2,850 Padang Rinder, ex Padang Packet; 838 Sourabaya Rinder, ex J. C. Schotel at 39⅜ to 46½ cents; 1,815 Batavia Buffalo, ex Tweelingen at 38 cents.

MONETARY AND COMMERCIAL.

Operations in home funds have been rather dull during the last few days, and the money market has been inactive; the principal cause of which is the desire to take advantage of the high price to realise. The chief business in the stock market has been in Austrian funds.

During the last few days there has been more demand for money; the bank rate of discount has remained unaltered; and in the open market money may be had at 3 per cent.

UNITED STATES.

The San Francisco papers are urging the necessity of extending the protection of the laws to the Chinese immigrants who have settled among them, with a view to cultivating friendly relations and promoting commerce with the Chinese Empire. Hitherto the Chinese, who are among the most peaceable, industrious, and harmless portion of the population of California, have been treated with utter brutality by the coarser portion of the people, and have been virtually denied the protection of the laws. It begins to be feared that the Chinese Embassy now in this country may make such report of these facts to the home authorities as will check emigration to California, and thus seriously damage the industry and labour of the State. There are about 60,000 Chinese on the Pacific coast.

The President has declared that the American naval authorities will retain the ram Stonewall in Japan until the Japanese revolution shall have ended.

THE CHINESE EMBASSY.

The Chinese Embassy are still in Washington. On the 9th of June they visited the hall of the House of Representatives in response to an invitation by that body. After complimentary speeches by Speaker Colfax and Mr. Burlingame, the Celestials, eight in number, were introduced to the members, and a general handshaking occurred. The attire of the Celestials gave a "fancy dress" appearance to the scene, and their visit agreeably enlivened the proceedings. On retiring they were conducted through the Capitol buildings and shown whatever was interesting there. In the evening they attended a State dinner given by the President, at which the diplomatic officers, Reverdy Johnson, of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations, and General Banks, of the House Foreign Committee, were also present. The ambassadors have also been received by the Senate. They were marshalled into the Chamber by Messrs. Sumner, Hendricks and Sherman. Mr. Sumner, advancing within the rail, said, "Mr. President: We present Mr. Burlingame and his associates of the Chinese Embassy to the Senate of the United States." Mr. Wade's reply was equally brief. The visitors were conducted to seats, but, business being suspended, they rose and shook hands with the senators severally. They remained in the Chamber about twenty minutes, bowing and shaking hands, and talking a little; they then retired. The galleries were crowded with women during the reception.

They have since visited Mount Vernon and other places of interest near the capital. The correspondent of the Standard says:—"Mr. M'Culloch was the guide, philosopher, and friend of their Celestial Highnesses during their journey to the tomb of the great American Wang; he ordered a revenue steamer to be fitted up, and numerous distinguished nobodies to be invited. The ambassadors evinced considerable familiarity with the historic territory over which they were passing, talked intelligently of the battles that had made the Potomac famous, and betrayed a singularly accurate knowledge of the life, services, and character of Washington. Arrived at Mount Vernon, they were landed (observing the usual forms as to precedence of rank) in small boats; they spent some hours in wandering about the grounds, in examining the old Washington mansion and the tomb, and in collecting souvenirs of the visit. They returned to the capital at about six o'clock, partaking on the way down of a very fair collation, and growing extremely enthusiastic under the influence of Veuve Clicquot. (A word in confidence. The Embassy's fondness for the widow is something remarkable. I am afraid that their landlord's bill for champagne alone is something strong in three figures.) Our visitors betray great interest in mechanical and scientific inventions and discoveries; a steamer's machinery is to them a perpetual wonder, they betray, with regard to the steam engine, a curiosity almost childish."

The Chinese envoys will soon visit Cuba; while there they will institute a thorough investigation of the coolie traffic. It is now openly asserted that the coolie trade, as at present sustained by Cuban planters, is as bad as the slave trade; that few of the Asiatics leave their homes voluntarily; that monstrous deceit is used to inveigle them into the clutches of speculators. As not less than 15,000 coolies reached Cuba during 1867, and as the stream of the traffic is beginning to turn towards the United States, it will be seen that the ambassadors can examine no more importaht subject than this of the coolie trade.

PARLIAMENT.

[The following is an epitome of the more important debates and proceedings since our last issue, the preference being given to subjects of special interest to our readers.]

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

COOLIE EMIGRATION.

(June 25th.) Mr. W. E. FORSTER asked the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs whether Her Majesty's Government was taking any steps in conjunction with France and other civilised Powers to induce the Portuguese Government to stop the slave trade carried on between Macao and Cuba and Peru, under the name of coolie emigration.

Lord STANLEY: The abuses attending on the practice of coolie emigration from Macao are grave and irremediable. We have from time to time brought the matter under the notice of the Portuguese Government, and we have invited Portugal to co-operate with France, England, and other Powers in endeavouring to come to some satisfactory arrangement with the Chinese Government on the question of coolie emigration generally. To that communication we have as yet received no answer from the Portuguese Government. With reference to the parallel drawn by the hon. member between the coolie emigration and the slave trade, I may remind him that in the case of the slave trade, wherever it is carried on, we have the right to interfere by treaty with Portugal and the other Powers. In the case of the coolie emigration we have no right of interference whatever, except that right which every Government has, to give such friendly advice to any other Government as it thinks fit. But beyond that we have no power.

TELEGRAPHIC COMMUNICATION WITH INDIA AND CHINA.

(June 26th.) Lord W. HAY drew attention to the subject of telegraphic communication with the East. He said it might seem surprising that the enterprise of the present age had not supplied telegraphic communication between this country and India, but such was the fact. The reason was plain. It was true that in 1859 a company was formed to effect telegraphic communication with Bombay by way of Suez and Aden, and the Imperial Government gave a guarantee of £36,000 a year for forty years. But no single message was ever sent by that line. The Government having thus burned their fingers refused to give any more guarantees, and then the matter was taken up by the Government of India, and a line was made from Kurrachee through the Persian Gulf to Constantinople, and thence the communication was over the European lines, and the total cost was £850,000. The income was represented to be £95,000, and the working expenses £63,000, but other expenses brought up the amount to £91,600 a-year, so that reckoning interest on the outlay the line was worked at a loss of £40,000 a-year. It was said that there was another line by the Black Sea and through Russia, and that was true, and no doubt it would be worked with success; but it passed through a country which was the rival of England in India. He concluded by moving an address for copies of any correspondence which may have passed between the Secretary of State for India and the local authorities relative to the proposed deep sea line from Bombay to Kurrachee, and the sanctioned lines from Gwadur to Jask, and from Jask to Bushire.

Sir S. NORTHCOTE said there would be no objection to the production of the papers moved for. The noble lord had underrated what was being done. The Government were in point of fact taking steps for an alternative line. They had already two lines in operation, the Hindoo Ottoman line, and the one through Prussia, Russia, and Persia, which was now nearly completed, and although the latter—Siemen's line—was still imperfect, a message had been received by it from Teheran in five hours. Steps were being taken to improve the line, and before this time next year they might expect to see it in full working order, so that they had now the prospect of an alternative line along the Persian Gulf, and on to Kurrachee, and the company were to confine their attention to the through traffic. He thought that in ordinary times, assuming that there were no political complications, these two lines would supply all the wants of the community with regard to telegraphic communication with India. The noble lord might say that those political complications were exactly the point to which he wished to draw attention. He (Sir S. Northcote), however, thought there was such a thing as being over wise and over prudent in these matters, and that they should give their attention to improving the lines they had rather than to run about to meet imaginary evils. The Imperial Government had come to the conclusion that submarine cables were not proper subjects for imperial guarantees, nor would he and the Indian Council sanction any guarantee out of the Indian revenue. He had no doubt the time would come when the demands of commerce would lead to the construction of sectional lines, and thus to an improvement of the communication, but it would be unwise of the Government to break off from an undertaking they were already engaged in in order to enter into something new.

Mr. CRAWFORD blamed the Government for not paying more attention to the deputation on this subject from the City. The views of those who were urging on the Government an independent line of telegraph communication with India were that it was dangerous to trust to a system any portion of which was under the control of foreign Governments. The exigencies of war would immediately affect telegraphic communication in Europe. They knew by experience that commercial messages from England were examined en route on the Continent, and in some instances were handed to the Minister of Trade. They did not charge the Government with supineness, but with supporting a wrong system. In regard to management, the business at present was carried on with the greatest carelessness, and he knew of more than one instance in which messages had been wholly perverted or rendered unintelligible. The mercantile body had lost all confidence in the present system of transmitting telegrams through the Continent. In regard to the Egyptian line, they believed its advantages would be such as to attract almost all the business, but inasmuch as the Government were to have the preference in sending messages, they ought to contribute something to it. They also felt that it was possible that if the line paid well, the Egyptian Government would take it out of their hands. On those grounds they considered that the Government ought to step in and assist them. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. A. SEYMOUR expressed his astonishment that the Indian officials, in their communications on this subject, should evince so much ignorance in respect to the progress of telegraphy. Each of the telegraph lines proposed were liable to be cut off in the event of war, or taken up by foreign governments, and if they escaped that they both merged into a line which passed through a desolate and savage district by the Persian Gulf, in which a sort of black mail had to be paid to prevent injury to the line. He was surprised to hear that these two lines offered the only alternative when there was already a telegraph to Russia by the Black Sea which could be made available. He characterised the propositions of Mr. Stiff to establish a coast line via Aden, through an inhospitable region, and so on by the Persian Gulf to Bombay, when they could have a far better line by submarine cable from Alexandria to Bombay, as altogether preposterous.

Sir H. RAWLINSON could not regard either the Turkish or the Russian line as satisfactory. It was impossible that the line from Constantinople through Mesopotamia to the Persian Gulf could ever be worked effectively, while, on the other hand, although the other line worked well enough, yet it was wholly under the control of Russia, and in the event of war would be useless to us. He thought it only reasonable that when an independent company proposed to make a submarine line from Suez to Bombay the interest on the capital ought to be guaranteed to a certain extent by the Government.

Mr. GRAHAM confirmed the statement made by Mr. Crawford to the effect that commercial messages were examined on the Continent, to the damage of English merchants. He strongly urged a government guarantee for the Red Sea line, because no private company would undertake it while there was a rival line through Persia which was in the hands of the Government.

The motion was then withdrawn, Sir S. NORTHCOTE undertaking to produce the papers asked for as an unopposed return.

LIGHTHOUSE ON THE GREAT BASSES.

(June 29th.) In reply to Mr. HANBURY TRACY,

Mr. CAVE said: It is not the fact that the shipping of the commerce of the East has been subject to a charge for a lighthouse on the Great Basses without any return or advantage. No charge has been made in respect of any lighthouse there. In 1863 a light ship was placed at the Little Basses, and since then a toll of one penny per ton has been imposed on all ships passing the light which enter or leave British ports. The nett receipts from this toll are about £7,500 a-year. Out of this has to be paid interest on the construction of the light ship, and of a spare light ship, and the expenses of maintenance, including the crew and tender. As regards the erection of a lighthouse on the Great Basses, the Ceylon Government have sent home certain proposals which are totally inadequate. Careful plans and estimates have, however, been prepared by Colonel Frazer, who erected a lighthouse on the Alguoda Reef, Bay of Bengal, and by Mr. Douglas, engineer of the Trinity House, and these are now under the consideration of the Colonial Office, Board of Trade, and Trinity House. There are considerable difficulties both as to the work itself and the mode of providing funds. A correspondence on this subject will be found in a return laid on the table in 1863.

THE CHINA AND JAPAN LEGATIONS.

(July 3rd.) In Committee of Supply, on the vote for the Civil Service Estimatas, Colonel SYKES, in rising to move that the salary of the Envoy and Chief Superintendent at Peking be put on the same footing as that of the Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary and Consul-General in Japan, said he should lament exceedingly if it was thought that in making this motion he desired to depreciate the services of Sir Rutherford Alcock, our Envoy in Peking. There was a net increase of £16,632 this year for the diplomatic service of China, Japan, and Siam, the total amount being £100,983 last year and £117,615 for the coming year. He contended that the salary was now disproportionate to the duties of the Envoy. There was no such thing as Executive Government in China. The salary of our Envoy and Chief Superintendent at Peking was £6,000, which was a large sum compared with the salaries and allowances of our Envoys and diplomatic agents in different parts of the world. Sir H. Parkes, our Envoy Extraordinary in Japan, whose life was daily exposed to the utmost risk from the fanaticism of the Japanese people, received £4,000 a-year. The Emperor of China was a child; there was no executive power at Peking; almost every province was in a state of rebellion: the treaty of Tientsin was not carried out through the weakness of the Government; and the remonstrances of our Envoy, Sir R. Alcock, were wholly without effect. The honourable and gallant member, amid the impatience of the House, quoted documents to show that rebellion raged in the province of Shang-tung, and that large proportions of the country were in the possession of the insurgents; and he argued, that under the circumstances in which he was placed the position of our Envoy at Peking was an undignified one. In conclusion, while professing the highest respect for Sir R. Alcock, the honourable and gallant member said he felt it his duty to move that the Minister's salary be reduced from £6,000 to £4,000.

Lord STANLEY could hardly think the hon. and gallant gentleman was in earnest in making that proposition. [Colonel SYKES: "Quite."] (A laugh.) Nobody understood Chinese affairs better than the hon. and gallant member; but when he urged that the salaries of our Ministers at Peking and Japan should be the same, he forgot that our commercial interest was exactly ten times greater in China than in Japan. That was one ground of the difference between the salaries of the two Ministers. Again, China was a very distant country, and every article of European comfort was very expensive at Peking, where there were no hotels; and they could not expect to get service there at the same price as in Europe. As to the weakness of the Chinese Government, with that we had nothing to do. If the Taipings got the upper hand, which they had not done, and did not seem likely to do, we should recognise them as the de facto Government. With regard to the execution treaty of Tientsin, there was a Minister from the Court of Peking accredited to Europe to take that question into consideration. That, therefore, was no reason for diminishing the salary of our Minister in China. £6,000 a-year was not an unreasonable sum to pay the person who at the other end of the world was charged with commercial interests involving £60,000,000 or £70,000,000, and which were rapidly increasing.

Mr. Alderman LUSK said the mission appeared to be altogether one of a very expensive character.

Mr. LABOUCHERE hoped the honourable and gallant member would not press his amendment to a division. The sum proposed was by no means too great for a Minister in China.

The amendment was eventually withdrawn.

Colonel SYKES then moved that the rate be reduced by the sum of £500, the salary of the Vice-Consul at Taku. The place, he said, consisted of little more than a mud shore and a few huts, and literally contained no house in which a European gentleman could reside.

Lord STANLEY pointed out that Taku was the port of Tientsin, and that the last returns showed that ninety-two British ships had been cleared and ninety-one entered there, with a tonnage of about 92,000. The trade, which was a growing trade, was only just beginning to be developed, and a salary of £500 a year to the person who looked after our interests at Taku was, under the circumstances, he thought, not too much.

The amendment was negatived without a division, although the House was cleared for one, and the vote was agreed to.

A BILL introduced by Sir J. Fergusson into the House of Commons "for removing doubts as to the validity of certain marriages between British subjects in China and elsewhere, and for amending the law relating to the marriage of British subjects in foreign countries," has been read a third time and passed.

LONDON, SATURDAY, JULY 4, 1868.

LABUAN.

THE recent death of RAJAH BROOKE, the first Governor of Labuan (appointed on the purchase of the island from the Sultan of BORNEO), has to some extent directed public attention to a colony which as a rule has afforded little matter for discussion. Since Sir JAMES BROOKE's term of office the only attempt to develop the resources of the island has been the effort made under the auspices of the unfortunate Labuan Coal Company to realise the carboniferous wealth of its soil. The operations of this company at first gave rise to expectations of a brilliant commercial future, but its subsequent embarrassments and ultimate failure appear to have produced a corresponding reaction, and the last official report received from Mr. Low (lately Acting-Governor) certainly does not indicate any remarkable degree of prosperity. This document, which is embodied in a recently published Blue-book entitled "Reports "Exhibiting the Present State of Her MAJESTY'S Colonial "Possessions," sets forth that the revenue for the year 1866 amounted to £3,913 0s. 6½d., against which there was an expenditure to be provided for of £6,959 19s. 8d. This, we are told, was rendered heavier than it would otherwise have been by the necessity of increasing the police force, and by the "purchase of a fire-proof safe for the better security of the books and papers of the Treasury"—a piece of extravagance involving an outlay of £67. The population is stated at 3,828, exclusive of military and convicts; but of course this includes but a handful of Europeans. A little further on we find it recorded that "two out of the four European female inhabitants died," a statement indicating that the society of ladies is a luxury not enjoyed to excess by the colonists. The value of imports for the year is estimated at £104,190, and of exports at £58,536, the latter being inclusive of 11,317 tons of coal extracted from the mines. A church was completed and consecrated during the year, about half the cost of which was contributed by the residents. In this report nothing is said as to the means by which the deficit for the year—rather an alarming one—was to be met.

Mr. POPE HENNESSY has apparently infused new life into the sleepy little colony. Late accounts tell of the active resumption of public works; a wharf, a market, a school, and a hospital, are in course of construction, while gas and water-works are promised, and the cost of all these it is said will be more than met by the proceeds of the tobacco and pawnbroking farms. Under this energetic administration trade seems to be reviving; a Chamber of Commerce has been started, a local bank is to be formed, and the commencement of operations by the new coal company seems the only thing wanting to effect a complete and most salutary change in the condition of the place. Governor HENNESSY, we understand, shows the greatest personal interest in the affairs of the colony; he appears already to have achieved great popularity, and his recent marriage may be regarded as an additional bond of union between himself and the community. Altogether the future prospect of Labuan seems highly encouraging; but it is to be hoped that Mr. HENNESSY, having the terrible example of Hong Kong before his eyes, will not at first launch out too extravagantly into expensive public works, and so run the risk of getting into debt. On the other hand, he will do well not to allow his balance-sheet to show too large a surplus, or else he will have Her MAJESTY'S Government down on him for a "military contribution," and when once saddled with that he may bid a long farewell both to public prosperity and individual peace of mind.

THE NEW TREATY BETWEEN RUSSIA AND JAPAN.

THE Journal de St. Petersbourg gives the French text of the new treaty concluded between Russia and Japan, the plenipotentiaries being respectively the collegial councillor, EUGENE BUTZOW, Russian Consul at Hakodadi, and the Japanese Commissioner and member of the Department for Foreign Affairs, IDZURI KAGA NO-KAMI. Art. III. stipulates that the payments for authorisations delivered to the Custom-house, contained in Art. VI. of the previous treaty, are abrogated. Art. IV. states that the Government of Japan engages to erect warehouses in which foreign goods may be deposited in bond, the Government being responsible for their safety, except in cases of fire. Merchants may export such goods from the bonded warehouses without payment of any charge but rent, the amount of which is to be fixed by common consent. Art. VI. says:—"In the desire to abolish the obstacles opposed by Art. XIII. "of the treaty of 1858, to the free circulation of foreign "coin in Japan, the Government of that country will introduce the needful alterations and improvements in the currency within the space of one year from the date of this "treaty. All foreign coins, as well as bullion, shall in "future be received at the Imperial mint and exchanged "for Japanese currency." Art. IX. grants unrestricted permission to Russians and natives of Japan to buy and sell without the interference of any officials. By Art X. Japanese subjects provided with passports may go to Russia for educational and scientific purposes, or engage themselves in any capacity on board Russian vessels. In Art. XI. the Government of Japan engages to erect a suitable number of beacons and lighthouses on their coasts and at the entrance of the principal ports and harbours for the protection and safety of navigation. The treaty was signed at Yedo on the 11th (23rd) of December, 1867. Appended to it is the new and revised tariff of duties on articles of merchandise imported and exported.

THE CHINESE EMBASSY AT WASHINGTON.

(From the London and China Express, July 3.)

UNDER the heading of "Latest Intelligence," our issue of the 18th June contained a detailed account of the reception of Mr. BURLINGHAME'S mission by President JOHNSON; it was extracted from a New York journal, and came to hand just in time to allow of its insertion, without comment, in that part of our paper. The London and China Herald, in its issue of the 19th, published an article not only throwing discredit on the truthfulness of this account, but casting aspersions of the gravest character on our motives for publishing it: the writer gratuitously assuming that the report must have been furnished by "some fervent follower of the Embassy" as a bribe to support its policy, and inferring that the London and China Express was "hired and primed to injure the mercantile community of China." So unfounded and injurious an imputation could not be allowed to pass unnoticed; and the proprietors of this journal therefore instructed their solicitor to demand a complete retractation, which we are assured will appear in this day's issue of the Herald.

Although determined not to permit any calumnious statements regarding ourselves to pass unchallenged, we have no fear of their doing us any injury by shaking the confidence of our readers. As for this BURLINGHAME Mission, we have repeatedly and clearly expressed our distrust of it, and the insertion of an item of news regarding its progress could hardly be construed into evidence of a change of opinion by any person possessed of average reasoning powers. And as regards the perfect independence and impartiality with which our paper has always been conducted, we can fearlessly point to the experience of the past ten years, and leave our readers to judge for themselves.

The amende to be inserted in the Herald of this date is in the following terms:—

"RECEPTION OF THE BURLINGHAME MISSION AT WASHINGTON.

"Exception having been taken by our contemporary the London and China Express to a paragraph under the above heading, which appeared in our last issue, we beg to withdraw the whole of the statements referred to, as we had no intention to convey the meaning that has been given to them."

THE TELEGRAPH TO INDIA.

THE subject of telegraphic communication with India and the East has again been debated in the House of Commons, and once more with a most unsatisfactory result. The subject was started by Lord WILLIAM HAY, who called attention to the defects of our present telegraphic communications with India, objecting chiefly to their route lying through inhospitable countries, liable to be interrupted by political complications. He strongly urged on the Government the construction of an alternative line by the Red Sea, which would be under our own control. To this, Sir STAFFORD NORTHCOTE replied that we had already two lines of communication—the Indo-Ottoman line and SIEMEN'S line by Prussia, Russia, and Persia. Both of them were in course of improvement, and very shortly would fully suffice for all our needs. A line entirely under British control he regarded as a mere chimera, and among other objections he pointed out that it would involve a submarine cable carried round by Gibraltar down the Mediterranean. The Government had declined to give any assistance to a Red Sea line, for the principle of an Imperial guarantee was abandoned, and they were unwilling to charge the Indian revenues with the cost of such a project. This, however, was not received as conclusive. Mr. CRAWFORD put forward the desire of the commercial community for independent telegraphic communication on the ground of the frequent tampering with messages by the present lines. Mr. SEYMOUR likewise supported the Red Sea line, and Sir H. RAWLINSON expressed his distrust of both the existing lines. The Turkish line never could be made efficient, and the line by Prussia and Russia would fail us in time of war or political complications. He was in favour of a line by Suez to Bombay, though he allowed that this project was not free from complications, either political or financial. But all argument was useless—the Government remained apparently deaf—certainly dumb; so the matter dropped.

In the meanwhile complaints of the defects of the present system are louder than ever, and the supporters of the Red Sea project not unreasonably accuse Sir STAFFORD NORTHCOTE of unjust partiality, for, while throwing cold water on their scheme, he is all the time aiding the rival plan by adding to the existing Indian lines between Tehran and Kurrachee; thus, in fact, completing the last link of the chain which commences in North Germany. No doubt the SIEMEN'S line will be a great convenience, but it is justly urged that when it is complete the Turkish line will fall out of use altogether, and our whole telegraphic communication with India will then be in the power of Russia, or of her puppet Persia—a result the reverse of desirable. No doubt, the Governments of Prussia and the Czar have "formally declared" that, in the event of war, the transmission of commercial messages shall not be interrupted; but in a national and political point of view, this pledge, even if fulfilled to the letter, still leaves the necessity for a submarine wire via Egypt as urgent a necessity as ever. Apparently, it will have to be carried out by commercial enterprise pure and simple. We very recently announced the formation of a company to perfect the Mediterranean section of the telegraphic system; the cable across the Straits of Messina, in connection with the direct line between Susa and Alexandria, has been successfully laid; and we believe that another associated body of capitalists will come before the public very shortly, to invite co-operation in laying a cable from Suez to Kurrachee. Sooner or later, therefore, we may expect to see the needful work accomplished; but no thanks will be due to the Government, which has from first to last thrown every difficulty in the way of the projectors.

THE death of the engineer who went to Peking last year, in charge of a gas apparatus intended to light the yamun of a mandarin there, has necessitated the appointment of another gentleman, who left by last mail, to succeed him and complete the work.

THE KING of SIAM has conferred upon Sir JOHN BOWRING the insignia of the Order of the White Elephant.

THE P. AND O. COMPANY AND THE BRINDISI ROUTE.

WE have from time to time given extracts from several letters written by the Florence correspondent of The Times, advocating the adoption of the Brindisi route for the India mails. A recent communication from this source asserts that, owing to the success of the Fell Railway, the Peninsular and Oriental Company have awakened to the necessity of doing something in the direction of the Brindisi route; that a proposition from the MINISTER of PUBLIC WORKS in Italy three years ago to apply 6,000,000f. to the improvement of the port of Brindisi, on the stipulated condition that the company should undertake to run boats between that harbour and Alexandria, had been summarily rejected by its official representative; but that the company has now applied to the Italian Government for facilities to be afforded to an engineer it is about to send out to inspect the railway from Susa to Brindisi. These statements have elicited from the secretary of the company, Mr. C. W. HOWELL, a letter to The Times, stating that, although the directors have always watched the progress of the Brindisi route, in order to be able to meet any application from the English Government respecting a postal communication between that port and Alexandria, they have never received any proposition of the nature described from the Italian Government; that they have not made any application to that Government, or in any other quarter, on the subject of an engineer to inspect the line from Susa; and that they have not had such a step in contemplation at all. As there is very little probability of Her MAJESTY'S Government using any exertion to effect a change of route, we may safely assume that Marseilles will still be the port of departure for a long while to come.

PROPOSED COLONIAL SOCIETY.

A RESOLUTION has been come to by a number of highly influential persons to form a society for the purpose of promoting a better knowledge and understanding of the colonies and foreign dependencies of this country, and of cementing the connection and good feeling between them and the mother country. The intention is to establish in London a "ROYAL COLONIAL SOCIETY," consisting of Fellows and a Council, which shall occupy, as regards the colonies, the position filled by the Royal Society with regard to science, or the Royal Geographical Society with regard to geography. In this society each colony will be represented, as well as India, Canada, &c. It is proposed eventually to open a lecture hall, a library and reading room, and a museum of science, industry, and commerce, where the natural and other products and resources of the several colonies will be exhibited, and their various uses and capabilities explained. The society will also afford opportunities for the reading of papers and the holding of discussions upon colonial subjects generally, and will undertake those investigations in connection with the colonies, which are carried out in a more general field by the Royal Society, the Royal Geographical Society, the Society of Arts, and by similar bodies in Great Britain. It is justly considered essential to the well being of the society that it should be entirely non-political, and any organisation for political purposes will be forbidden by the fundamental rules.

In furtherance of this project, a meeting was held at Willis's Rooms, on the 26th of June, at which Lord BURY (who takes a leading part in the development of the scheme, and will probably be President of the Society) took the chair. After some preliminary discussion, it was unanimously decided to take immediate steps to carry the project into execution, and a provisional committee was appointed for that purpose, which includes the Duke of MANCHESTER, the Marquis of NORMANBY, the Rt. Hon. CHICHESTER FORTESCUE, Mr. LEONARD WRAY, and other influential names, with power to add to their number. Already, we are informed, some two hundred members of the House of Commons and a large number of Peers have promised to enrol themselves as Fellows, and it is understood that Her MAJESTY and the PRINCE of WALES will be Patrons. A pamphlet setting forth the objects of the society is in preparation, and will be widely circulated in the various colonies and dependencies, so as to afford the residents therein an opportunity of giving their support to the society and profiting by its advantages. One of the principal motives of the society is to procure a full and impartial hearing in this country, both in and out of Parliament, for all colonial questions of importance; and with such a powerful organisation as we have described, its influence for the redress of genuine colonial grievances will be all but irresistible. Strange to say, this important movement has been entirely ignored by the greater portion of the English press, while the two or three journals that have noticed it have confined themselves to a few brief remarks.

EXTENSION OF THE INDIA AND CHINA SERVICE OF THE MESSAGERIES IMPERIALES.

THE French company has got its increased grant through the Corps Legislatif, with a majority of one hundred and ninety-three against two negative votes. There was no special opposition to the proposal, except that of the Objector-General, M. POUYER QUERTIER, and of M. GARNIER PAGES, who opposed on account of the state of the finances of the country; the ground thus taken was only too strong, but the reasoning upon it was fallacious, as finances are not to be bolstered by cutting down productive, but by lopping unproductive limbs. The Opposition speeches, divested of verbiage, may be given in ten lines, and the Ministerial reply may be condensed into about the same space. The first-named deputy wanted the subject deferred to next year, because the company was doing well, and paying 10 to 11 per cent. dividend per annum, and, therefore, could afford to wait; besides which, he said that the French company was paid by the State at double the rate of the Peninsular and Oriental Company. "And for what result?" he asked. "Have "you two hundred millions of subjects in India? Have you "Australia to supply, and all those numberless interests "which demand England's attention in the East? What "does the company of the Messageries Imperiales in the East? "It developes English commerce. It is principally British "merchandise which it carries out and home. Is it natural "that we should not protest, when we know that with all "these subventions and guarantees our internal navigation "might have been completed? Yes, you might have made "the fortune of the whole country instead of only that of a "single company!" "The English company receives "£400,000, which, under certain circumstances, may be in-"creased to £500,000, for the Indian and Australian service, "while ours receives £700,000 for a much less extended and "less necessary service." The objection of M. GARNIER PAGES was based on very different grounds, and he only echoed the general sentiment of all independent men in France when he said:—"It is not the first time that all financial questions "have been delayed till the end of the session. Such a pro-"cess ought not to be repeated. A Bill relating to local "roads, Bills relating to railroads, to transatlantic steamers, "and budgets, all to be examined at once! Is it possible? "I demand, therefore, that the subject stand over till next "session, in order to establish a precedent, to make an ex-"ample, to prevent all important questions being huddled "together at the end of the session." Of course M. GARNIER PAGES was met at once by the order of the day being moved against him.

As regards the statements of M. POUYER QUERTIER, M. le Vicomte REILLE, reporter of the committee, and the only speaker on the other side, said "That the difference "between the rate of subvention of the English and "French companies was not so large as it might appear, "as out of the 483,000 leagues run over by the P. and O. "Company, 151,000 were in the seas of Europe, that is to "say, between Marseilles, Southampton, and Alexandria, and "these voyages cost much less than those in the India and "China seas. Coal cost in England sixteen to seventeen "francs, in the Mediterranean about thirty, and in India "seventy francs; the pay of the officers and men, every-"thing in fact, costs twice as much in the Eastern seas." The European service of the Messageries Imperiales is set down at 24,000 leagues, and in each case it is taken at half the rate of the oceanic service, and the parallel is pursued in the following manner:—"Moreover, the services are of a "different nature; between Suez and Bombay the English "packets have no competition—they concur with the Indian "lines of railway; it is the greatest and most frequented "postal communication which England possesses, and this "service should not be taken at more than three-quarters of "its length in the general subvention. So with respect to "the line from Bombay to Hong Kong, the English Post-"office objected to taking the line from Bombay to Point de "Galle into account; the company maintained that unless "it were included it could not accept the arrangement. It "is the route of the opium trade of the Malabar coast, and "yields the company large profits. Again, the French "company is bound to carry gratuitously, or at reduced rates, "various persons, such as missionaries, sisters, and others, "and the charge under this head amounted last year to "£28,000, and for the extended service it would average "£40,000."

By this clever pinching a little here and squeezing a bit there the reporter brings the French subvention to f.38.89 per league, the English being f.38.57, while the latter may be increased by its guarantee to f.45.86. The calculation smacks not a little of the friendly actuary, the fact being that the English subsidy can in no case exceed 7s. 8d. per mile, or 29 francs the marine league. "The subvention "proposed," said M. le Vicomte REILLE, "is in no way ex-"orbitant; we have a great interest in sustaining the company "on a footing of equality with the English company if we "would not be dependent on England for our commercial "postal communication. As to the urgency—if we lose one "or two years the customers which our company has created "in India and China will go to the English. The advantages "which we should thus lose may be understood by the fol-"lowing facts:—In 1861 the whole trade in and out amounted "to 4,213,000 francs; in 1862, to 5,600,000 francs; in 1863 "the packets were established, and the trade rose to "28,000,000 in 1864, to 32,064,000 in 1865, and to "71,000,000 in 1866. The trade had been multiplied by "fifteen!" And so the Bill became law, and the Messageries Imperiales Company obtains its extra £136,000.

The Messageries Company has not published its annual report in England this year, but it appeared in Paris just previous to the discussion in the Corps Legislatif. The document is a very satisfactory one for the shareholders, who get 10 per cent. dividend for the year. It appears that the fleet of the company has been increased by two new vessels, the Tanais and the Hoogly, and that there are three other vessels on the stocks at La Ciotat, near Marseilles. The number of the fleet afloat and in construction is give at sixty-one vessels, with a total of 18,905-horse power, and 113,253 tons displacement. The year 1867 was marked by the absence of a single accident. The entire distance run over by the company was 504,000 marine leagues, "the "largest amount, we believe," the report says, "achieved "by any postal navigation company." The directors of the company are far from considering the Government over indulgent, and they tell their shareholders in the report that they tried (who shall blame them?) to get f.42.50 per league for the entire term, or about one-sixth more on the whole term.

The means for working the extra India and China service are to be obtained by the raising of sixteen and a half millions of francs (£660,000), one-third in shares and two-thirds in debentures at 5 per cent., each holder of existing shares in the company having the option of taking one new share and two new debentures for every ten shares in his possession. The report does not state when the new service will commence, but we are informed on authority, as we have already stated, that the fortnightly mail will be put on early next year

THE INDO-EUROPEAN TELEGRAPH.

The Times announces that five cargoes of stores, consisting of Siemen's iron posts and insulators and of wire, have already left England for Persia. These will be transshipped at St. Petersburg into smaller steamers, which will take them through the Neva and the Volga to Astrachan, where they will again be transshipped for the ports of Resht, Lencoran, and Astara, on the north coast of Persia. From these ports they will be conveyed to the interior on mules. It is expected they will arrive at their destination (about five thousand miles distant) in October, when the erection of the line will at once be proceeded with, a staff of superintending engineers having already left this country for that purpose. The three scientific advisers of the company—General Von Luders, the Director-General of Russian Telegraphs; Colonel Von Chauvin, the Director-General of North German Telegraphs; and Mr. W. H. Barlow, C.E.—have met lately at Berlin in order to decide upon the mode of construction of this international work, the execution of which has been undertaken by Messrs. Siemens Brothers, and is to be finished before the end of next year. The cable in the Black Sea is to have three insulated conductors, to be enclosed by a copper sheath, to protect them from oxidation and he attacks of marine insects, which abound in those regions. The Indian Government have decided to add another conductor to their existing lines between Teheran and Kurrachee in anticipation of the increased traffic to be expected from this new line, and the Russian and Prussian Governments have formally declared that, in case of war, the transmission of commercial messages will not be interrupted.

JUDICIAL COMMITTEE OF PRIVY COUNCIL.

IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF EDWARD H. POLLARD.

This was a petition to the Queen (and referred to the Judicial Committee) by Mr. Pollard, a barrister, practising at Hong Kong, who by the Chief Justice was suspended for some days, and fined 200 dollars (£50) for a contempt of Court. The fine had been paid, and Mr. Pollard complained of the course adopted towards him, and wished the stigma to be removed. An Order in Council just issued conveys the decision, which, as we fully anticipated, is entirely in Mr. Pollard's favour on all the points. It is as follows:—

"At the Court of Windsor Castle, the 19th day of June, 1868. Present, the Queen's Most Excellent Majesty, the Lord President, the Lord Steward, the Duke of Buckingham, Mr. Disraeli.

"Whereas there was this day read at the Board a report from the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, dated the 16th June instant, in the words following:—

"Your Majesty having been pleased by your Order in Council of the 4th November, 1867, to refer unto this Committee the matter of the Petition of Edward Hutchinson Pollard, one of your Majesty's Counsel for the colony of Hong Kong, against the sentence passed upon the said Edward Hutchinson Pollard by the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court in that colony on the 2nd July, 1867, setting forth that the Petitioner is a barrister-at-law, and one of your Majesty's Counsel in and for the Colony of Hong Kong; that on the 2nd day of July, 1867, the Honourable the Chief Justice of the said colony of Hong Kong pronounced a sentence that the Petitioner had been guilty of contempt of the Supreme Court of the said colony, and adjudged that the Petitioner should be fined in the sum of two hundred dollars, and further that the Petitioner should be suspended from practising before the said Court as a barrister and advocate for a period of fourteen days or until the said fine should be sooner paid; that the Petitioner, feeling himself aggrieved by the said sentence, and being advised that the same was oppressive and illegal, presented a petition to your Majesty setting forth the facts of the case, and praying, amongst other things, that the said matter of the said petition might be referred to this Committee; and the Petitioner now humbly prays that the matter of the said petition and the several proceedings of the said Chief Justice in relation to the said sentence of the 2nd day of July, 1867, may be investigated and inquired into, and that the said sentence may be wholly rescinded, reversed and expunged from the minutes of the said Court, or that the Petitioner may have such justice and redress as to your Most Gracious Majesty may seem fit and proper.—The LORDS OF THE COMMITTEE, in obedience to your Majesty's said order of reference, have taken the said humble petition into consideration, and, having heard counsel on behalf of the said Edward Hutchinson Pollard, and having likewise been attended by counsel on behalf of his Honour the Chief Justice of Hong Kong, their Lordships do this day agree humbly to report to your Majesty that in their judgment no person should be punished for contempt of Court, which is a criminal offence, unless the specific offence charged against him be distinctly stated, and an opportunity of answering it given to him; and that, in the present case, their Lordships are not satisfied that a distinct charge of the offence was stated, with an offer to hear the answer thereto before sentence was passed. Their Lordships further report to your Majesty that on the proceedings before them it appears that Mr. Pollard has received one sentence as for six several offences, and that in the statement of those alleged offences in the judgment pronounced by the Chief Justice their Lordships are not satisfied that each of the six amounted to a contempt of Court, or was legally an offence. For these reasons their Lordships humbly recommend to your Majesty that your Majesty should be graciously pleased to remit the fine of two hundred dollars which was imposed on the said Edward Hutchinson Pollard by the order of the 2nd July, 1867."

HER MAJESTY, having taken the report into consideration, was pleased by and with the advice of Her Privy Council to approve thereof and of what is therein recommended, and to order, as it is hereby ordered, that the said fine of two hundred dollars, which was imposed on the said Edward Hutchinson Pollard by the order of the 2nd July, 1867, be, and the same is hereby, remitted. Whereof the Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, or Commander-in-Chief of the colony of Hong Kong for the time being, and all other persons whom it may concern, are to take notice and govern themselves accordingly.

(Signed) ARTHUR HELPS.

EXCHEQUER CHAMBER.

MODY V. GREGSON.

This was an appeal under a "bill of exceptions" from the decision given by Baron Bramwell in December last, as to the liability of the vendors of piece goods proved to be largely adulterated with china clay. (The judgment delivered by the learned baron was given at length in our issue of January 18.)

Mr. Manisty, Q.C., said he appeared for the defendants in this case, and it arose upon a bill of exceptions to the ruling of the learned Judge before whom the case was tried. The declaration stated that in consideration that the plaintiff had agreed to buy certain goods of the defendants at a certain price, the defendants had promised to deliver the same within a certain period, and that the same so delivered should be of merchantable quality. The case came on for trial, and the plaintiffs called a witness, who gave evidence that he was instructed by the plaintiffs to purchase 2,500 pieces of gray shirting; that he received from the defendants' agents a sample of the goods, and he ordered them according to the sample; that the defendants delivered divers pieces of gray shirting. It afterwards was discovered that a quantity of china clay had been introduced into the shirting with a view of increasing the weight of the goods, and this was alleged to be a fraud, and that the goods were not according to the sample. The learned Judge directed the jury that under the circumstances stated, if the goods were bought by sample there was an implied warranty that they were equal to the sample, and if the jury were of opinion that they were not then they ought to find a verdict for the plaintiff. The learned counsel submitted that that direction was erroneous. The action was purely ex contractu—it was founded on the contract alone. The simple question was what was the contract. The sample was approved and the order was given upon the sample. If the defendants had put in the china clay for the purpose of adding to the weight, then they had committed a fraud; but the contention was that the defendants were perfectly ignorant of the fact of the china clay having been introduced. There might be a latent defect, but that did not constitute a fraud. It was submitted that the words used at the time did not amount to a warranty, but if they did it was not shown that the defendants were cognisant of the deception.

Sir G. Honyman, on the other side, contended that when a person undertook to purchase goods, unless there was an opportunity of inspection, he was entitled to have merchantable goods. The learned Judge was right in his direction.

The Court took time for consideration.

FINNEY V. GRANT.

This was a special case stated to obtain the judgment of the Court as to the amount of freight payable to the plaintiff, a shipowner, under the following circumstances:—By the charter party it was provided that the ship was to sail from an English port to Singapore with a cargo of coals, and there discharge, and load a return cargo for England, and the freight for the whole voyage was to be paid "at the rate of £5 5s. per ton of 20 cwt. of coals delivered" at Singapore. On the voyage to Singapore a part of the coals was necessarily jettisoned, and the question was whether, in calculating the freight payable by the defendant, the charterer, for the voyage out and home the coals so jettisoned were to be taken into consideration.

For the plaintiff it was urged that the rule of law is that freight is payable on goods which have been shipped, even if it be found necessary to jettison them on the voyage; but

The Court held that the parties had agreed that the freight should depend on the number of tons of coal delivered at Singapore, and that the coals jettisoned were not to be taken into account, and gave judgment for the defendant.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS.

BROWN V. CATOR AND OTHERS.

The plaintiff during the American war shipped as engineer and fireman aboard the Fire Queen on a voyage from New York to the Chinese seas, and he sued the defendants for wrongful dismissal and for wages, and for not supplying him with proper food according to agreement. It was said that the captain, finding wages far lower when he got to Shanghai, was anxious to get rid of the plaintiff and others whose wages were $50 a month. He tried to discharge them, but as they said it was part of their contract that they were to be landed in England they refused to leave the ship. The captain said he would work them and starve them till they would be glad to beg for their discharge. Accordingly he fed them on hard bread and set them to shovel the coals from one bunker to another and then back again, and kept them at this work "for seventeen hours steady" without sleep; for twenty-five days they were kept on salt beef and mouldy bread in port or trading from port to port. At Hankow the plaintiff showed some of the meat and bread to the Consul, who said that they were bad, and told the captain he must give the crew some fresh provisions. They then got the skin and gristle of fresh meat fried up, which was an improvement. They next got some rice and fish, which was so bad that even the Chinamen on board would not eat it. The Consul at Shanghai sent a letter to the Consul at Hankow, telling him to mind his own business and not to interfere. At Shanghai they went to the Consul; the Consul told them to go to the agents, Lindsay and Co. They went to the agents, who told them to go to the Consul. They returned to the Consul, and he told them to go to the devil. However, they returned to the ship and spoke to the captain, who told them there was no scale of provisions in their articles, and from that time they bought their own food, for 110 days, at $1 a day. Eventually, of the original crew, fifty-three in number, some went ashore and got drunk, eight went to California, and the plaintiff and four others stuck to the ship. At length, at Shanghai, there was an interview between them, the captain, and Mr. Markham, the Consul, at which the captain proposed to pay them up to the end of their year, and to send them home in the Lalla Rookh. The men wanted their pay up to the date of their landing in England, and refused the captain's offer. A man named Churchill was sent off by the Consul for twelve hours' hard labour. After several visits to the Consulate, and attempts to induce the sailors to accept their discharges, they were told to leave the Fire King, she having a full crew of Chinamen, and in the end they did so, and went aboard the Lalla Rookh. They, however, made one more attempt to return to the Fire

Digitized by Google

King, but were refused, and finally they sailed in the Lalla Rookh, arrived in England in due time, and brought their action.

The defence was that the plaintiff had agreed to be discharged, and to accept a passage to England and pay up to the date of such discharge.

The jury found for the plaintiff for £22 14s. 2d., and this verdict caused the amicable settlement of several actions arising out of the same facts.

BANKRUPTCY COURT.

IN RE DADABHOY BYRAMJEE.

The bankrupt, who came before the Court upon his own petition, asked to pass his examination and for an order of discharge. He was described as late of 22, Great St. Helen's, City, and of Liverpool, merchant, trading in co-partnership with Rustomjee Cowasjee. The accounts showed debts of £6,452, with doubtful debts of £900, the failure being attributable to loans in trading.

Mr. Reed, who appeared for the assignees, did not oppose. He said the bankrupts had made consignments of goods to Bombay, but, in consequence of the rapid fall of the markets, a deficiency of 50 per cent. accrued.—The Court granted the desired order.

RE GEORGE LYALL.

On the 29th ult., Mr. Lyall again appeared before the court for discharge, which was opposed by Mr. Liebert, of Manchester. The counsel for Mr. Liebert examined Mr. Lyall at considerable length, and read a large amount of correspondence between Mr. Lyall and his partner, Mr. Maclean, with a view of establishing that the firm of Lyall, Still and Co. was hopelessly insolvent in 1865, and that the goods purchased subsequently were imported for the purpose of raising money on. The case is again adjourned until the fourth instant. The impression is that the discharge will be granted, as the present bankruptcy law does not meet the case.

COURT OF CHANCERY.

NARRONDUS V. SPRINGFIELD.

This was an appeal from Vice-Chancellor Malins. The plaintiffs were merchants at Shanghai, carrying on their business under the firm of Jamsetjee Nusserwanjee and Co. The defendants, Messrs. Osborn Springfield and Charles Morley Robison the younger, were merchants in London, carrying on business under the firm of Springfield, Son, and Nephew. The defendants, Messrs. Robert Crawford Antrobus, John Springfield Robison, Hugh Hamilton Lindsay, and Alexander Michie were merchants at Shanghai, carrying on business under the firm of Lindsay and Co. After the bill in this suit was filed Lindsay and Co. executed a deed of arrangement with their creditors, and the trustees of this deed were made parties to the suit. The question was whether a bill of exchange for £4,496 15s. 4d., which was drawn by Jardine, Matheson, and Co., of Shanghai, upon, and accepted by, Matheson and Co., of London, and which had been remitted to Springfield, Son, and Nephew by Lindsay and Co. (Springfield, Son, and Nephew being the London correspondents of Lindsay and Co.), had been specifically appropriated by the plaintiffs' firm for the purpose of covering two bills drawn in March, 1865, by the plaintiffs upon Springfield, Son, and Nephew, payable to the order of Lindsay and Co.

The plaintiffs' case was that these two bills, which were for £5,000 each, were drawn by the plaintiffs' firm against a shipment of 605 bales of cotton, made by them to Springfield, Son, and Nephew—this cotton being of the estimated value of £5,500. The plaintiffs then intended to consign further cotton to cover the two bills, but the price of cotton having fallen they abandoned this intention, and, instead of doing so, they handed to Lindsay and Co. the balance of the two bills, they undertaking to remit the balance to Springfield, Son, and Nephew by means of bills or draughts, which were to be specifically appropriated to meet so much of the two bills for £5,000 as the proceeds of the 605 bales of cotton might be insufficient to meet. The bill already mentioned for £4,496 15s. 4d. was, as the plaintiffs alleged, remitted by Lindsay and Co. to Springfield, Son, and Nephew, in pursuance of this undertaking. The two bills for £5,000 were never accepted by Springfield, Son, and Nephew, and the result was that one of the plaintiffs' firm accepted them on behalf of the firm. The bills of lading of the cotton were handed over to the holders of one of the bills for £5,000. Under these circumstances, the plaintiffs by this suit claimed to have the bill for £4,496 15s. 4d. applied as an indemnity against the other bill for £5,000, which was in the hands of the Bank of Hindustan. The case of the defendants, Springfield, Son, and Nephew, was that that they received the bill for £4,496 15s. 4d. from Lindsay and Co., as a remittance on their account, and not for the specific purpose alleged by the plaintiffs, and that before any claim was made by the plaintiffs to that bill they (Springfield, Son, and Nephew) had placed the proceeds to the credit of Lindsay and Co., and under these circumstances they insisted that the plaintiffs had no right to have the bill specifically appropriated to indemnify them. The Vice-Chancellor was of opinion that the plaintiffs were entitled to what they asked if it could be proved that the bill for £4,496 15s. 4d. was actually purchased with their money, in which respect his Honour thought that the evidence was insufficient, and he therefore directed inquiries on this point. From this decree Messrs. Springfield, Son, and Nephew appealed.

Mr. Cotton and Mr. Ferrers appeared for the appellants, Mr. Glasse and Mr. Eddis for the plaintiffs, and Mr. De Gex and Mr. G. W. Lawrance, for Lindsay and Co.'s trustees, were not called upon.

Their Lordships agreed with the Vice-Chancellor, and dismissed the appeal with costs.

Monetary and Commercial.

Telegrams via Kiachta announcing the opening of the silk market at Shanghai at 30s. for No. 3 Tsatlees, and the new teas at Hankow at 2s. 1d. to 2s. 5d., were received on the 29th June. On the 3rd inst., via Galle, dates from Hong Kong to June 13th, Shanghai 8th, and Foochow 6th were received, and confirmed previous telegrams received on 22nd June, of the opening of Foochow market at 2s. 2d. to 2s. 5d. Nothing distinct or reliable has been received regarding the quality, which is of course the chief point of interest. The prices are under expectations, but are certainly high enough.

The trial of the case by the consignees, per Wild Deer, for damaged teas is likely to be delayed by the appointment of a commission to examine witnesses in Shanghai. The owners appear confident of gaining the case if brought on for trial.

The scheme which has for some time been on foot to establish a new India and China Bank is, we understand, abandoned, at least for the present.

The biddings for Government bills on India were held on the 1st inst. at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were, to Calcutta, 18,59,000 rs., and to Madras, 1,41,000 rs. The minimum price was fixed at 1s. 10$\frac{1}{2}$d. on both these presidencies. Tenders at 1s. 10$\frac{7}{8}$d. will receive about 47 per cent. It thus appears that, while Government reduced their terms by about $\frac{1}{4}$d., or 1 per cent., the rates actually paid have been somewhat higher than on the last occasion.

The bar silver and Mexican dollars by the last West India steamer were sold at 5s. 0$\frac{3}{8}$d. and 4s. 10$\frac{7}{8}$d. respectively, showing no change.

The amount of bullion by the P. and O. Company's steamer Pera, from Southampton on the 27th June was—In gold, to Galle, £220; to Bombay, £1,700; to Madras, £260; in silver, to Shanghai, £13,160; total in gold, £2,180; in silver, £13,160.

The proceedings of the shareholders in the Commercial Bank of India it appears have practically stopped the progress of liquidation for the present. The court has not sanctioned the payment of the dividend which is now ready in the hands of the liquidator. Whether these proceedings will ultimately result in favour of the shareholders is very doubtful.

The Lords of the Privy Council have sanctioned an appeal from the decision of the Chief Justice of Hong Kong in the case of the Isca, although the proper time for giving notice at Hong Kong had expired when application was made there. The question at issue is whether a shipmaster is or is not warranted in including his cargo in a bottomry bond, necessary to raise funds to enable him to convey it to its destination; and it will be a satisfaction to have the point decided by the highest judicial authority.

The report of the directors and auditors of the Assam Company, presented at the annual meeting held on the 29th ult., states that there is little doubt that the year 1867 will be found to have resulted in a loss of about £16,000, following the heavy loss of 1866. The cause is a great falling off in the out-turn of tea, consequent upon unfavourable weather. Hopes are held out, however, that the company will be in a position to pay a small interim dividend in January next.

As we have already intimated, the Royal Mail steamers now proceed through from Southampton to Colon, and vice versa; consequently, passengers, specie, and goods for Japan and China are no longer transshipped at an intermediate port between Southampton and the Isthmus, but are conveyed to Colon in the same steamer on board which they embark at Southampton. Passengers embarking at Colon for England come home without transfer.

The report of the directors of the Oriental Hotels Company (Limited), presented at the general meeting on the 1st of July, states that the business of the Galle Hotel for 1867 was satisfactory, showing a net profit of £3,427. With regard to the Cairo Hotel however, the directors see grounds to modify their anticipation of profit. Amongst the causes of the present embarrassed state of the company's finances is the large amount paid for the land at Cairo, and, inasmuch as this land was purchased by the company with the special sanction of the Viceroy, in connection with projects for public improvements which have now fallen through, the directors are strictly of opinion that upon adequate representations being made to his Highness, the price paid for the land ought to be refunded to them. The report was adopted, and it was resolved to issue debentures to the extent of £30,000, bearing 12 per cent. interest.

The Bank Holidays and Bills of Exchange Bill, as amended by the Select Committee, has been printed. It authorises the creation of special bank holidays by Royal proclamation, and provides that bills due on such days or on days of fast and thanksgiving shall be payable on the following day. It likewise abolishes days of grace after the 1st of January, 1869, as regards all bills drawn after that date.

In the estate of Mr. J. R. Worcester, shipowner, of Cannon-street, a first dividend of 4 5-16d. in the pound has been declared.

At length it is announced that the Royal decree abolishing the differential duties on certain articles when imported into Manila under foreign flags has received the "complase" of the Governor of the Philippine Islands, and has therefore come into operation.

BOARD OF TRADE RETURNS.

The returns of the Board of Trade for the month of May show a falling off of £1,266,829, or about 8 per cent. in the declared value of our exportations compared with those of the corresponding month of each of the two preceding years—a result entirely due to the diminution in our cotton shipments, which have been less by £1,257,538 than those of May, 1867. As regards cotton yarn, the reduction has been 25 per cent. in value and 29 per cent. in quantity, while in cotton goods it has been 18 per cent. in value and 13 per cent. in quantity. A falling off is likewise observable in several other articles, but the exports of woollen and worsted manufactures have been well maintained, showing an increase over last year, while in woollen and worsted yarn there is an increase over both the previous years. The following shows the total declared value of the exports of British and Irish produce and manufactures for the month of May in the last three years:—May, 1866, £15,870,131; May, 1867, £15,936,864; May, 1868, £14,670,035. For the first five months of the present year the declared value of our exportations has been £70,668,103, or about 2 per cent. less than in the same period of 1867, and about 10 per cent. less than in 1866.

The present returns give the "computed real value" of the principal articles imported for the month of April. The amount is more than last year, but considerably less than in 1866:—April, 1866, £24,034,877; April, 1867, £19,816,597; April, 1868, £21,963,955. Similar results are presented by a comparison of the value of the imports for the first four months, the inference being that the distress occasioned by the panic of 1866 obliged us to economise largely in our imports of foreign and colonial produce, and that it has latterly become necessary to replenish our stocks. For the first four months of this year the value of the imports was £68,373,049, against £64,142,642 in the corresponding period of 1867.

We annex a summary of those figures which relate to our Import and Export trade with China and other countries in the Far East:—

TEA.

Messrs. Arthur Capel and Co.'s Circular says :—"We have no improvement to notice in the tone of our market during the past fortnight, business continuing on the same extremely limited scale which we have had to report during the past six weeks, there being still no demand of any consequence either for home consumption or export. The inherent strength of the market has been severely tested by this long state of dulness and inactivity, and the very slight reduction which has taken place shows that the confidence of holders is still maintained by the gradual reduction in stocks which is taking place.

"CONGOUS.—Siftings show scarcely any alteration in prices, but there is less activity in the demand. Broken-leaf kinds have sold rather lower. Fair to good common have shown some weakness, very good common having been sold at 1s. 3d. per lb. Fair flavoury kinds are difficult of sale at a reduction of ½d. per lb. Fair to good Kaisows are also difficult of sale, whilst the finer kinds remain without inquiry. Amoy kinds remain without alteration. Common black-leaf kinds have sold rather easier, the quality of some of the recent arrivals being below the average. Fair to good remain steady, but the transactions have been only on a moderate scale. A few sales of good to fine Moning have been made at the decline last quoted. In new-make Canton kinds there is no material alteration. Oolongs: common to medium kinds remain heavy of sale even at the low prices current; finest still inquired for. Souchongs show no alteration. In Flowery Pekoes there has not been much doing. Scented Teas: some arrivals of Caper have been sold at a slight reduction in price. Common to fair Orange Pekoes have sold from 1s. 1d. to 1s. 3d. per lb., the better kinds being neglected. Foochow kinds are rather more difficult to move, and prices show ½d. per lb. fall. In uncoloured Japans business remains on a limited scale.

"GREEN TEAS.—The amount of business done has been very small, and barely sufficient to alter quotations, but for some of the finer kinds of Moyune, better prices have been offered. Ping Sueys have sold at the reduction last quoted; Common Canton Gunpowders have sold lower.

"The Stock in the United Kingdom on the 30th ult. was estimated at 77,800,000 lbs., against 92,500,000 lbs., and the quantity afloat 5,173,260 lbs., against 5,718,000 lbs."

Messrs. Sillar and Bateman's report says :—"The quietness noticed in our last report has continued. In fact, ever since the heavy duty payments in April, previous to the bringing out of the Budget, the market may be said to have been almost in abeyance.

"The trade throughout the country has hitherto been most unwilling to raise the price to their retail customers, and have been running off their old stocks rather than submit to the advance which had been established. In one or two cases owners have pressed sales, and the result has been a fall of 1d. per lb. and upwards in some descriptions of Congou.

"Telegrams have been received advising the opening of the markets both at Hankow and Foochow; at the former port prices are said to rule 3 to 5 taels higher than last year, and at the latter port 3 taels higher. Our own telegram came to hand on the 22nd inst.—prices were not named, but the market at Foochow was reported to have opened 'quietly.' 2,000 tons were coming forward round the Cape by steam.

"Only two vessels have arrived during the last month, with 1,112,660 lbs. The deliveries (from official returns) are 8,250,000 lbs. The quantity of old season's tea now afloat from China and Japan is 5,500,000 lbs., of which 3,400,000 lbs. is Congou. There are also afloat 1,795,000 lbs. of Assam and Indian teas. These—with what new season's teas may arrive by steamer and overland—constitute our supply until the clippers become due, say 15th September, any excess in the deliveries over this will therefore have to be drawn from the stock."

The Produce Markets Review of last week says:—"A telegram, dated Foochow, May 23rd, has been received in London announcing the opening of the Tea market at that port, and that the settlements amounted to 30,000 chests, at prices 3 taels higher than last year. This information is somewhat meagre, as nothing is stated as to the quality of the Tea, neither is there any information respecting the departure of vessels for England. The season appears to be a week or two earlier than that of last year, so that, in the event of no delay occurring at the ports, the first arrivals with the new crop may be looked for early in September; this, however, is too early, if the present apathy of the dealers as regards fine Teas be any criterion, and we are prepared to find that there will be less disposition than usual to buy from the first arrivals, unless the quality should prove unusually attractive. There is, at the present time, far more first-crop Kaisow Tea in this country than is required, and merchants are anxious to realise without delay. The demand this week has been very quiet; merchants do not, however, press their Teas, but the trade hold aloof, and buy only the most attractive and readily saleable parcels. Any idea of an advance in common Congou seems now to be abandoned, and, we believe, nothing short of a substantial fall in this class of Tea will improve trade."

SILK.

The Silk Market became more active during the latter part of June and as it became more and more evident that the crop in Europe would be worse than last year, and prices unprecedentedly high, buyers began to turn their attention more seriously to Asiatic Silk, and a large business has resulted, accompanied with a considerable advance in prices. Messrs. Jacomb, Hogg, and Co.'s Circular says :—"In China Silk transactions have been very extensive, and the market has been almost cleared of fair and medium Tsatlees, the advance in these descriptions being from 1s. to 2s. per lb. Key-Ing Taysaams were for a time comparatively neglected, but have latterly been in better demand at improved prices. Japan Silk was the first to feel the improvement in the market, and for a time all descriptions of Mibash were eagerly bought up at rapidly improving rates, the average advance during the month being about 2s. per lb. The deliveries for the month, 3,735 bales of China, and 738 bales of Japan, indicate a decided increase in the consumption of Asiatic Silk."

Messrs. H. W. Eaton and Sons' Circular states.—"Since the public sales, the particulars of which were reported upon the 25th ult., the market for Silk has continued very active, all classes participating in the improved demand, and the business of the month has resulted in an advance of 1s. to 2s. per lb. for Chinas. There is now very little Silk left in the hands of importers, and the present holders are not at all anxious to sell. The improved deliveries will show that the movement has been well supported by the manufacturers, and is not purely speculative, as is too often the case. Canton Silk, in the absence of any new arrivals, has been very inactive. In Japans, the stock being so limited, offers but little selection to buyers, and the inquiry for the fine to finest sorts has caused extreme rates to be paid.

COTTON.

In the London market the dulness reported in our last continued until the 20th ultimo, when an improvement in the demand occasioned an advance of ⅛d. to ¼d. During the week ended 27th ultimo, a general disposition to sell was manifested, the previous advance was lost, prices receded, and at the close of the week were ⅛d. per lb. lower for all descriptions. The market has since remained extremely quiet, there being a complete absence of inquiry on the spot, although for arrival the low quotations ruling have induced some few offers. The current quotations are as follows :—Madras—Tinnivelly: middling fair, 8d.; fair, 8¼d.; good fair, 9d. Northern and Western, middling fair, 7⅞d.; fair, 8d.; good fair, 8¼d. Coconada, middling fair, 7⅞d.; fair, 8d.; good fair, 8¼d. Scinde, middling fair, 7¼d.; fair, 7½d.; good fair, 8d. Bengal, middling fair, 7½d.; fair, 7¼d.; good fair, 8d. For arrival :—Tinnivelly, 8d. to 8¼d., June shipment to June sailing, guaranteed good fair; 50 bales Bengal, 7d., May or June shipment, guaranteed fair new. In the Liverpool market the demand improved and rates advanced on the 20th ult., the favourable condition of the market continuing until the 24th, when there was less inquiry, and prices became depressed and irregular. Since then there has been a quiet but steady market, the quotations given below being maintained with little variation. For arrival the following have been the latest prices paid: Dhollerah fair new merchants, May and April sailing, 8⅜d.; Oomrawuttee fair new merchants, April sailing, 9d. On the spot the current rates are as follows:—American, 9½d. to 11¼d.; Pernam., &c., 10⅜d. to 11d.; Santos, 10¼d.; Maceio and Bahia, 10¼d. to 10⅞d.; Maranham, 11d.; Egyptian, 10d. to 15d.; Peru, 11⅛d.; Surat, 7d. to 11d.

COFFEE.

Since the date of our last report, the export deliveries having improved, a better tone has been established in the market for Plantation Ceylon. No permanent improvement in prices can, however, be reported. Most of the parcels previously bought in have been disposed of, and the whole of the offers at auction have found buyers, the greater demand being for the superior qualities. The latest prices paid have been for triage 36s. to 41s., ordinary 75s. 6d. to 76s., low to good middling 67s. to 82s., peaberry 71s. to 87s. The quantities sold at the auctions since our last report have amounted to about 3,200 casks, 500 barrels, and 1,000 bags. For Native Ceylon the demand has been limited, but for the small quantity sold the prices current at the date of our last have been maintained, and at the last sales good ordinary qualities realised 47s. bold, and peaberry 50s. 6d. to 51s. per cwt. The Dutch Trading Company's monthly public sale of 92,400 bags Java, &c., held at Amsterdam on the 24th ult., went off at about the valuations, good ordinary bringing 34¼c., against 35½c. to 36c. at the May sale.

COIR GOODS.—Only a small supply has been offered, which realised former terms. 36 tons Ceylon Yarn sold, fine £46 10s. to £48, good £52 5s. to £55, low middling to middling £32 to £35 10s., common £27 5s. to £28 10s.; 1 ton Ceylon Fibre sold at £26 10s. to £27 5s. per ton.

CAMPHOR.—Since the sales ex Ajax, reported in our last, the market has been quiet at £6 10s. for China and £6 7s. 6d. for Japan.

COCOA-NUT OIL.—The market for Ceylon is steady, with a very moderate trade, the previous quotation of £51 being maintained.

CUTCH.—Rates are considerably lower. A large private business has been done at 37s., and of 2,327 packages at auctions about half sold at 32s. to 36s. per cwt. for fair mixed to fine qualities.

GUMS.—Benjamin: At the public sales 32 cases Sumatra were offered of which 2 cases of fine seconds sold at £11 2s. 6d. per cwt. The market has since become quiet. Damer: Firm, 89 boxes offered at high prices and withdrawn.

GALLS.—There is a moderate business doing in both China and Japan at 54s. 6d. to 55s. for the former, and 52s. to 53s. for the latter.

JAPAN WAX.—The stock on hand is extremely light, and prices are in consequence firmly maintained. At auction 160 boxes, ex Gleam realised, fine saucers 115s. to 121s., very good 112s. to 114s. per cwt.

MANILA HEMP.—There have been no public sales, and the private trade has been extremely dull. The current quotation for fair and good roping is £45 to £48 per ton.

PLUMBAGO.—Ceylon is in good demand at advanced rates, and 454 barrels at auction sold as follows:—Lump, fine and very fine soft 41s. 6d. to 44s.; middling 31s.; low dull middling and mixed with dust 23s. 6d. to 24s. Dust, fine 18s. 6d. to 20s.; middling and good 14s. to 15s. 6d.

PEPPER.—Messrs. Brookes and Faith's Circular reports as follows:—"Singapore Black: Shortly after our last, demand subsiding, sellers appeared at 3⅜d. per lb. for good quality, at which figure a considerable quantity changed hands, say upwards of 7,000 bags. At sale on the 1st inst. importers were stiffer in their demands, and the trade not responding, the whole of 3,549 bags were retired, 3⅜d. being asked; 3¼d bid for 1st and 2nd class sea damaged, but refused, thus constituting market dearer. As compared with Penang, the shipments of Sumatra Pepper are light, the quantity of Black Pepper (Singapore and Penang), afloat for this port is in excess of last year, being to 2nd May 1868, 1,644 tons against 1,166 tons. Penang Black shows no material alteration since our last, when we quoted fair to good clean at 2 15-16d. prompt, and bold heavy West Coast at 3d. to 3 1-16d. Very large quantities have been placed during the month from 2⅞d. to chiefly 2 15-16d. prompt, but market closes firmer, there being ready buyers at 2⅞d. for any quantity, but no sellers under 2 15-16d. cash for good fair quality. Acheen and dusty East Coast in proportion. White: The firmness noted in our last continued for some time, and about 800 bags were placed at steady prices, viz., good at 5⅛d. to 5¼d.; and fair 5d. to 5⅛d. Large parcels continuing to be offered, market became dull, and even at a decline only a small lot of 872 bags found buyers (say 150 bags) at 5d. per lb. This is still the nearest nominal quotation for middling to fair Singapore; Penang held for 5d. including the quantity offered on date of our last issue, 1,918 bags have been ordered since our last. At 4 15-16d. there are ready buyers.

RICE.—The continuance of fine weather has had a most depressing influence upon this market, and prices shortly after our last declined 6d. to 1s. per cwt. on Bengal kinds, and 3d. to 6d. per cwt. on soft grain descriptions. During the past week or so, however, demand for the lower qualities has steadily increased, and a fair inquiry prevailing for other kinds, a slight rally has ensued (to the extent of about 3d. to 4d. per cwt.). Several cargoes have been placed, as enumerated below, and on the whole a rather large business has been transacted; but as the present light stocks of soft grain become augmented by the arrival of new crop, it is very possible that prices will again decline. Cargoes: For Continent, 800 tons Bassein at 10s. 6d. per cwt., continental terms, May sailing; do., 1,100 tons Rangoon at 10s. 10½d.; for London, 1,000 tons Rangoon at 11s. landed, or 10s. 6d. ex ship; do., 1,200 tons Bassein at 10s. 9d. landed in London or Liverpool, or 10s. 6d. continental terms, May sailing; do., 1,400 tons Rangoon at 10s. ex ship, or 10s. 6d. landed, September sailing; do., 600 tons Bassein at 10s. ex ship, or 10s. 6d. landed U.K., or 10s. 6d. continental terms; do., 600 tons Saigon at 10s. 3d. ex ship London, no guarantee, less 2½ per cent. discount; for Liverpool, 500 tons Saigon at 10s. 9d. landed, March sailing, discount 2½ per cent.; for London, 600 tons Necranzie at 11s. landed, or 10s. 6d. continental terms, April sailing; for Continent, 1,000 tons Bassein at 10s. 6d., May sailing. On the spot the following prices have been realised:—Bengal middling to good white, 13s. 6d. to 13s. 7½d.; ordinary, 11s. 6d. to 12s.; broken white, 10s. 7½d.; low cargo kind, 7s. 6d. to 8s. 3d.; Ballam, 8s. 6d. to 9s. 3d.; Dacca, 9s. 9d. to 11s.; Necranzie, 11s. cash; Saigon, per Indian Empire, at 10s. 9d.

SPICES.—Cinnamon: Rather a large business has been transacted of late, but prices show great irregularity. On the whole a decline must be quoted, although for certain descriptions fully last quarterly sales' rates have been obtained. Auctions have comprised about 265 bales, nearly the whole of which were disposed of, and privately several parcels of new import have also been placed. Quantity afloat is heavy, being 2,350 bales against 1,729 packages last year. Stock, 2,984 packages against 2,270 packages in 1867. Chips are still in strong inquiry, but prices as compared with the sale mentioned in our last Postscript are about ½d. lower, 96 bags fair having been quitted at 9d. to 9¼d. per lb.., and 46 bags ordinary coarse at 6¼d. per lb. Shipments continue heavy, being 1,031 cwt. and 26 cases. Cloves: Penang have been in unusually abundant supply, 126 cases having been offered at auction, and holders showing a desire to realise, the bulk was disposed of; fair to middling 9¼d. to 9½d., good bright 9¾d., and fine to extra bold 10d. to 10¼d. Nutmegs: Rather important sales have occurred, and prices again rule in buyer's favour. Of 94 cases at auction, the bulk was placed. The following are the more recently obtained prices:—69 to the lb. 3s. 7d., 79 to the lb. 2s. to 2s. 1d., 82 to the lb. 1s. 10d., and 122 to the lb. at 1s. 3d.; Batavian 80 to the lb. 1s. 11d., 100 to 103 to the lb 1s. 4d. to 1s. 5d.; wormy 6d. to 7d.

SAPANWOOD.—The market is quiet. We note the sale of 19 tons Ceylon at £11 to £11 5s., and 12 tons middling Siam at £11 15s.

TAPIOCA.—The market for Penang is extremely dull but firm. Of 1,399 bags at auction only 160 sold, good to fine at 3¾d. to 4d., middling at 3½d. Singapore has participated in the depression, and of 294 bags at auction, per Empress of India, only 130 bags were quitted at 3⅞d. per lb. for good middling quality.

TIN.—The market for Straits has remained steady since our last report, at £91 10s. on the spot and £92 for arrival with a fair demand. During the past month the Dutch Trading Company gave notice that the 40,489 slabs Banca Tin, retired from their March sale, would be offered by private tender, in lots of 2,500 slabs, and that offers under 55 florins would not be considered. As a result, 2,500 slabs were sold at 55.05 florins, an offer of 55 5-16ths for the whole quantity being refused, on the ground that the terms stipulated were not in conformity with the company's regulations. To the uncertainty which still exists as to the intentions of the Dutch Trading Company, and to the great reluctance on the part of speculators to operate, we must attribute the inactivity of this metal, which under other circumstances would certainly attract the attention of consumers as well as those who use it for purposes of investment. The stock of Straits Tin in London is estimated at 1,710 tons, against 2,200 tons in 1867, and 2,850 tons in 1866. The quantity afloat for Europe is 1,183 tons, against 2,105 tons in 1867, and 1,230 tons in 1866. The quantity of Banca afloat for Europe is 1,930 tons, against 630 tons last year.

The following is from the Circular of Messrs. French and Smith:—We have experienced another quiet month in the metal market, no business being done but for immediate consumption or shipment.

IRON.—There was a good ordinary demand for most descriptions. In Wales and Staffordshire the iron masters are fairly supplied with orders for early delivery, but the hot and dry weather has to some extent interfered with production. Scotch Pig was more animated, and is now rather higher in price.

COPPER.—Throughout the month this market has been marked by dullness and want of all animation. For foreign the market early showed signs of weakness, and transactions have generally been in favour of buyers. Later in the month some large parcels of English, being pressed for sale, were only quitted by considerable concession on nominal rates. During the last week there has been some improvement in Chili Bars, with transactions at £73 10s. to £74 for spot and arrival. At the Swansea ticketing, on the 30th ultimo, the average price realised was 14s. 0½d. per unit for 3,435 tons of ore.

TIN.—In spite of large consumption and favourable statistics this market has shown no signs of improvement. Early in the month the English smelters declared a reduction of £2 per ton, making Bars £97, Blocks and Ingots £96; at present these prices are hardly obtainable.

TIN PLATES.—There was no recovery in the price of Tin Plates during the past month. The shipments were again large, 146,000 boxes, against 112,000 boxes in June, 1867.

LEAD did not recover from the dulness reported in the early part of June, and in consequence the price again gave way a little. We quote: W.B. £21 5s., L.B. and Co., £19 5s.; Soft Spanish £18 7s. 6d.

SPELTER.—The improvement noticed in the early part of June did not continue—the quotation is now for Silesian £20 per ton. The stock on 1st instant was 1,394 tons, against 3,883 tons on 1st July, 1867.

MANCHESTER MARKETS.

Mr. Sam Mendel's report is as follows:—"The embarrassment occasioned by the disproportion in the relative value of Cotton and Manufactured Goods remains unchanged, and in view of the conflicting opinions entertained as to the extent of the future supply of the raw material, the trade moves heavily, and with disadvantage to those interested. The principal recognised features that usually determine the action of buyers and control the course of prices are at present difficult of assimilation. The absence of large stocks in many foreign markets is neutralised by recent and continued heavy exports, more especially to the East. A probable insufficiency of the supply of cotton is shown when compared with the quantity available at same date last year, and if we go back to 1866, the prospect is by no means hopeful for millowners securing a profitable trade, and it can be only a question of time when they will be forced into further reduced hours of working than yet adopted. Much as all feel this measure called for, comparatively few have resorted to this saving policy, and many of the mills that were put on to working four days out of the six have again resumed full time working within the last few days. The result is, spinners and manufacturers are now in a worse position than at the close of last month. Figures are put forth to show that we have an ample supply of Cotton, yet none of these do away with the fact that the visible supplies are below those of last year to the extent of 452,965 bales, and we must henceforward use less cotton or end the year with very small stocks if these be not supplemented by shipments from India on a much larger scale than we can venture to anticipate. The effect on values the future only can demonstrate. Grey Shirtings: Transactions were on a very limited scale during the earlier part of the month, and prices gave way. At the decline a fair business was done, but as stocks became lessened manufacturers put up their rates, which served materially to check operations, and stocks are now beginning to accumulate. The month closed with a quiet tone. T-Cloths have been in fair request. Good and best makes are more particularly inquired for."

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT & PILLS.

—Complication of Diseases.—Ulcerations, abscesses, swollen glands, and other disorders arising from unseen and unsuspected causes, may be cured by the use of this excellent Ointment, aided by Holloway's purifying Pills. The printed instructions in which the remedies are wrapped are sufficiently explicit for the guidance of any invalid with moderate intelligence. Holloway's medicaments can always be used with advantage and without danger. For more than a quarter of a century they have proved themselves to be a treasure to the poor afflicted with disease. Both the Ointment and Pills are especially adapted for military and naval men, colonists and travellers, who cannot everywhere obtain medical assistance, but may always successfully doctor themselves with Holloway's remedies.

Summary of News from the Far East.

JAPAN.

The Japan advices by to-day's inward mail, reaching to the 17th May, have been anticipated by the Pacific mail line, which brings news from Yokohama to the 5th June (19 days later). The intelligence brought by her is summed up as follows:—

The Shiogoon has accepted the conditions imposed upon him by the Mikado—namely, the cession of half his personal states, the disbanding of his army, and the surrender of his fleet. Moreover, in sign of humility, the Shiogoon left on the 12th May, on foot, for the city of Mito, which was assigned to him as a temporary residence. Owing to these arrangements, a Daimio of the Mikado's household had been named Governor of Yokohama in place of the Shiogoon's nominee. Tranquillity was re-established in that city, so greatly frequented by Europeans; the soldiers and sailors sent on shore from the vessels to protect the foreigners residing there were recalled on board, and the English Consul paid a visit to the new Governor. Everything, therefore, seemed perfectly quiet in Japan at the commencement of May.

But if the Shiogoon consented to submission, his partisans appear not to have been in that mood, as his admiral refused to deliver up the fleet to the Mikado, and left Yedo for the north coast to give his support to the new coalition of the Daimios. One of the latter, named Aidsen, attacked the troops of the Mikado on the 10th May, at three leagues' distance from Yedo, defeated them, and retook a fortress which the Shiogoon had ceded. On the 17th, in another engagement, he again beat his enemies, killing 800, and making 300 prisoners, whom he lost no time in beheading. A third combat took place on the 22nd, in which the Mikado's troops were again defeated within a league and a half of Yedo—a fact which would lead to the belief that this city itself, recently abandoned by the Shiogoon, was increasingly in danger of falling into the power of the Daimios, his former allies. There was, indeed, a rumour that two of their armies were investing the place, and that they had cut off the retreat of the Mikado's forces. Finally, on the 2nd June, an uncle of the last-named potentate, who had always manifested great enmity to the Shiogoon, was assassinated in that city.

As may be seen, the political situation in Japan is excessively disturbed: and, what has never before been witnessed, the spiritual authority of the Mikado is assailed. The Grand Priest of Kioto has distributed 170,000 copies of a proclamation, in which he declares him to have over-stepped his constitutional and religious powers by taking part so actively as he has done in the political and secular disputes raised with respect to the Shiogoon.

YOKOHAMA.

The Yokohama mail of the 17th May, which should have been received by this opportunity, has not come to hand, having been on board the wrecked steamer Benares. By the arrival of the Pacific mail steamer China at Hong Kong we have news to the 11th May. The Japan Times sums up the political situation as follows:—

Another step has been made towards the consolidation of the power of the Mikado. The ultimatum which we published in our last issue was accepted by the ex-Shiogoon almost without delay, and he left Yedo on Sunday morning last, on his way to Mito. He was attended by a body guard of 400 men, drilled by the French, and 1,200 ordinary Japanese troops, an escort required, as it was suspected that a smaller force would have been attacked. His wives remain in Yedd, but have been transferred from the castle to the Yashiki of Mito, with the exception of the sister of Satsuma, who remains in the castle.

It cannot be matter of surprise to any student of Japanese politics who has watched with fair attention the career of Yoshi Hisa, that he should have accepted so readily this sentence of seclusion. The term of three years has been fixed for his punishment, a term which most probably will be almost immediately shortened to a few months. There is no doubt that last year, deluded by the implied promises of his foreign allies, he imagined it possible to abandon the policy for the effectual carrying out of which Shimadz Saburo made him Stotsbashi in 1862, and, instead of persevering in the work of gradually weakening the power of the Shiogoonate, thought he might erect it into a constitutional monarchy, under the protectorate of the Western Powers. Thus he disobeyed orders in receiving the foreign Ministers alone at Osaka without waiting for the Tozama Daimios to assemble, and, had the southern chiefs been slower in their movements, or his own friends less zealous, his ambitious dream might have been realised. But the coup d'etat which placed the Mikado's person in the hands of Satsuma, Chiosiu, and Toza being successful, and Aidzu's attempt to rescue him having failed, Yoshi-Hisa at once submitted, and the valuable help he has since given to the victorious party by steadily refusing to resist, and by disarming, as far as possible, the retainers of his adopted house, has thoroughly disorganised the northern forces for a time, and his services will now undoubtedly be allowed to plead in extenuation of his former fault. There appears good reason to believe that, after a short interval, he will be invited to the council board of the new Government.

Meanwhile, another important symbol of power has passed into that new Government's possession. The capital of the Shiogoons is held for the Mikado. On Sunday, the 3rd of May, Ohara Sakino Gijiu, the Kuge and envoy of his Imperial Majesty, who was in Yokohama a few days ago, took possession of the castle of Yedo in the name of his master. He had with him a large number of troops of Satsuma, Fizen, and Awa, all picked men, and well armed with Enfield rifles. The body guard of the chief was armed with Spencer and Henry rifle. Before him were carried the ensigns of the Mikado. The Envoy appears to have the power of life and death in his hands, for on the road side was to be seen the head of a man executed by his orders. This was the head of a priest who, at Tostka, had concealed himself for the purpose of listening to the speech of the Kuge, and who had thus paid the penalty of his indiscretion. The head was not exposed on a board, as we have seen before here, but simply thrust on the sharpened end of a bamboo, in which it stood in a sufficiently ghastly manner.

We should be glad to think that Yoshi-Hisa's submission to the Mikado's will and the transfer of the castle of Yedo had settled all the existing troubles, and would restore peace to the country and prosperity to our trade. But such we cannot yet believe to be the case. Aidzu, with—it is said—Sendai and another powerful Daimio, are in arms. Aidzu's men were attacked last week by a force of Satsuma's, but they repulsed their assailants with considerable slaughter. A place of strength belonging to Toda Idzumi no Kami—the Daimio to whose treachery to the ex-Shiogoon was mainly due the success of the Southerners before Kioto—has also been taken by Aidzu. The Northern chiefs are said to be lying with their power within thirty miles of Yedo, and as the Mikado's troops in the immediate neighbourhood are by no means numerous, an attack is considered almost imminent.

The strength of the English squadron in these seas is under orders to assemble in Osaka Bay on the 15th of May. The Rodney leaves us to-day, and the Ocean to-morrow; the Rattler will take down the mail, and the Rinaldo is already there. The Salamis will take down Sir Harry Parkes. The object of this demonstration is purely peaceful; to assist at the ceremony of the presentation by the British Minister of his credentials from the Home Government, as representative of Great Britain at the Court of the Mikado. Hitherto, it must be remembered, he has been accredited only to the Shiogoon.

CHINA.

—o—

SHANGHAI.

Dates from this port, which should reach to the 23rd May, are, in consequence of the loss of the P. and O. Company's steamer Benares, only down to the 19th. Our papers and letters have, therefore, been only received in part. The London mail of 27th March arrived out on the 12th May.

On the subject of exchanges the Supreme Court Gazette has the following:—

"The cause to which we wish to direct attention on the present occasion more particularly is the effect produced upon the exchange market by the absence of anything like local enterprise, in which the large funds from time to time remitted to these parts for the purchase of produce can be profitably or even safely invested. The absence of local enterprise in which foreign capital can be employed tends at a given time, when there is any amount more funds transmitted to these parts than is required for the immediate purposes of trade, to create an altogether redundant supply of capital, and to place at a great disadvantage those merchants who have to remit to their constituents or agents at home the proceeds of goods sold in these markets. In a normal state of trade the presence of a large amount of capital should tend to increase the prices of all the staples of trade, and thus to establish something of an equilibrium; the lower exchange being counterbalanced by the higher price; or to put the matter in a concrete form, the merchant would get less sterling for his taels, but more taels for his shirtings; so that ultimately the result would be something like the same. But in order that this condition should exist, it is necessary that the capital should be available equally to the seller and to the buyer; as if it be not at the service of the former, he is not of course able, on account of the presence of that money, to pay any higher price for the imports he purchases, while, on the other hand, the money being there, prevents the foreign merchant from obtaining a high rate for his sycee when he has to remit it home.

"Similarly with respect to exports, the only effect of the foreigner's capital is to raise prices against himself. If produce does not seem likely to turn out profitably, a loss must be at once accepted upon the capital that has been sent to be invested in it, as there is no other outlet in which it can be employed; whereas, if local enterprises were available investments, unless produce was likely to yield a profitable outturn, the natural working of supply and demand would divert the surplus capital in the hands of the bank to such sources of investment and a higher value of the tael, or in other words, a higher rate of exchange would ensue, in which case people would not be under the necessity of looking to produce, as is too frequently the case, merely as a means of avoiding a definite loss on remittance.

"On the other hand the Chinese are able to invest such capital as they possess in a variety of local speculations and trade, which are altogether inaccessible to foreigners, and to further which the foreign banker is unable to lend money to any great extent, in consequence of the unreliability of the natives and the difficulty which he experiences in ascertaining what are likely to be good, and what bad investments. This field of enterprise being open to natives makes them come into the import market with far more independence than the foreigner can enter the export market. They will buy foreign goods only if they see that by so doing they can turn their money and credit to better account than by placing it in local business; whereas the moment that by the exigencies of trade foreigners find the banks oversupplied with capital, they are, as above shown, forced to enter into purchases merely to avoid a loss upon exchange.

"This peculiar state of affairs has probably much more to do with some of the unsatisfactory features of the China trade than the imprudence of foreign merchants, or the great trading astuteness of the Chinese, upon which we have heard so much from time to time. Judged from a home standard the action of the merchants out here may often appear imprudent; but those who are thoroughly acquainted with the difficulties of the trade may be inclined to take a different view of the matter; while as to the vaunted cleverness of the Chinese, it is daily becoming more apparent that their power to override Europeans in matters of trade is due rather to the exceptional advantages they possess than to higher ability or superior management."

LETTER FROM MR. COOPER, THE EXPLORER.

HI-YAN-KI, 28th March, 1868.

"My last from Chen-tu would inform you that I was about to start for Tai-sian-loo, the last Chinese town on the borders of Western China.

"Travelling along the great highway to Tibet, I turned off at Chin-chi-chien, a small walled city on the S. W. slope of the Sheang-nin range of mountains, for the purpose of visiting Monsr. Chevaux, the French missionary bishop of Ta-sian-loo, at present an invalid and residing at Tai-lin-pin village, one day's journey from Chin-chi-chien to the southward. Having seen the good bishop, at his request I am waiting at this place until he can accompany me to Ta-sian-loo, now distant five days' journey to the N. W.

"You will not find Hi-yan-ki on the maps, as it is only a small village. It is, however, situated by map measurement in latitude 29.28 N., longitude 102.20 E., and contains 400 inhabitants. You will easily imagine what it is to live in a dirty Chinese village for three weeks without anything to occupy one's time, save sketching and studying the language, so that I will not attempt any description of my miserable life.

"The geographical features of the country have entirely changed. Instead of the magnificently fertile plains of central Szchuan, and the rich hills and valleys bordering the Yang-tze, we are now in a barren mountainous country, with patches of cultivation few and far between, huge bare mountains of lime-stone principally piled up in peak after peak, whose summits wear a cap of snow for ten months in the year; rugged valleys through which the spring and autumnal waters rush with impetuous fury until, finding a level in the river Tai-tow-ho, they roll peacefully away to the bosom of their great offspring the Yang-tze-kiang. The wood-gatherers and charcoal-burners of centuries have robbed the country of every sign of wood—the surface coal, which crops out of the surrounding mountains frequently in dark patches, serving the indigent people of the country for fuel.

"As we leave Szchuan's beauty and plenty behind, so we are gradually leaving the people of China; the inhabitants hereabouts, though wearing a tail and speaking the Flowery language, are nearly black, with rather the Burmese cast of feature than Chinese, of middle stature and wretched appearance. They live principally on potatoes,* with pak occasionally; many carrying knives as a protection against the Lolos, a tribe of people inhabiting the country to the west, in the neighbourhood of the Yai long-kiang, who occasionally make predatory incursions into this country and, like the North-American Indians, carry off the meagre cattle, women and children.

"About eight days' journey, or eight miles to the south of this place, are rich copper, iron and lead mines, as also a country rich with the production of opium.

"If all goes well, we are to leave this en route for Ta-sian-loo on the 7th of next month, when I leave the Bishop and proceed towards Bathang, in order to try the Bathang and Sudya route. I find that from Ta-sian-loo west the rupee is the only medium of exchange, merchants from Ta-sian-loo repairing annually to Bathang with the large-leaf tea (grown in this country a little to the east of this), which they sell to Pebunza merchants in exchange for rupees. Pebunza is a name given by the Tibetans to all black long-haired people. I am inclined to think, therefore, that these Pebunzas are Assamese, who purchase the tea for the foreign market of Sudya. If so, then I have a chance of reaching that place; if not I must to Lassa, which will occupy four months from Ta-sian-loo. But I shall have much to encounter before reaching Calcutta by that route, from the hatred of the Tibetan officials at Tsando (Tibet proper commencing there, though the country west of Ta-sian-loo is entirely inhabited by people speaking the Tibetan language), upon whom the unredressed murder of two French fathers and massacre of two villages of Christian Tibetans, last year, has left an impression that the most expeditious way of getting rid of foreigners is to kill them. Even successfully running the gauntlet through Tibet, I must encounter the caste prejudice of the Nepaulese. The Ambassador whom I met in Chen-tu, and asked for a letter to show to the Nepaulese officials on the Tibetan frontiers, declined, saying that there was "no law between Nepaul and England, only for the English resident at Khatmandu." However, we will see if it pleases Providence to bring me safely through Tibet.

"I refrain from telling you much relative to the rebel movements in Yun-nan, as native report is so unreliable. One thing, however, I can tell you from observation—bodies of lawless Imperial troops are hurrying from all parts of Szchuan to Nin-yan-foo, the Imperial head-quarters in Yunnan. The Viceroy at Yunnan-foo, I am told by the missionaries, has made a friendly arrangement with the rebels, and reigns supreme. All the orders from Peking for his immediate return to that place he treats with polite indifference. The mandarins sent to relieve him he treats with the utmost kindness and condescension, finally telling them to clear out or the rebels will get hold of them. All this is very amusing, and an example pregnant with portentous events for the future of China. The missionaries also tell me of the arrival of four foreigners in Yunnan-foo—Frenchmen they think. Perhaps they are the English expedition sent by the Italian Government thence via Bhamo and Tali-foo. If so, they are well received by the Viceroy.

"A messenger whom the Bishop is despatching to-morrow for Chen-tu bears with him this letter, which should reach you within fifty days from this date. If an opportunity offer, I will write you from Bathang as to the route from thence to Sudya, and my intended movements."

According to a notice in our advertising columns it will be seen that the North China Insurance Company have, at a meeting of shareholders, reduced the value of shares, in order to obtain a larger constituency. The necessary steps for forming an office in London will be taken by Mr. Mackintosh on his arrival here from China. The present agency with Messrs. Ashton and Co. will terminate at the end of the present year.

HONG KONG.

The outward mail of April 10th arrived on May 19th, and that of April 18th (French) on May 28th. Dates are now down to the 30th, one day later than the appointed day, owing to the loss of the Benares. London telegrams reached to May 2nd.

On the subject of the Petition to the House of Commons the Daily Press says:—Nothing can be more satisfactory to the promoters of the Hong Kong Petition than the course which the Association in London are now said to have adopted. By preparing a memorial of their own to the Colonial-office, and keeping in reserve the Petition to Parliament sent home from here, they make the utmost possible use of the weapon which we have put into their hands. If they had presented the petition at once, it could not have been fired off again, and, further than this, the present time,—that is to say, the time of which the present mail advices treat,—would not be propitious by any means. There is no use in denying that the tremendous excitement which pervades the political world just now is seriously prejudicial to our chances of obtaining a hearing. [It will be seen in another column that no debate can take place this session.]

We see that our contemporary, the China Mail, has been cited to answer for a libel on the Macao Government for exposing the Coolie traffic. The notice of action has been served by the Hong Kong Government as faithful allies of Portugal. The recital runs thus:—"Hong Kong to wit: Be it remembered that the Hon. Henry John Ball, Esq., Acting Attorney General of our Lady the Queen, who prosecutes for our said Lady the Queen in this behalf in his proper person, comes here into the Supreme Court of Hong Kong before the Chief Justice thereof on the eighteenth day of May in this same term, and for our said Lady the Queen gives the Court here to understand and be informed. That before and at the time of the printing and publication of the false, scandalous, malicious, and defamatory libels and libellous matter, things hereinafter mentioned and set forth, there subsisted and now subsists alliance, friendship, amity, peace, and concord between our Sovereign Lady the Queen and his Most Faithful Majesty the King of Portugal, and the subjects of their said Majesties respectively, and that before and at those times his said Most Faithful Majesty was possessed of a Settlement, Province, or Colony, called Macao, on the coast of the Empire of China, and appointed for the due government thereof and of his subjects resorting thereto, under his said Majesty, and under the Imperial Government of his said Majesty, a Governor, Commandant, and other officers."

The following is from the Overland Trade Report:—

The Legislative Council of Hong Kong has been again in session since the last mail went away, and a rather more animated discussion than is usually seen in that dignified, not to say taciturn, assembly took place in reference to the measure which the governor has in view for the disarmament of the fishing boats. This was explained in the last Trade Report. It is brought forward in consequence of a similar measure which, partly in consequence of representation from this colony, has been adopted by the Viceroy at Canton. The Viceroy has issued a proclamation prohibiting fishing vessels from carrying arms after a given date, and prohibiting all vessels of any kind from carrying stink-pots. The Hong Kong ordinance empowers the Government to establish regulations similar to those of the Chinese Government, and to keep abreast of any further regulations to the same effect which may be made by the Chinese Government. Mr. Keswick at first opposed the transfer of legislative functions to the Executive, but it was denied that the functions to be transferred were legislative. That very necessity for extreme caution in adopting regulations in harmony with the Chinese Government, whose regulations are so liable to prove deceptive made it necessary, the Governor pointed out, that the matter should be dealt with by himself and the Executive Council rather than by the fixed enactments of the Legislature. Mr. Keswick did not press the objection, and only insisted on the necessity of taking care not to frighten the Chinese trading junks, on which the prosperity and commerce of the colony to a great extent depended. In reference to an ordinance which provided for the establishment of a fire-brigade, a sharp discussion arose, though one rather of retrospective than of present interest, as it referred especially to the negotiations between the Government and the insurance offices, which retarded the establishment of a brigade last year. As for the present ordinance, it is generally admitted that a brigade ought to be formed, but there is a very strong feeling of dissatisfaction with the arrangement made by the ordinance for meeting the inevitable expense. This is to be done by an additional rate of ¾ per cent. on house property. These rates are inordinately heavy at present, over 10 per cent. on the full amount of the rental, and every one acquainted with the colony will know that house-rent is extravagantly high here. The reply made by the Governor was that his instruction from home left him no alternative. No additional expense could be proposed unless there was a proposal side by side with it for fresh taxation by which it could be met. Even then it is difficult to understand why the insurance offices should not be made to contribute something towards the expense of the brigade. They receive high premiums for the risks which they take in this colony, and could well afford a contribution to the expense of the brigade.

Though the Governor's reply about his instructions from Home is one to which no answer can be made by the Legislative Council, its inner meaning can scarcely be overlooked by any one interested in the fortunes of this colony. The place is urgently in need of a fire brigade, the cost of which could be paid out of the general revenue easily enough, if it were not for the enormous pecuniary exactions levied on the colony by the Home Government; but no, there must be no brigade unless house property, which already pays nearly 14 per cent., is further burdened. If a dollar of new expenses were sanctioned without a dollar's worth of new taxation, that might be so much drawn from a fund otherwise available to pay arrears of military contribution! Comment on such a contingency would be superfluous.

A verdict of manslaughter has been given against two policemen for neglect in the case of the Indian who died in gaol.

The following report on the Shamien Garden, from the Daily Press, will be interesting to old residents at Canton:—

"Minutes of a public meeting held at H.B.M.'s Consulate, Canton, on the 16th May, 1868, for the reception of the past year's accounts and the election of trustees for the current year. Present: D. B. Robertson, Esq., C.B., H.B.M.'s Consul, in the chair; R. Carlowitz and T. Sampson, Esq., trustees; and Messrs. Coare, Moul, Smith, and Frater. The circular calling the present meeting and the minutes of the last one having been read, and the latter confirmed, the chairman called for the trustees' report, which was then read by Mr. Sampson, and of which the following is a copy:—

"The accounts having been inspected, it was proposed by Mr. Moul, seconded by Mr. Smith, and carried nem. con.—'That the report of the trustees be adopted and the accounts be passed.'

"The chairman here made a few congratulatory remarks on the result of the labours of the trustees, and stated that the present beautiful appearance of the Garden was allowed by everyone to be due to the untiring energy and daily personal supervision of Mr. Sampson, who, however, had no doubt been greatly indebted to the advice of his fellow-trustees, one of whom, Mr. Carlowitz, he (the chairman) was sorry to hear did not wish to be re-elected, owing to his intended absence from Canton, for he had been for a great number of years connected with the management of the public gardens of Canton.

"It being announced that Mr. Newton also declined re-election, Messrs. F. W. Coare and J. F. Cordeswere, on the motion of Mr. Moul, seconded by Mr. Carlowitz, elected trustees, and Mr. Sampson re-elected, for the current year.

"Proposed by Mr. Smith, seconded by Mr. Moul, and passed unanimously,—That a vote of thanks be given to the Trustees for their very able management of the Garden Fund affairs during the past year.

"Mr. Sampson returned thanks for the Trustees, and took the opportunity to state that, however highly the Chairman had praised his labours in connection with the Garden, in which he did not deny taking a very great interest, the counsel and support of Messrs. Newton and Carlowitz had always been of the greatest value and benefit to him. Mr. Sampson also expressed a hope to be able, by a raid on the beetles which infested Shamien, to increase the health of the trees and to improve its appearance generally."

The meeting of the Chamber of Commerce was held on May 29. Present:—Hon. P. Ryrie, chairman; G. F. Heard, G. J. Helland, T. Pyke, G. Bosman, — Taylor, E. Hitchcock, V. Kresser, A. Zimmern, and G. Fraser, Esqs., and Mr. J. Wood, Secretary. We will give in our next a copy of the report, &c.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

—o—

SINGAPORE.

From this port we have advices to the 6th June. The outward mail of the 24th April arrived on the 27th May, conveying telegrams to May 11, but these were superseded by London telegrams via Calcutta to May 15, and via Maulmain to May 23. The news of the fortnight is thus epitomised by the Straits Times Overland Journal:—

The fortnight has been rather a quiet one in the colony, and there is nothing of any great importance to comment upon.

A ball was given by his Excellency Sir Harry Ord, in the town-hall, on the 26th May, in honour of Her Majesty's birth-day. It was rather a brilliant and most successful affair. The hall was most tastefully decorated and well lighted up, and all the other arrangements were most complete.

The Legislative Council have had three sittings, and legislation has been going on at a swinging pace. Three Bills have been passed and published in the Government Gazette, and another is passed but not published yet. The Bills which have been made law are not of any importance, and are the Interpretation Amendment Ordnance, the Coroner's Inquests' Ordinance, and the Supplementary Supply Ordinance. The Bill passed but not yet officially published is of the highest importance, being the Supreme Court Bill. There has been rather a tough fight over the clauses of this Bill, and divisions have been pretty numerous—the Chief Justice and the unofficial members generally on one side against Government. But it was a hopeless battle for them, although they did once succeed in carrying their point. The discussion and divisions on this Bill has brought out only too clearly what a ridiculous mockery and imposition a Crown Colony Legislative Council is. The official members, not excepting the Governor, are mere puppets, who must obey the sic volo of a Secretary of State or his clerks, thousands of miles away. They must vote according as they are told, not according to their judgment, and they must all run well together on pain of dismissal or other punishment. To any amendment proposed on any measure, the stereotyped answer is, either that it is against instructions from the Secretary of State, or is against the rules and regulations of Her Majesty's Colonial Service. Could anything be more childish or farcical? Could anything be more like a parcel of schoolboys than the Legislative Council? Could anything be more a travestie on representative institutions? Clearly the genius who originally conceived the idea of a Crown Colony Legislative Council must have intended to give a practical illustration of how to play the abstruse game of follow-my-leader? It is but right to say that the present Bill is a great improvement on the measure of last year. The great blot on it is, that the independence of the judges is not entirely secured. They can be suspended by the Governor. This is highly objectionable, but the community may console themselves with the reflection that this power will be found to be now-a-days practically nugatory. No Governor would think of suspending a judge in the present day, except for very good cause indeed, and except with the support and approval of the whole community.

The Legislative Council have also settled the Bishop question. The colony is to be placed under the episcopal supervision of the Calcutta or Hong Kong or Labuan bishop, who is to get £100 per annum for his expenses.

PENANG.

Advices from this port are to the 1st June. The home mail of April 24 had been received.

The Straits Times observes that if the last accounts from Penang are to be credited the Lieutenant-Governor of that island has been making himself intensely disagreeable and unpopular in his public capacity. An indignation meeting was held in the Exchange Rooms to consider his conduct in shutting up Government-hill grounds to the public, and the disgraceful state in which the Esplanade, which is the only public promenade, is said to be kept by his action and orders. Colonel Anson probably has his side of the story to tell, and may be perfectly able to justify legally all he has done or said, but a universal cry of dissatisfaction and disapproval is sufficient alone to condemn any ruler, law and facts to the contrary notwithstanding. It is only to be recollected that the residents are probably at present in an exceptionally irritable state, owing to their postal grievances and the heat of the weather, which appears to be very considerable.

It is said that the Lieutenant-Governor has been living on the hill for the last two-and-a-half months, while he had leave for only six weeks, and that he came down to office to attend to his public duties only once a week, which the Palm islanders think rather cool. Then, while he was on the hill, he employed convicts (who should do Government work alone) to cut grass on the plain for his ponies on the hill. This is considered useless waste of labour, as residents on the hill have, for the last fifty years, fed their ponies with hill grass which is quite good. Next, since his descent from the hill, he has been employing a gang of about twenty convicts making a croquet ground and ornamenting the policies about the house he rents. This is considered highly selfish and high-handed in the existing scarcity of convicts for Government work. Further, the esplanade, the cricket ground and evening promenade, has become an impassable swamp, or a black morass (such are the expressions), because his Honour insists on letting the grass grow up to thirty inches, to be cut for sale, instead of renting the ground to owners of cows and sheep, for grazing, as has been always the custom for years. The crowning grievance of all, and the one which has caused most bitterness of feeling, is the shutting up the grounds of the Government Hill Bungalow to the public, even when it is unoccupied.

To a letter forwarded by the chairman of the meeting above mentioned, the following reply was returned:—

"SIR,—I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 27th inst., and to inform you that the grounds of Government-house on the hill have never been thrown open to the public. 2. I am at a loss to comprehend how allowing the grass to grow on the esplanade outside Fort Cornwallis should have converted the ground into a swamp. In my opinion, which is, however, open to correction, the rain has caused this, and not the long grass. 3. The grazing of animals on the esplanade is prohibited by law. 4. I have observed for several days prior to the date of your letter, that a number of men were employed in cutting the grass on the esplanade, which work must be now nearly completed. 5. Trusting these explanations will be found satisfactory by your constituents,—I am, Sir, your most obedient servant, A. E. H. ANSON, Lieutenant-Governor."

The Penang Gazette characterises the whole movement as an absurdity, and considers Colonel Anson's reply a wholesome "set-down" for the "misguided individuals" who formed the meeting.

The same paper says:—"The Shroff of the Penang Supreme Court has come to grief, Mr. Isemonger, of the Auditor General's office, on his tour of inspection having discovered a series of falsifications of accounts which enabled the Shroff to perpetrate frauds amounting to 800 dollars. We believe that the Registrar of the Court is liable to some extent for this deficiency."

It is rumoured that should the present Lieutenant-Governor of Malacca go home on sick leave, Captain Ord, at present Police Magistrate and Commissioner of the Court of Requests there, will be appointed to fill the vacancy.

Intelligence received from Yokohama by last mail announced that one of the boats of the wrecked steamer Wolga had safely reached an island not far from that port, and that the thirteen men who escaped in her were all saved except Mr. Whittaker, an engineer of H.M.S. Rinaldo, who had died in consequence of the privations he had endured. A memorandum issued by the Admiralty, under date July 4, states, however, that intelligence has reached that department of Mr. Whittaker having reached the island of Miaki alive, and we are informed that the despatch alluded to was quite distinct as to the personal safety of Mr. Whittaker up to the time of arrival at that island. It is to be feared that the news of his death is equally reliable, but it occurred after he had reached Miaki.

CHINA AND JAPAN IMPORTS.

YOKOHAMA.—We are without commercial advices from this port.

SHANGHAI.—Owing to the loss of the Benares, with the P. and O. mail, our dates from this port only extend to the 19th May. The following is a review of the markets between the 9th and 16th May:—The arrivals had been the Lennox Castle from London, the Achilles, str., from Liverpool, and the Whinfell from Cardiff; the two former with general cargoes and the latter coal laden. Grey Shirtings: The firmness of holders had caused a rise in prices, and rates showed an advance of 3 to 4 candareens per piece. There had been a fair demand among the native dealers, and foreign speculation had tended to enhance the value of goods to arrive. Several large sales of this description were reported. T-Cloths: 7 lbs. dull of sale at last rates. The arrivals of 8 lbs. from Hong Kong have temporarily overstocked the market, and prices were weak. White Shirtings: Were still in small demand, and difficult to place. Woollens: Long Ells had further advanced in value, mainly owing to foreign purchases. Other classes showed no change. Metals: Iron Nail Rod: There was a good demand for Nail Rod, which was easily saleable; late arrivals had not materially increased supplies, and stocks remained low. Nail Rod tls. 2.65 to 2.70, Hoop tls. 2.50 to 2.55, Flat and Round tls. 2.60. Coals: The only arrival had been the Whinfell with 1,150 tons of Cardiff. Sales had been made of American at tls. 13.50, Cardiff tls. 11, Japan "to arrive" tls. 7.50, other kinds without inquiry.

HANKOW.—Grey Shirtings: Early in the fortnight these goods were almost unsaleable, but latterly, a small demand springing up, sales were made at a decline of 2 to 3 candareens per piece. The fall had, however, since been nearly recovered, and closing rates were tls. 2.23 to tls. 2.27 per piece for 8 lbs. 4 oz. cloth, and tls. 1.95 to tls. 1.97 per piece for 7 lbs. White Shirtings were quite out of favour. T-Cloths: For really fine makes the market was firm, though the demand was not large. The common class were in excessive supply. Drills: Prices firm, but few buyers. Fancy Cottons much neglected, and prices tended downwards. Camlets: In the absence of any demand of importance prices were weak. Lastings: Firm at former quotations. Long Ells: Prices were nominally higher, but no sales had transpired. For Spanish Stripes, Medium and Broad Cloths, and Figured Orleans there had been no inquiry. Metals: Lead was in little request, and could not be valued higher than tls. 6.80 per picul for best brands. Quicksilver: A sale had been effected at tls. 50 per picul, but the demand was very trifling. Tin: There had not been any transactions, and the quotation of tls. 19.50 to tls. 20 per picul was quite nominal.

FOOCHOW.—The only business reported during the interval was as follows:—500 pieces 8¼lb. Grey Shirting, at $3.23 per piece; 3,000 pieces 7lb. do., at $2.50 per picul; 300 pieces 7lb. T-Cloths, at $2.60 per piece.

LEAD.—200 piculs had been sold at $11 per picul. Owing to large arrivals from Shanghai, sales could not be effected at a better rate than $10 per picul.

HONG KONG.—Cotton Yarn: Dealers had been purchasing quietly but steadily, and values showed a further advance of $2.50 per bale, the market closing with an upward tendency. Piece Goods: Staple manufactures had attracted little attention during the first half of the interval, but subsequently buyers re-entered the market, and a fair business had been done; holders of all descriptions were very firm, and disposed to take advantage of any extended movement. 7 lbs. Grey Shirtings, White Shirtings of all reeds, English Drills, and 8 to 10 lbs. T-Cloths exhibited an advance of 5 to 10 cents per piece. A parcel of 2,000 pieces Dutch Drills had found buyers at $5, and 400 bales 40 yard American Drills (Pepperell) had been placed at $5.50 per piece. The latter were inquired for, and there were buyers of Pepperell "to arrive" at $5.25. First receipts of favourite marks would doubtless fetch fully $5.50 per piece. Woollens: All descriptions had been in demand since the arrival of the mail with advices of an advance in values in the home market, and we have to report a much larger business in all kinds—excepting Blankets, which were out of stock—than during any previous fortnight for some time past. A general improvement in values had been the result, and there were now but few sellers at quotations. As the season advanced a further marked improvement was confidently looked for. Metals: A fair business had been done in iron at weaker prices for Nail rod, and former rates for other kinds. Steel was again dearer. Lead unchanged. Tin lower, supplies having come to hand. Tin plates and quicksilver were firm. Coal: Receipts amounted to 2,300 tons Sydney, 1,500 do. English, and 400 ditto Formosa, and sales had been about 1,200 tons Sydney, ex ship, at $12. English and Welsh Coals were not inquired for, and were somewhat lower. Anthracite was held at $15 per ton. The quotations at the close ruled as follows:—Cotton Yarn—Nos. 16 to 24, $125 to 137.50 per bale; Nos. 28 to 32, $147.50 to 157.50; Nos. 38 to 42, $155 to 160. Grey Shirtings: 7 lbs., $2.55 to 2.60 per pc.; 8 lbs., $2.85 to 2.90; 8¼ lbs., $3 to 3.10; 9 lbs, $3.45 to 3.55; 9½ lbs, $3.60 to 3.65. White Shirtings: 54 to 60 reed, $2.30 to 2.60 per piece; 64 to 66, $3 to 3.20; 68 to 72, $3.40 to 4. English Drills: 40 yards, $4.75 to 4.85 per piece; 30 yards, $3 to 3.10. T-Cloths, 6 to 6.2 lbs. $1,95 to 2.05 per piece; 6.5 to 6.8, $2.10 to 2.20; 7, $2.35 to 2.70; 7.2, $2.55 to 2.65; 8, $3 to 3.10; 8.4, $3.10 to 3.20; 9 to 10, $3.35 to 3.60. Woollens: Long Ells H Scarlet, $8.90 to 9; H Assorted, $8.40 to 8.60; HH Scarlet, $9 to 9.10; HH Assorted, $8.60 to 8.80; Spanish Stripes, Scarlet, $0.90 to 1 per yard; Assorted, $0.88 to 1. Metals: Iron, Nail-rod, $2.85 to 3.05 per picul; Square, Round and Flat bar, $3.10 to 4.30; Hoop, $3.40 to 3.50; Wire, $8.50 to 9.50.

CHINA AND JAPAN EXPORTS.

TEA.

SHANGHAI.—The following report extends to the 16th May:—There had been doing nothing in old Teas, the Stock (with the exception of a few hundred packages common Greens still left over) having been entirely exhausted. Of the new crop it would be impossible to say anything definite before another fortnight had elapsed. Judging by the large amount of capital sent into the country this season, prices were likely to rule high there and to be freely responded to when the packed teas arrive at the ports for sale. The first arrivals of muster chests were expected in Hankow about the 24th May.

FOOCHOW.—The following is from Messrs. Olyphant and Co.'s report:—The feature of the fortnight has been the opening of the market for new season's 'Congous, at prices which are generally looked upon as fairly reasonable, considering the superior quality of the Teas as compared with those of last season, the general improvement in business of all kinds in Great Britain, the favourable advices respecting the London Tea market now coming out both by mail and wire, and the very strong statistical position. The effect of the continued favourable advices, we much fear, will be to do away with any idea of conservative action, and lead to an extremely active demand at enhanced values; and we are of opinion that, unless adverse advices reach us from Great Britain, prices throughout the season will rule over, rather than under, those paid at the opening. The first ship with new season's Teas—the Belted Will—sailed from Macao on the evening of the 25th May, but her cargo has not yet been circulated. New Congous commenced to arrive about the 17th May, and on the 22nd (stock amounting to about 30,000 chests) the market was opened at 26 to 33 tls. short, or 2 to 3 tls. over last season's opening rates, and up to the evening of the 23rd 44,000 chests Congous and 4,700 half-chests Oolongs had been taken. Medium grades not being taken so rapidly as teamen expected they would be, holders became anxious to realise, and a slight decline in prices for such teas took place, the market still having a downward tendency at the close, but fine grades maintained their opening values, and the few parcels of finest to hand commanded very full prices, Pehlings in some instances being taken at an advance of 5 tls. on last season's prices. No Sinchunes or Kaisows had been received. The quality of first arrivals of Congous was disappointing, the teas being largely mixed with old leaf, but later receipts showed an improvement, and on the whole the teas are considered superior to those of last season, possessing considerably more strength. Prices for Oolongs are slightly in advance of those for first parcels last season, but this is made up by the quality of the teas, which are preferable both in leaf and liquor. Messrs. Rusden, Phipps and Co. offer the following remarks:—Congou: The first crop is reported large, say 25 to 30 per cent. more than last season. About 65,000 chests have arrived, of which 15,000 chests are Foochow packed. The Teas are stronger than last year, and are not so much intermixed with black leaves of last season's picking and firing. They are also generally in good condition. But on the other hand, the fresh picked leaf is old, and most of the chops have in consequence a coarseness of flavour unusual in first crop Teas. Indeed the lower sorts generally taste more like third, than first crop. The best district Teas have not yet arrived, but are reported to be good in quality, though rather rough and large in leaf. The market was opened yesterday, at tls. 25 to 28 for Yung Hows and Hap Yangs; tls. 27 to 33 for Sa Nues; tls. 27 to 37 for inferior to good Suey Kuts; and tls. 37 to 40 for Peklings; being about tls. 2 to 4 higher than last year's prices. Oolong: About 10,000 half-chests have arrived, and so far the crop appears to be of inferior quality.

CANTON.—A good business had been done in Teas, chiefly during the first few days subsequent to the departure of the last mail. There had since been but little enquiry, and Tea men were anxious to realise at a decline from the prices paid for the earlier settlements, the second crop—which was reported to be both large and of good quality—being shortly expected. Holders would concede fully 2 tls. for scented, and would probably accept still lower figures should the demand continue light.

The Circular of George Holmes gives the number of disengaged vessels in harbour (exclusive of Siamese) at nine, representing 3,910 tons.

At MANILA.—There are no vessels loading, but £4 10s. to £4 15s. could be obtained for sugar to the United Kingdom; £5 for hemp 20 cwt.

At SINGAPORE.—There is a good demand for tonnage to all parts. There is however a scarcity of vessels in harbour. To London the Moss Trooper was engaged full at £3 15s., but the next vessel taken up only obtained £3 10s.

COMMERCIAL POSTSCRIPT.

TEA.—Messrs. Percival and Co.'s Circular of this date says:—"The Tea Market still remains in the same dull and inactive state, and the business of the last fortnight has been chiefly confined to the public sales. At these sales common to fair blackish and reddish-leaf Congous sold heavily at a further decline of ½d. to 1d. per lb., medium to fine, in some cases, showing a drop of fully 2d. per lb. on rates ruling a fortnight ago. Broken-leaf kinds and Dust sold a shade easier. Since the conclusion of the sales dealers have shown some disposition to operate at the reduced sale quotations, but can only meet with occasional small parcels, and business in consequence continues limited. Green Teas have sold rather more readily during the last few days, more especially good common to fair Gunpowders. In Uncoloured Japans a fair amount of business has been done at 1s. for common, 1s. 2d. to 1s. 4d. for fair to medium. The public sales, which commenced on the 7th instant, comprised 25,734 packages, of which 22,500 were sold.

SILK.—The market is rather more active, and prices continue extremely firm in all descriptions. No. 3 chop Tsatlees have been sold at 30s. in Shanghai of the new silk, and 1000 bales settled, including all descriptions. Fine Bengal of best sorts are scarce. Deliveries are of fair extent.

LEGAL.

COURT OF BANKRUPTCY.—JULY 4.

RE GEORGE LYALL.

This was an adjourned sitting for discharge, the last examination upon the accounts having been passed at a former sitting.

Mr. Bazley represented the assignees, who did not oppose; Mr. Reed and Mr. Knight opposed for a Mr. Liebert, a creditor for upwards of £60,000; and Mr. Sargood (specially retained) supported the bankrupt.

At a former hearing a lengthened correspondence between the opposing creditor and the members of the firm was read, and to-day Mr. Reed concluded his address in opposition to the granting of an order of discharge upon two grounds—first, in contracting the opposing creditor's debt without reasonable expectation of payment; and secondly, for carrying on business by means of fictitious capital.

We give Mr. Commissioner Holroyd's judgment verbatim.

The Commissioner: [Interrupting Mr. Sargood, who was beginning his reply] I do not think I need trouble you, Mr. Sargood, in this case In disposing of this case, I may say, in the first instance, I cannot but lament the very heavy loss sustained by Mr. Liebert in his dealings with the bankrupt. At the same time I think we must, with all our feelings for Mr. Liebert, not the less do justice towards the bankrupt himself. Now the opposition to the bankrupt under the 159th section is rested upon three heads: trading on fictitious capital, contracting debts without any reasonable expectation of payment, and that the bankruptcy is occasioned by rash and hazardous speculations. I think it necessary that we should go back to the earlier career of the bankrupt in considering the different points. It seems that the bankrupt had been doing business as a merchant for twenty-seven or twenty-eight years, and he had carried on business it appears successfully for a considerable time, and he was for some time in partnership with Mr. Still. In 1863, Mr. Maclean, who was before clerk in their house, was introduced and became a partner. Then they established the house at Hong Kong. Then it also appears that in 1863 and for several subsequent years, or at least in 1863, they had a surplus of £21,447, and therefore I must take it that up to 1863 they had been trading with very great success. In addition to that, Mr. Lyall and Mr. Still, who had been in partnership before together, had what they called separate property, so as to distinguish it from property which might belong to the firm of Lyall, Still, and Maclean, and that property was of the value of £72,580. There was therefore a surplus of £21,000 and £72,500, or nearly £100,000. In 1864 the business seems to have rather taken a turn unfavourable to the bankrupts, but still in 1864 they did not absolutely lose; on the contrary, they had a surplus in 1864 of £17,300. Then as we go on from 1864 things seem to have got worse, and they were obliged, or at all events Lyall and Still, who had this property which belonged to them of the value of £72,500, were willing that it should be made available for the benefit of the firm, and it is, in fact, brought into account, so that I cannot say that persons trading in that way, and who are in the position here stated in 1864, should stop their business then. I think it would be going a great deal too far. Then how long should they go on? They were dealing in matters which we all know take sudden turns as to value, and it is difficult to say, in fact, in answering one of Mr. Reed's questions, "When is the time to stop?" It really is very difficult for a person in that position who, having had considerable capital and carried on business successfully for so many years, to say that, when things begin to take a reverse, they must stop. I think that cannot be contended. Then when are they to stop? Undoubtedly they may have gone on longer, as things have turned out, than one would think prudent for them to have done. They might have stopped earlier. Going on longer than they might, and, as it is proved, they ought to have done, is not an offence in itself; but that and various other circumstances charged by Mr. Reed are charged as circumstances of aggravation, as if any of the substantial offences in the Act of Parliament were distinctly proved. There are circumstances which one might have drawn from the correspondence which passed previously to the bankruptcy, which might have brought in that by way of aggravation to a particular statutory charge if that statutory charge were proved. In this case I must say I feel great difficulty in saying that any substantive charge under the Act of Parliament has been distinctly proved against the bankrupt under which any of the aggravated circumstances can possibly be brought in. Though there may be aggravated circumstances there must be proof, and clear proof, of the statutory offence, so that those aggravated circumstances might be brought in adversely to the bankrupt.

Then comes the question as to the substantive offences. Has there been a substantive offence proved? As regards fictitious capital, it appears to me there is no pretence for saying that the bankrupts have been trading upon fictitious capital. They did not manufacture accommodation bills and raise money upon those. They raised money on what has always been held, and has also been decided in the case of ex parte Fryer, not to be improper trading; that is, drawing to a certain extent against consignments. They raised their money in that way, and also by banks. Of course there must be a vast number of traders in this city who carry on business upon borrowed capital, but I have never heard it called fictitious capital. Money borrowed may be borrowed in a fair way and a legitimate way from bankers, and even if they overdraw the bank, if the bank chooses to allow it, that does not constitute an offence under the Act of Parliament, so that as to fictitious capital that may be disposed of.

Then as to contracting debts without a reasonable expectation of payment, I think that is also equally unavailable. Mr. Liebert's debt, without taking into account what is called the triplicate account, amounts to above £40,000. That debt was contracted, I think, or the bulk of it was contracted, more than ten months previously to the bankruptcy.

Mr. Sargood: The whole of it, I think, in April.

The Commissioner: I think there was some later. There was some at nine and ten months and three or four months; but what was contracted at a very late period, I believe, was recovered by Mr. Liebert, and, therefore, we may take it that the bulk, at all events, of the debt was contracted previously to June, 1866. That being the case, we look to see what payments the bankrupt made subsequently to June, 1866, and I find that the payments that he made subsequently to June, 1866, in this country—that is to say, in the several months of July, August, September, October, and November, 1866, and January and February, 1867—amounted to £63,298. I find, in addition to that, that the payments made by the China house to the Manchester creditors since June 1866, has been £115,000. Then I find further that, according to their course of trading, they drew against teas and silk, leaving a margin—and a considerable margin; and that what they drew against tea and silk would have left them, according to the margin which was reserved, about £40,000. If the teas, instead of going down, as I believe they did, or teas and silk, to something like an extraordinary price, had kept their prices or had risen in price, they would have had then nearly £40,000 more. So that altogether their assets seemed to be something like £200,000, and the house would have a right to have credit for that, as having paid it, or that which they might fairly consider would be available to them at that period, and that is after contracting Mr. Liebert's debt. Therefore, assuming they had all that money at their command, I think it cannot be said that they might not have paid if they had chosen, and it might possibly turn out that they ought to have chosen to have paid Mr. Liebert's debt in preference to some others which they had paid. Mr. Liebert might have the prior claim, but still if they had means at their disposal and chose to say, "we have got all these moneys, and we will pay these various creditors, A, B, C, and D, and we will exclude Liebert," for reasons which might have satisfied them they might do it, it cannot be said that Mr. Liebert's debt was contracted without any reasonable expectation of being able to pay it, if they had money with which they could have paid it if they had chosen.

Then, disposing of that, the remaining question is as to "rash and hazardous speculation." Now, with respect to that, it cannot be considered to be rash and hazardous speculation when a merchant who has been going on for some years in a particular course of dealing and in what I may call a legitimate course of trading, continues that course of trading in the same way as he has done before, and carries on his business as he has done before. It cannot be said that that is to be called "rash and hazardous." He does not deviate in the least from his former mode of trading, and then it simply resolves itself into this, that "rash and hazardous" does not mean "rash and hazardous" simply from this cause, that he ought to have stopped his trading sooner, and not incurred these last dealings. Assuming he should have stopped earlier, as I said before, that is not held to be an offence under the Act of Parliament. Under all the circumstances, and taking into consideration the fact that there must be proof by clear evidence of "rash and hazardous" trading, it cannot be said that the bankruptcy has been occasioned by "rash and hazardous" speculation.

Then there is one other circumstance which I think also very material in the present case, and which ought to be adverted to in favour of the bankrupt. It has been said and strongly urged that the bankrupt had been deceiving Mr. Liebert. Now so far from deceiving Mr. Liebert, it is necessary in the first place that I should say Mr. Liebert really did not place that confidence in the bankrupt which is usual between merchants and buyer and seller. Mr. Liebert adopted, as he had a right to do if he thought fit, a mode which satisfied his mind that he should under any circumstances secure to himself the payment of these goods. He would not trust the bankrupt, and he said "No, I must take care to secure the proceeds of these goods to satisfy the prices which you ought to pay me for them." He does that through the medium of what has been referred to in the invoice. That again is brought forward as a charge against the bankrupt of what is called substituting an invoice. The course with respect to that appears to have been this. Mr. Liebert, as I said before, having chosen not to give uncontrolled credit as it were, and to rely upon the bankrupt himself for the payment of these goods, said, "No, I will have an invoice drawn up in a particular manner, and I will send that to your house at Hong Kong, so as to secure to me the proceeds of those goods, to be remitted here to meet the bills drawn against the goods." Then he also sent a copy of that invoice to the bankrupt, and in respect of that it is first said that the bankrupt did not simply add or did not simply send a copy of the invoice that he received from Liebert and add to that the freight, so that they might know, but he sent a fresh invoice altogether to the house at Hong Kong, simply stating that the goods were consigned on the part of those concerned without particularly alluding to the return of the proceeds to satisfy the bills. The charge against the bankrupt is that that was done fraudulently and with a view to prevent Mr. Liebert getting the price of his goods. Mr. Liebert thought that a course had been taken which operated as a lien upon the goods or the proceeds of the goods, and which secured to himself the payment for the goods. The bankrupt thought the same. The bankrupt has sworn that he thought Mr. Liebert had secured to himself that which would bring the returns and satisfy him; and if that had been the course of procedure out there, of course Mr. Liebert would not have suffered by the bankrupt. Then, it is also material on his behalf to refer to this: he says, and it is not disproved, that it was not usual to show these invoices that went out to the bankers or the persons who were asked to advance money upon the goods. They, I suppose, only produced the bills of lading and shipping documents; and so far it appears, in point of fact, that these invoices were not shown to the persons from whom the goods were obtained. At the same time it seems to me there is no reason for charging the bankrupt with any intentional fraud in what he did. On the contrary, it appears to be proved in evidence, and to be in accordance with his former practice from the year 1863 up to the latest period, to send all his invoices in the same form as that which has now been objected to. It is true that at an earlier date—I think as far back as 1861—there was an invoice in the form in which Mr. Liebert had drawn the invoice, but afterwards, with that exception, the course pursued by the bankrupt, as I said before, was in pursuance of that which he had followed and had been following for a course of two years. No complaint appears to have arisen under that course of dealing, but even taking it in the worst possible way (and I admit it would be more satisfactory, and I should have thought it more satisfactory, and the creditors would have thought it more satisfactory, if the invoice he wished to be sent out had been sent out), still it does not appear to have arisen from any bad intention on the part of the bankrupts, as it was not usual to show those invoices to the parties advancing the money. Therefore I cannot say from that that the bankrupt has been guilty of any offence under the Act of Parliament. But even assuming for a moment that there had been and there was evidence to show that the bankrupt had some bad intention or fraudulent intention in thus forwarding these invoices, still, if he had made an engagement with Mr. Liebert that he would send those particular invoices, and had broken that engagement afterwards, although that might be a very dishonest act on his part I admit, still it would not be an offence under the Act of Parliament. It would not be contracting debts without the expectation of being able to pay. It would not be "rash and hazardous speculation," though it would have been very wrongful on the part of the bankrupt so to do, but at the same time it would not constitute an offence; and, as I said at the beginning, I must be satisfied that some substantive offence has been clearly proved against the bankrupt, and as clearly proved against him as if it were in a criminal court, before I can say that upon such substantive offence being proved the proof of aggravating circumstances may be added so as to ask for severe punishment against the bankrupt.

Then as to the cases which have been cited, I think, after what I have stated, I need hardly add anything as to ex parte Fryer and ex parte Barker; ex parte Barker being simply the case of a bankrupt, by means of discounting and obtaining money from accommodation bills to a considerable amount, and there being no evidence of what money he had available to satisfy all those demands, it was held that that was contracting debts without a reasonable expectation of being able to pay. That is not the present case. The case of ex parte Fryer, again, alluded to the facts where there were particular charges made against the bankrupt, and clearly proved, and in addition to those facts as to the whole course of dealing. I should state that all these cases must depend upon their own particular circumstances, and that some circumstances taken by themselves might be very much altered in their bearing in connection with other circumstances which may exist in one case and not exist in another, and, therefore, it is difficult to apply cases except to apply any particular principle laid down in the case. It is difficult to say that one case must be governed entirely by another case.

Then as to the case that has been cited of ex parte Marks, as to contracting debts without reasonable expectation, that was one where the party in that case might have expected to pay from selling the goods. It appears he might and he could have paid that particular debt. Then as to the last case cited, of Lewine and Morris, I can only say with respect to that it appears to me that the circumstances in that case were as different as light and darkness from the circumstances in this.

Therefore, under all the circumstances of this case, I think the bankrupt must have his order of discharge. I do not know that it is necessary for me to say anything about the house in China, but it appears to me, although I have no right to say anything for or against the house in China, that the partners there have obtained their orders of discharge.

Mr. Sargood: Both of them.

THE PACIFIC RAILWAYS.

APROPOS of the Chinese Embassy, and the renewed interest it has aroused in the question of rapid communication with China and Japan, the American papers teem with glowing anticipations of the golden future awaiting the United States when the Pacific Railway and Mail Route shall become "the high road from Europe to the East." We are informed that there now remain "only" 900 miles of railroad to be made to complete the direct communication between the Atlantic and Pacific coasts; that this gap will probably be filled up during the coming winter; that early in 1869 it will be possible to reach San Francisco in ten days or a fortnight from New York in comfortable cars; and that, as means of of transport are perfected, goods will pass over the route, and especially the light and costly goods of the East, with almost as great rapidity. Of the consequences to the United States of the opening of this new channel of communication, the most prodigious expectations are formed; and on the strength of the benefits to accrue to New York and San Francisco an era of feverish speculation has already set in to such an extent as to affect the value of land in both cities. The undeniable success of the China line undertaken by the Pacific Mail Company has led the American public to regard as an absolute certainty the eventual monopoly of the entire traffic between Europe and Asia. If the trade is already so great, they ask, what will it be when nearly all the Oriental products consumed in Europe, as well as in the United States, are brought over the Pacific Railroad, instead of round Cape Horn or the Cape of Good Hope? While the diversion of the bulk of the silk freight from the present Overland Route to their own line is taken as a foregone conclusion.

These calculations seem, however, somewhat premature, at least as far as Europe is concerned. No doubt the route will be a pleasant one for passengers, more especially on account of its doing away with the long voyage in the tropics; the admitted luxury of railway travelling in the States would be an additional inducement, were it not perhaps more than counterbalanced by the equally well-known frequency of those terrific accidents which every now and then involve the sacrifice of a holocaust of victims to Yankee go-a-head-ism. But it requires a very far-seeing eye to discern the period when English metals and piece-goods for the China market, or the supplies of tea and silk for all Europe, will be diverted from their present channel simply that they may travel over 3,000 miles of American railways. A single example will suffice to show the futility of such an idea. Silk or other merchandise shipped from Shanghai by the Peninsular and Oriental steamers, can be landed at Southampton within sixty days. By the Pacific line, as at present worked, it would reach San Francisco in thirty days; if to this we add fifteen for the railway journey, ten for crossing the Atlantic, and five for the various transshipments, we arrive at precisely the same result in point of time, but with the disadvantages of a route far more liable to delays and accidents, with a long railway transit of a necessarily expensive character. And should the Suez Canal ever fulfil its promise of conveying large vessels from the Red Sea to the Mediterranean, so that cargo may be conveyed to and fro between Europe and China or Japan by that route, without any transshipment at all, our American cousins may bid a long farewell to any hope of securing even the smallest portion of the traffic. Still, the scheme of an inter-oceanic railway is a grand one, and its completion will be fraught with important results to the New World. A New York correspondent points out that one of the curious results already arising from the opening of this new route to China and Japan is that the region which has been known to the civilised world for so many years as "the East" is now metamorphosed into "the West." Both China and Japan now begin to be considered and talked of all over the United States as Western countries, and Europe begins to be the "East."

THE HONG KONG MINT.

THE short and anything but brilliant career of the Hong Kong Mint came to a conclusion on the 25th of May last. It is with no little regret that we record the apparently final extinction of an institution from which we, in common with many well-wishers of the colony, had anticipated very beneficial results; but from the first it has had a succession of adverse influences to contend with, and in the end these have proved destructive. The first of them, as we long since pointed out, was the mistake of paying the whole cost of the building and plant, amounting to some $400,000, in so short a time out of the revenue of the colony, instead of adopting some plan by which it might have been spread over a term of years; thus draining the treasury, and creating a prejudice against the Mint to begin with. Then came the panic, with its attendant financial crisis, its unfavourable effect in the course of exchange, and the almost total cessation of specie shipments. Besides all this, there seems to have existed all along a degree of hostility in official quarters which could hardly fail to end fatally, and which moreover has been characterised by a degree of energy that, had it been directed in a friendly spirit, might have ensured a very different result to the experiment. Rather more than twelve months since (in June, 1867) we reluctantly admitted that the prospect of a successful continuance of operations was doubtful, but we then pleaded for another year's trial, in the hope that within that time "something would turn up." At the last moment, it seems, something did turn up; two of the local banks gave Captain KINDER an opportunity of showing what the establishment could effect, even with a reduced staff, and during the last two months of its existence there were struck upwards of 3,000,000 coins, leaving a profit, we are told, after paying all expenses, of about $23,000.

Nearly the whole coinage produced since the establishment of the Mint has been absorbed in Singapore and the Straits, scarcely any of it having circulated in China, although there is little doubt that the subsidiary coins, if not the dollar itself, would have been as favourably received at the various open ports as they were in Hong Kong and Singapore, had any sustained effort been made to introduce them. We still adhere to our original opinion that the failure of the scheme proceeds from no inherent defect, but is attributable chiefly to an ill-founded prejudice and to the want of such support as might easily have been accorded by a Governor more favourably disposed towards it. No blame can be attributed to Captain KINDER, who, we believe, has been unremitting in his efforts to make it thoroughly efficient, and with evident success, as far as regards its internal economy; and it is to be hoped that on his return, under circumstances so unsatisfactory to himself, the Home Government will not overlook his claim to some appointment of equal value.

THE PENANG MAIL SERVICE.

AT length the persevering endeavours of the Penang merchants and their friends have been rewarded by a discussion in the House of Commons on the question of renewing the mail service between that port and England. As we feared, all efforts to shake the determination of the Treasury proved unavailing. From the reply of Mr. SCLATER-BOOTH to Mr. BARING'S interrogatories, it will be seen that the P. and O. Company have offered to resume calling at Penang on their outward and homeward voyages, as under the former arrangement, for an additional sum of £5,000 per annum, which it is calculated would about defray the cost of the extra fuel expended. This must be admitted to be a very liberal overture on the part of the company, and the meanness of the policy that induced the Government to reject it can hardly be characterised in moderate language. The object is evidently to coerce the Straits Government into undertaking to bear a share of the extra expenditure. But before taking such a step as this, the GOVERNOR and his Council will do well to take into consideration the expense they have already incurred far the maintenance of two Straits steamers, besides a third now building on the Clyde. These vessels might surely be made available for some other duty, in addition to what at present seems their sole purpose, namely, the carrying of Straits officials from one port to another.

THE Duke of BUCKINGHAM has appointed CHARLES OWEN, Esq., of the Inner Temple, barrister-at-law, Senior Magistrate in the Straits Settlements, to reside at Singapore.

LITERATURE.

Rambles of a Naturalist in the China Seas. By CUTHBERT COLLINGWOOD, M.A., M.B., F.L.S., &c. London: John Murray, Albemarle-street.—In this work—a handsome volume of nearly 450 pages—we have a record of the experiences and observations of an eminent naturalist during a series of voyages, including China, Formosa, Borneo, the Straits, Labuan, &c., during the years 1866 and 1867. The circumstances under which the expedition was undertaken are not fully entered into, but it was chiefly performed in Her Majesty's vessels Serpent and Scylla, to whose commanders and officers Mr. Collingwood, in a very modestly-written preface, avows himself indebted for much kindness and courtesy. The reader who takes up this volume with the foreboding that its contents must necessarily be dull and uninteresting to all except students of botany, zoology, and kindred pursuits, will be agreeably disappointed. Far from confining his record of observations to the comparatively narrow limits that might be anticipated from the title of his work, the author devotes many pleasant pages to remarks on the climate and scenery of the countries visited, as well as picturesque delineations of the life and social characteristics of the people he mingled with. Even the short chapter devoted—with a sort of half apology for attempting any description of such well-known ground—to the overland trip from Marseilles to Hong Kong, derives a new interest from the fresh, unconventional manner in which the old and almost worn out subject is treated, so that even here at the very outset we begin to appreciate the value of a work wherein superior scientific attainments are brought to the aid of natural good taste and keenness of perception. Hong Kong, as might be expected, afforded little to interest our naturalist; and after a sojourn of a fortnight there, he proceeded in the Serpent to the Pratas Island and reef. Those who have been in the habit of regarding the Pratas merely as one of the most formidable "dangers" of the China Sea, will be surprised at the numerous points of interest it possesses. Formosa was next visited, and affords material for several most interesting chapters, one of which is devoted to an overland trip across country, from Tam-suy to Ke-lung, with an account of the curious sulphur-springs in the neighbourhood of the former place. After a coasting voyage to Shanghai, Mr. Collingwood left the Serpent, which was ordered northwards, and returned to Hong Kong, to prepare for a visit to Labuan, and the graphic description given of this island and its productions forms perhaps the most interesting part of the book. Here Mr. Collingwood had many opportunities of research, and was rewarded by the discovery of several new species of marine animals; and these excursions and their results are described with such a pleasant enthusiasm that we can readily believe the author's statement that all the difficulties and vexations he encountered—and they were not a few—were amply compensated by "the delight of having visited nature in her deepest recesses, and viewed her in her grandest aspects." After this, a short stay at Sarawak gave an opportunity of penetrating into the interior of Borneo, and studying Dyak life. Then we come to Singapore, and here again the reader will be surprised and pleased at the novel view presented to him of a place so often described by previous travellers. The Chinese and the Klings, who form so large a proportion of the colonists of the Straits Settlements, are admirably described, and the ineradicable vice of gambling is not allowed to pass unnoticed. To some comments on the extent to which it prevails among the Chinese at Singapore is affixed the following footnote, which at the present time is especially interesting:—

> Since this has been written gambling has been legalised among the Chinese population at Hong Kong—a step which, while it has naturally given great offence to certain European classes, will be regarded leniently by those best acquainted with Chinese character, and will save the police a vast amount of trouble in hunting up and bringing to justice the numberless cases in which the attempt to restrict this Chinese institution was constantly being evaded by all classes, in whom the habit is too much a second nature to be eradicated by legislation.

These opinions—which, coming from such a source, are certainly deserving of respect—are not very dissimilar to those we have more than once expressed when writing on the much-vexed question of "the gambling ordinance." The opium trade also comes under consideration in this part of the book, and the author freely gives his opinion on it. He says it is a mistake to suppose that opium smoking obtrudes itself upon the notice of every traveller in China, and that the debasing and destructive effects of it meet the eye at every turn. It is an expensive luxury, and, like all other luxuries, is liable to abuse, and sometimes carried to excess; but, in proportion to the population, confirmed opium smokers in China are far less numerous than confirmed spirit drinkers in England.

> That opium smoking is a vice, and leads to evil, is not for a moment to be denied, but that it is of that extent which is commonly believed by some philanthropists well-disposed but ill-informed, is evidently a mistake. Undoubtedly, if it could be rooted out of the customs of the Chinese people it would be a desirable end—and so it would if drunkenness could be eradicated from among the English people—but both ideas, we fear, are equally Utopian and Quixotic. Merchants engaged in the opium trade are loudly condemned, but to be just, those engaged either directly or indirectly in the production of ardent spirits should meet with an equal amount of reprobation. There can be no manner of doubt that drunkenness is far more productive of misery and crime in this country than is opium smoking in China; while we are apt to forget that we are a Christian people, while the opium smoking Chinese are heathens, with a very imperfect natural appreciation of morality as understood in the west.

It must be admitted that the argument here is somewhat defective; for is it not our duty, as a "professedly Christian" nation, and having moreover experience of the deleterious effects of spirit drinking before us, to discourage, rather than aid, a heathen people who know no better in the use of another debasing stimulant? More than one tribe of American savages have been exterminated by the "firewater" supplied them by their Christian friends; may not opium produce, in the end, a similar result in China? But this is not the place for a dissertation on the opium trade—rather let us follow our author on his travels to Manila, and thence back to China, where he arrived in time to see the native new year holiday celebrated at Canton. Here our attention is attracted by several well-written chapters on Chinese manners, customs and idiosyncrasies, concluding with some pertinent remarks on the progress of missionary work among the natives. The remaining portion of the work is devoted to observations on "the surface population of the ocean;" "the luminosity of the sea" (both subjects treated in a manner equally entertaining and instructive), and the voyage home round the Cape; after perusing which we close the book with a grateful impression that we have travelled through many an old familiar scene with a new guide, to whom we are indebted for an appreciation of innumerable fresh and hitherto undiscovered beauties. We may safely predict a full measure of popularity for Mr. Collingwood's able work.

Chronique de la Revue Orientale. Paris, 8vo.—We have just received the first number of a new publication by the editors of the Revue Orientale. France possesses a number of very eminent Orientalists, but a very small public taking an interest in subjects relating to the Far East, and the proprietors of the Revue show great persistence under difficult circumstances. They propose in future to publish a periodical chronicle, of which the first number is before us, a brochure of sixteen pages, giving the news relating to the East, and also to continue the publication of original works from time to time. Amongst the items of news is that of the appointment, by Imperial decree, of M. Leon de Rosny as regular Professor of Japanese in the School of Living Oriental Languages of Paris, where he has heretofore conducted a supplementary course of instruction in the same language. Mr. A. Wylie's recent Notes on Chinese Literature is noticed in the Chronicle in high terms of praise, of which the following is an example:—"His work is not only a bibliographical manual, with an excellent index, but a course of literature which may be read from beginning to end with real pleasure, and which supplies in an attractive form a mass of information respecting the progress of Chinese civilisation which we seek in vain elsewhere." The writer of the notice says, that as Chinese literature is beyond question the richest and most varied in the East, it is to be hoped that in future Chinese scholars will furnish translations of some of the works of the best Chinese writers, instead of occupying their time in the production of bad romances, or insipid comedies, travestied to suit European taste. The recommendation is good, and we trust the editors of the Revue will set the example.

Rice Cultivation: Its Past History and Present Condition, with Suggestions for its Improvement. By LEOPOLD LUDOVICI. Colombo: J. Maitland and Co.—The subject of rice cultivation in Ceylon is one that has been much discussed of late, and not long since the Legislative Council of that colony appointed a select committee to inquire into it. The decay of agricultural industry, and its prejudicial effect on the condition of the native population, is attributed by the Government entirely to the apathy, the "love of ease and indolence" of the natives themselves; and the object of the work before us is not only to combat this idea, but to show that the real cause of decadence is misgovernment and neglect on the part of the European rulers of the island. In support of this view, Mr. Ludovici quotes the statement of Sir James Emerson Tennent, that during the last three centuries the Singhalese have seen three European nations in turn occupy their country and drain it of its wealth for their own enrichment; the Portuguese and Dutch carried away its cinnamon and pearls, the British have made its soil produce coffee and cocoanuts; but each has failed to do anything to encourage native industry or to emancipate the people from their dependent position. In proof of what these lazy, apathetic islanders could do for themselves before they were degraded by a foreign yoke, Mr. Ludovici points to the innumerable remains that still cover the island, remains of a vast system of tanks, canals, and water-courses, constructed and maintained by the native princes, under whose rule the development of agriculture was evidently the highest object aimed at. The remains of these gigantic works of irrigation—the silent witnesses of a bye-gone period of unexampled industry and prosperity—lie scattered over vast tracts of land now waste and barren; but many of these works says Mr. Ludovici (here again corroborated by the observations of Sir J. E. Tennent), including from five to seven hundred tanks, are still either in serviceable order, or susceptible of full restoration. Mr. Ludovici maintains that it is the duty of the Government to take measures for the restoration of these irrigation works; to rescind the present tax of one-tenth on paddy cultivation, an impost not only burdensome in itself, but most injurious in the mode of its collection; and generally to inaugurate a more liberal policy towards the native agriculturists. By these means only, he believes, can the material and moral advancement of the people, as well as the real interests of their rulers, be promoted; and we think he fairly makes out his case. Apart from its special object, the book derives great interest from the glimpses it affords of the early history and ancient glories of the island.

Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society. New Series, Vol. III. Part I. London: Trubner and Co.—The present volume of this journal contains a full proportion of communications on subjects attractive to students of Oriental philology. Of these the one most interesting to our own readers will be that headed "Remarks on the Indo-Chinese Alphabets," by Dr. A. Bastian. The races whose written languages form the subject of these remarks are the Siamese, Burmese, Annamese (including Cochin Chinese), the Mon (Talaing and Peguan), and the Kambodian. With the exception of the people of Annam, who follow the Chinese, all the rest of these Indo-Chinese nations have received their alphabets from India, but have adapted them to their monosyllabic tongues by the introduction of those accents or inflections which are so important and curious a feature of the Chinese language; a circumstance that gives rise to many interesting points of comparison. The King of Siam, it appears, has invented an alphabet which he considers adapted to all the Indo-Chinese dialects, as well as to languages of the Arian family, and has had some books printed in it at his own press in Bangkok; he has also constructed a Pali grammar on the system of the Latin grammar.

THE CHINESE EMBASSY.

The Chinese Embassy has returned to New York from Washington, and an early departure for Europe may be looked for. Just before leaving the American capital the Celestials attended a party given them by General Grant, and on their arrival at New York they were entertained at a grand banquet by the merchants of that city, at which another somewhat remarkable speech was made by Mr. Burlinghame. The following report of the proceedings is from a New York paper:—

The banquet to the Hon. Anson Burlinghame and his associates of the Chinese Embassy, given at Delmonico's on Tuesday evening by the citizens of New York, was in every respect worthy of hosts and guests. About two hundred and fifty sat down to dinner, including the Mayor and many of the most prominent citizens of New York. Governor Fenton presided. Shortly before ten o'clock the chairman, having called the company to order, spoke as follows:—

Having referred to the satisfaction this occasion afforded him, and the pleasure he took in welcoming the distinguished visitors from the Government of China, Governor Fenton said that in politics, history, and geography our nation presented interesting comparisons with the Chinese. The oldest Government of the East invited the civilisation of the West. The oldest, most fixed and secluded society extended a friendly salutation to the youngest, most liberal and progressive of nations, and great results to humanity would follow. It is our destiny to open up a nursery of freedom, equality, and progress for Europe and for Asia. It was the fortune of the speaker to be associated with Mr. Burlinghame in Congress for several years, and he rejoiced in the choice of Mr. Lincoln falling upon him for the China mission. No event in modern diplomacy has equal significance with the present Embassy. He assured Mr. Burlinghame of our appreciation of the friendliness and partiality of the Chinese Government in selecting him, an American citizen, as its leading representative to the world at large, and in choosing the United States as the first point of visit. In conclusion, he welcomed the Embassy to this City on behalf of the State, and offered their best wishes on their departure to complete elsewhere their noble mission. (Applause.)

Mr. Burlinghame responded as follows:—

Our first duty is to thank you for this cordial greeting, to say to you that it is not only appreciated by us, but that it will be appreciated by the distant people whom we represent—(applause)—to thank you for this unanimous expression of goodwill on the part of the great City of New York, to thank you that, rising above all local and party considerations, you have given a broad and generous welcome to a movement made in the interest of all mankind. (Applause.) We are but the humble heralds of this movement. It originated beyond the boundaries of our own influence, and has taken dimension beyond the reach of our most ardent hopes. That East which men have sought since the days of Alexander now itself seeks the West. (Cheers.) China, emerging from the mists of time, but yesterday suddenly entered your western gates and confronts you by its representatives here to-night. What have you to say to her? She comes with no menace on her lips; she comes with the great doctrine of Confucius, uttered two thousand three hundred years ago, "Do not unto others what you would not have others do unto you." Will you not respond with the more positive doctrine of Christianity? "We will do unto others what we would have others do unto us." (Cheers.) She comes with your own international law; she tells you that she is willing to come into relations of accord to it; that she is willing to abide by its provisions; that she is willing to take its obligations for its privileges; she asks you to forget your ancient prejudices; to abandon your assumptions of superiority; to submit your questions with her, as she proposes to submit her questions with you—to the arbitrament of reason. (Applause). She wishes no war, she asks of you not to interfere in her internal affairs; she asks you not to send her incompetent men; she asks that you will respect the neutrality of her waters and the integrity of her territory; she asks, in a word, to be left perfectly free to unfold herself precisely in that form of civilisation of which she is most capable; she asks you to give to those treaties which were made under the pressure of war a generous and Christian construction. (Cheers.) Because you have done this, because the Western nations have reversed their old doctrine of force, she responds, and in proportion as you have done that, in proportion as you have expressed your goodwill, she has come forth to meet you; and I aver that there is no spot on this earth where there has been greater progress made within the past few years than in the empire of China. (Applause). She has expanded her business; she has reformed her revenue system; she is changing her military and naval organisations; she has established a great school, where modern science and the foreign languages are to be taught. (Cheers). She has done this under very adverse circumstances; she has done this after a great war, a war lasting through thirteen years, a war out of which she comes with no national debt. (Laughter and applause.) You must remember how dense is her population; you must remember how difficult it is to introduce radical changes in such a country as that. The introduction of your own steamers threw out of employment 100,000 junkmen; the introduction of several hundred foreigners into her civil service embittered, of course, the ancient native employes. The establishment of a school was firmly resisted by a party led by one of the greatest men of the empire. Yet in defiance of all this, in spite of all this, the present enlightened Government of China has advanced steadily along the path of progress—sustained it is true, by the enlightened representatives of the Western Powers, at Peking; directed and guided largely by a modest and able man, Mr. Hart, Inspector-General of Customs, at the head of foreign employes in the Empire of China. Yet, notwithstanding all these things, notwithstanding this manifest progress, there are people who will tell you that China has made no progress, that her views are retrograde, and they tell you that it is the duty of the Western Treaty Powers to combine for the purpose of coercing China into reforms which she may desire and which she may not desire; who undertake to say that these people have no rights which we are bound to respect. In their coarse language they say, "Take her by the throat," using the tyrant's plea; they say they know better what China wants than China herself does. Not only do they desire to introduce new reforms born of their own interests or of their own caprices, but they tell you that the present Ministry must fall, and that the whole structure of China's civilisation must be overthrown. I know that these views are abhorred by the Governments and the countries from which they come, but they are far away from their countries; they are active, are brave, are unscrupulous, and if they happen to be officials it is in their power to complicate affairs and to involve their countries in war. Now, it is against the malign spirit of this tyrannic element that this mission was sent forth to the Christian world; it was sent forth that China might have her difficulties stated. That I happen to be at the head of it is, perhaps, more an accident than any design; it is, perhaps, because I happened to be longer there than any of my colleagues; it is, perhaps, because I was about to leave, and, perhaps, more than that, because my humble name was associated with the establishment of the co-operative policy, which, in conjunction with abler men, I aided in establishing not many years ago. I desire that the autonomy of China may be preserved; I desire that her independence may be preserved; I desire that she may have equality, that she may dispense equal privileges to all nations. If the opposite school should prevail, if you are to use coercion against that great people, then who is to exercise the coercion; whose force are you to use? whose views are you to use? You see that the very attempt to carry out any such tyrannic policy would involve not only China, but would involve you in bloody wars with each other. There are men of that tyrannic school who say that China is not fit to sit at the council board of the nations who call them barbarians, who attacked them on all occasions with a bitter, unrelenting spirit. These things I utterly deny. I say, on the contrary, that that is a great and noble people. (Cheers.) It has all the elements of a splendid nationality. It is the most numerous people on the face of the globe. It is the most homogeneous people in the world. It has a language spoken by more people than any other language in the world. It is a country where there is a greater unification of thought than in any other country in the world; it is a country where the maxims of the great sages, coming down and memorised, have permeated the whole people, until their knowledge is rather an instinct than an acquirement; a people loyal while living, and whose last prayer when dying is to sleep in the sacred soil of their fathers. (Applause.) It is the land of scholars; it is the land of schools; it is the land of books—from the simple pamphlet up to encyclopedias of 5,000 volumes; it is the land where privileges are equal; it is the land without caste, for they destroyed their feudal system 2,100 years ago, and they built up their great structure of civilisation on one great idea—that the people are the source of power. (Great cheering.) It is a sentiment that was uttered by Mencius 2,100 years ago, and it was old when he uttered it. The power goes forth from that people into practical government through the competitive system, and they make scholarship a test of merit. (Applause.) I say it is a great people. It is a polite people. It is a patient people. It is a sober people. It is an industrious people. And it is such a people as this that the bitter boor would exclude from the council hall of the nations. It is such a nation as this that the tyrannical element would put under its ban. They say of this people, nearly one-half of the human race, that they must become the weak wards of the West—wards of nations not so populous as many of their provinces, wards of people who are younger than their newest village in Manchuria. I do not mean to say that the Chinese are perfect. Far from it. They have their faults, like other people. They have their pride, like other people. They have their prejudices, like other people. These are profound, but they must be overcome. They have also their conceits, like other people. These must be done away. But they are not to be done away by talking to the Chinese with cannon; by telling them that they are feeble—that they are barbarians. No. China has been cut off by her position from the rest of the world. She has been separated from it by limitless deserts and by broad oceans; but now, when the views of men have so expanded that we behold the very globe itself diminishing in size,—now, when science has taken away the desert and has narrowed the ocean, China, seeing another civilisation approaching on every side, has her eyes wide open to the situation. She sees Russia on the north, Europe on the west, America on the east. She sees clouds of sails on her coast, she sees mighty steamers coming from everywhere "bow on." (Laughter and applause.) She feels the spark from the electric telegraph falling hot upon her on all sides, and she rouses herself, not in anger, but for argument. (Applause.) She says that she finds that by not being in a position to compete with the other nations for so long a time she has lost ground. She comprehends very well that she must come into relations with the civilisation which is pressing all around her; and comprehending that, she does not wait to be approached, but comes out and extends to you her hand. She tells you she is ready to take upon her ancient civilisation the graft of your civilisation. She tells you she is ready to take back her own inventions with all their developments. She tells you that she is willing to trade with you, to buy of you, to sell to you, to help you to strike off the shackles from trade. She invites your merchants, she invites your missionaries; she tells them to plant the shining cross on every hill and in every valley, for she is hospitable to fair argument. I say she is willing to strike off the shackles from trade. She offers you almost free-trade to-day. Holding the great staples of the earth, tea and silk, she charges you scarcely any tariff on the exports you send out in exchange for them. She is willing also to meet the inferior questions that have been raised respecting transit dues; and if you will only have patience with her and right reason, she will settle those questions to your satisfaction. The country is open, and you may travel for pleasure and trade where you like. What complaint, then, have you to make of China? Show her fair play, and you will bless the toiling millions of the world. That trade which in my own day in China has increased from 82,000,000 dols. to 300,000,000 dols., is but a tithe of the enormous trade that may be carried on with China in the future. Let her alone, then. Leave her her independence. Let her develop herself in her own time and in her own way. She has no hostility to you. Let her do this and she will initiate a movement which will be felt in every workshop in the civilised world. She says to you now, "Send us your wheat, send us your lumber, send us your gold, send us your silver, send us your goods; we will take as many of them as we can, and give you in return our tea, our silk, and our free labour, which we have already sent out so largely throughout the world—which has already overflown upon Siam, upon Singapore, upon Manila, upon Peru, upon Cuba, upon Australia, upon California." All China asks is that you will be as kind to her nationals as she is to your nationals. She asks simply that you do her justice. She is willing not only to exchange goods with you, but thoughts also. She is willing to give you what she thinks is her intellectual civilisation in exchange for your material civilisation. Let her alone, and the caravans on the roads of the north, toward Russia, will swarm in larger numbers than ever before. Let her alone, and that silver which has been flowing for hundreds of years into China, losing itself like the lost rivers of the West, but which yet exists, will come out into the affairs of men. Let her alone, and those great lines of steamers, the Peninsular and Oriental, and Messageries Imperiales, may multiply their tonnage many times; and your own great line, the pride of New York, the Pacific Mail, may increase their tonnage tenfold; and they will still, as at present, have to leave their freight upon the wharves of Hong Kong and Yokohama. The imagination kindles at the future which may be and which will be, if you will be fair and just to China.

The following letter, commenting on Mr. Burlinghame's speech, has been addressed to The Times by "A Resident of Seventeen Years in China:"—

"Sir,—The speech of Mr. Burlinghame, who is accredited to foreign courts as Chinese Ambassador, at a banquet of the leading merchants of New York, demands immediate attention. He is reported to have referred to a 'tyrannical policy' which 'would involve not only China, but would involve you in bloody wars with each other.' We are charged deliberately with enforcing a policy of that order, and are told that hostile conflict between foreign nations will be the result. Sir, I hesitate not to say that no grosser caricature of the real facts could have been uttered. There has been no policy of tyranny on our part, nor do any grounds exist for the apprehensions which Mr. Burlinghame would fain raise.

"If there has been one thing that we have urged upon the Chinese rulers with unremitting persistence during the last twenty years, it has been an earnest entreaty that they would accept the proffered hand of friendship, and suffer their subjects to enter into friendly relations with us. But we have urged in vain. That this description is the truth could be amply verified, and Mr. Burlinghame's misrepresentations completely refuted, by quotations from the history of our intercourse with China in the columns of your journal. I hasten to enter an emphatic protest against the attempt on the part of Mr. Burlinghame to reverse our policy in China.

"If Mr. Burlinghame succeeds, then, sir, we shall, without a doubt, be involved in wars, though not in the direction indicated by Mr. Burlinghame. I need not dwell upon the vast interests—in which we stand alone—that this country has in the pacific development of our trade in China. Those interests will be imperilled if Mr. Burlinghame has his way. Before the Foreign-office takes any leap in the dark let there be at once the fullest discussion of China policy in the House of Commons. And if it be too late this Session for such discussion, let Lord Stanley take counsel of the British merchants interested in the trade with China before he yields to the seductions of Mr. Burlinghame."

A New York paper mentions that a flag has just been manufactured in Boston to the order of Hon. Anson Burlinghame, for the use of the Chinese Embassy, which will be displayed from the quarters of the distinguished visitors in all the principal places they visit during the fulfilment of their mission. The flag is made of yellow bunting, with a blue border, measures 30 x 20 feet, and bears upon it a monster dragon painted in blue and extending its entire length.

THE HONG KONG PETITION.

ON the 6th inst. Mr. MATHESON presented the petition from the colony of Hong Kong to the House of Commons. It has been printed for distribution to members, but—as we feared owing to the lateness of the session and the press of other business, it cannot be brought under the notice of the present Parliament.

THE BREAKDOWN OF THE "GREAT REPUBLIC."

A correspondent of Mitchell's Steam Shipping Journal gives an interesting account of the accident which happened to the machinery of the Pacific steamer Great Republic on her last voyage from San Francisco to Yokohama, and of the ingenious manner in which the difficulty was surmounted:—

"The steamship Great Republic, which sailed from San Francisco for Yokohama on 7th March, after fourteen days' running, met with a rather remarkable accident, being no less than the snapping of her starboard shaft. This shaft is really outside the ship, and as the wheels cost $20,000 each, it was an object to save the one rendered useless, as well as to get into a position that would admit of the other wheel being used. The total weight of the wheel and shaft exceeds 104 tons—this had to be thoroughly severed from its connections, and made fast. To most people such a feat would seem an impossibility, but it was not only undertaken but fully accomplished. In thirty-one hours from the accident the ship was again on her voyage. The arrangements for overcoming the difficulties were promptly planned and diligently executed. All the hands were immediately turned to, and the entire ship's company, composed of 125 men, were incessantly at work. They were divided into two gangs, one in the mate's department, to work upon the sails and rigging, the other in the engineer's department to work upon the wheel and broken shaft. Masts which were housed, full sets of yards which were on deck were sent aloft, and everything got ready for putting upon her the greatest possible amount of sail. At the same time the buckets were taken off from all that part of the starboard wheel which was not submerged, and hoisted on deck. The shaft then stood with the fractured part uppermost, and it became necessary to turn the wheel sufficiently to bring the remaining buckets out of water, and also to bring the remaining third of the shaft uppermost, so as to get at it to mark it with a cold chisel, preparatory to completing the fracture. The various parts of the starboard wheel were then severally lashed to the timbers of the wheel-house, with chains and hawsers to hold it immovable, and to prevent it from falling into the sea when detached. The starboard wheel being lashed as nearly immovable as possible, the engine was started ahead, so as to revolve the shaft just three inches, and by so doing the remaining third was fractured. The two broken ends now overlaid each other, and it became necessary to separate them. In order to do this the outboard end of the shaft and wheel was raised by hydraulic jacks, and the broken shaft and wheel launched off from the ship about eleven inches, when the inboard end was allowed to drop just below the other piece then in the journal, and after chafing planks had been placed between it and the ship's side, it was brought close in to the vessel and finally secured, the outer end having been let back into its former place. In this condition she got under way with the wind E.N.E, coming round with all her head sails set and her port wheel turning slowly. Everyone on board had supposed that in this condition it would have proved a difficult task to steer the ship, and that she must necessarily carry a weather helm to a remarkable degree. But she was found to be going six knots an hour, and carrying her rudder very nearly amidship. The voyage was continued in this manner, the ship running from 130 to 177 miles per day; and she reached Yokohama in safety, having run 2,000 miles in her crippled condition. This feat of the Great Republic, which was accomplished in fourteen days, may be set down as an original occurrence in steam shipping. The Great Republic could hardly have broken her shaft in a spot more remote from any assistance, or further from any port of repair. She did not see a sail on the voyage. Yet, notwithstanding all these circumstances, the above is her record, which cannot but prove most satisfactory to her builders and owners.

POSTAL CONTRACTS.—The Pall Mall Gazette says:—"The new arrangement of the contract for the mail service in the East, upon which the Post-office authorities congratulated themselves lately, turns out to be anything but a judicious alteration. There has been a large increase in the rate of postage, except in the cases of officers in the army and navy, who, as Mr. Crawford truly said last night, are no more entitled to the exemption than other people; and Penang has been left without any direct mail communication. Yet the Government is to lose by the contract—the sole advantage being, we presume, the certainty of a weekly mail to Bombay. The merchants, it appears, have protected themselves by using a lighter paper, so that one firm saves £500 a-year in its postage, even on the increased rates. This new plan of starving the large lines of steamers, which have always served the public very fairly, is likely to be productive of considerable inconvenience. The Cunard line has been cut down, so that in the winter we shall probably find communication with America less certain and quick than it is in this weather, when a cockle boat might cross the Atlantic; and some one wishes to abolish the West India line. It is a popular mistake to suppose that these services of steamers are conducted with great profits and little risk. In some weeks during winter the Cunard steamers run almost solely for the conveyance of mails, and nothing but the old contract would have enabled the company to keep so many powerful vessels on the line. As it is, several of them have lately been sold. The 'P. and O.' has tremendous losses to set against its gains."

Monetary and Commercial.

At the Bankruptcy Court, on the 4th inst., Mr. George Lyall, of the firm of Lyall, Still, and Co., received his discharge. He was opposed by Mr. Liebert, a creditor to a large amount, on three grounds—namely, of trading on fictitious capital, contracting debts without any reasonable expectation of payment, and of entering into rash and hazardous speculations. On the first charge Mr. Commissioner Holroyd held that although the firm had traded on money borrowed from banks and advanced on consignments, they had not manufactured accommodation bills; borrowed capital, he considered, was not fictitious capital. On the second charge the Commissioner exonerated him on the ground that when their affairs took an adverse turn they had a large surplus or reserve, and having been successful in business for some twenty-seven years they might reasonably expect a renewal of prosperity. On the last head, the Commissioner decided that the operations which led to the bankruptcy could not be called "rash and hazardous," inasmuch as these were of precisely the same nature as those they had successfully carried on for so many years. It could not be contended that a person who had conducted a business successfully for a long period ought to stop the moment he experienced reverses. It was difficult to say exactly when he ought to stop; perhaps Mr. Lyall had gone on longer than was prudent, but in so doing he had not offended against any statute. From these deductions by the Commissioner, it is evident that the present bankruptcy law practically allows of overtrading to almost any extent.

An attempt on the part of the manager of the Bank of South Australia to procure a postponement of the outgoing mail until Monday, owing to the late arrival of the inward mail, has met with no success. The Post-office authorities very properly decline to make any change, on the ground that such a step would disorganise the whole of the mail services to India and China, as well as Australia.

It appears that the representations of the English Post-office authorities to the French Government, regarding the delay in putting the continental mails on board the P. and O. steamers at Marseilles, have at length produced the desired effect, and that a new arrangement has come into force by which all the mails are alongside the steamer at 7.30 A.M. Relying on the continuance of this, the company has returned to the old plan of naming 7 A.M. on the passengers' tickets as the hour of embarkation.

The biddings for £200,000 in bills on Calcutta and Madras were held yesterday at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were, to Calcutta, £150,000, and to Madras £50,000. The minimum price was fixed, as before, at 1s. 10½d. on both Presidencies. Tenders at 1s. 11⅛d. will receive about 18 per cent.; those above will be allotted in full. These results show a slight increase in the demand for means of remittance to the East.

A letter from Mr. Lange, the representative in London of the Suez Canal Company, announces that the loan of four millions sterling required to complete the works of the canal has been fully subscribed for, and that, consequently, the subscription lists, which have been open to the public for three days, are now finally closed.

The first ordinary meeting of the Indo-European Telegraph Company (Siemen's line) will be held on the 7th of August, when a report will be presented with reference to the progress of the works.

The dividend declared by the Union Bank of London at the meeting on the 15th inst. was at the rate of 15 per cent. per annum, carrying over £20,000.

A dividend of £1 10s. per cent. for the past half-year is to be recommended by the directors of the London and St. Katharine Docks Company.

The Thames and Mersey Marine Insurance Company (Limited) have declared an interim dividend of 2s. per share, or at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum for the half-year ended the 30th of June.

Owing to the receipt of higher quotations of exchange from China, Mexican dollars have been more in request, and rose ⅛d. per ounce—viz., to 4s. 11½d. The supply here is still very small. Bar silver is without change, at 5s. 0⅜d.

According to a statement just issued by Messrs. Pixley, Abell, and Langley, the imports of gold and silver during the six months ending June last amounted to £15,283,910, against £10,774,787 for the corresponding period of 1867. The six months exports reached £10,169,802, against £6,155,674.

The amount of bullion by the P. and O. Company's steamer Massilia, from Southampton on the 11th inst., was, in gold, to Galle, £10,000; to Bombay, £19,000; to Madras, £4,285; to Singapore, £2,000; to Batavia, £5,000; in silver, to Bombay, £21,000; to Singapore, £71,500; to Hong Kong, £13,960; to Yokohama, £2,210; total in gold, £40,285; in silver, £108,670.

COTTON.

On the 4th inst. (the date of departure of the last outward mail) the demand in the London market became more active than previously, and sales of considerable quantities were effected, at a material advance in rates. The improvement, however, was not lasting and on the 6th the market again became dull, prices receding to about a level with those given in our last report. Since that date there has been but trifling change, and quotations although exhibiting a downward tendency remain for the greater part without alteration, the current quotations on the spot being as follows:—Madras—Tinnivelly: Middling fair, 8d.; fair, 8⅛d.; good fair, 8⅜d. to 8½d.; Northern and Western, middling fair, 7⅞d.; fair, 8d.; good fair, 8⅛d. Coconada: Middling fair, 7⅞d.; fair, 8⅛d.; good fair, 8⅛d. Scinde: Middling fair, 7⅞d.; fair, 7⅞d.; good fair, 8¼d. Bengal: Middling fair, 7¼d.; fair, 7⅜d.; good fair, 8¼d. The business done for arrival has been at the following rates:—Tinnivelly, ship named to February sailing, guaranteed good fair, 8d. to 8⅜d. Western Madras, June shipment to May sailing, guaranteed fair, 7⅜d. to 7½d. Coconada, May sailing, guaranteed fair red, 7½d. Sawginned Surat, May shipment, guaranteed fair new, 8¼d. Oomrawuttee, May sailing, guaranteed fair new, 8⅜d. Broach, May sailing, guaranteed fair new, 8⅛d. Bengal, May to March shipment, guaranteed fair new, 7¼d. Scinde, May sailing, guaranteed fair new, 7¼d.

The Liverpool market has exhibited a more favourable appearance There has been an increased demand at hardening prices, and, although the market has become quieter since the 11th inst., the rates show some advance upon those given in our last. The total sales since the 9th instant amount to 36,000 bales, including 28,500 to the trade and 7,500 for speculation and export. The following are the current quotations:—On the spot: American, 10d. to 12d.; Pernam., &c., 10½d. to 11⅜d.; Santos, 11½d.; Egyptian, 12d. to 16d.; Surat, 7d. to 9¾d. There have been very few transactions "to arrive," the only sales reported being Comptah, fair new merchants', ship named, at 7¾d.; Maceio fair, ship named, at 10¾d.; Oomrawuttee, fair new merchants', April sailing, at 8¾d.; Dhollerah, fair old, April sailing, at 8½d.

COFFEE.

The quantity of Plantation Ceylon brought forward at the auctions has been very extensive, but the demand having also been large, nearly the whole has found buyers. For the ordinary qualities the rates have remained without alteration, but there having been considerable competition for the parcels of superior descriptions offered prices have exhibited some advance. The sales of Plantations have been 2,180 casks, 176 tierces, 180 barrels, and 800 bags. The following are the present quotations:—Triage, 37s. to 53s. 6d.; ordinary to fine ordinary dull, 61s. to 66s.; fine fine ordinary to low medium coloury, 67s. to 69s. 6d.; middling to good middling, 68s. to 81s. 6d.; bold, 81s. to 89s.; peaberry, 70s. 6d. to 86s. For Native Ceylon there has been a steady demand, and former prices (with few exceptions) have been maintained. The sales have comprised 156 casks, 72 tierces, 700 barrels, and the latest prices paid have been 52s. 6d. for bold, 47s. to 48s. for ordinary, and 53s. for peaberry. The sales at the auctions have also included 75 bags indirect Java at 65s. for good, and 47s. to 57s. for inferior; while 70 bags Penang, 83 bags Manila, and 27 bags Singapore were withdrawn.

COIR GOODS.—Public sales of yarn of good extent have gone off with animation at firm prices, the fine qualities £2 to £3 per ton higher. The supplies of other articles were unimportant. At the auctions 12 bales Ceylon yarn sold—very fine £67 15s., fine £58 10s., good £38; of 106 tons a good part sold—good middling to good £36 to £42 15s., middling £29 15s.; 400 bundles Ceylon Fibre sold at £24 10s., 10 bales bristle sort sold at £30, 3,246 ballots part sold £18 10s., and 197 bales Singapore were withdrawn.

CAMPHOR.—The market remains steady at £6 10s. landing weights and £6 12s. 6d. re-weights.

COCOA-NUT OIL.—A fair business has been done in Ceylon, the former quotation of £51 being steadily maintained.

CUTCH.—Rates are again lower, and of 100 bags of good quality offered, 40 bags sold at 35s. By private contract about 600 bags fine quality have realised 35s. 6d. to 36s. per cwt.

GAMBIER.—The demand has not been active, and the sales at auction have only been 700 bales realising 17s. 6d. per cwt.

GUM BENJAMIN.—Of 44 cases Siam 43 cases in block sold, firsts, small to bold almond mixed at £20 10s. to £21 10s., rather dark small almondy £9 10s. to £10, dark hard ditto £10, siftings £10. Of 52

PEPPER.—Black: There have been no offers at the public sales. By private contract there has been a good business at full rates, and about 2,700 bags Penang have been sold at 3d., and 2,400 bags Singapore at 3 5-16ths per lb. White: The market has remained steady, at 5d. for Penang and Singapore.

RICE.—No alteration of importance has taken place in prices, for although the hot dry weather is favourable for the wheat crop and checks the demand for rice, yet as other descriptions of home-grown grain may suffer, holders do not press sales, and little business has been done. In auction 1,364 bags Bengal broken white were bought in at 11s. By private contract about 4,000 bags Ballam have sold at 8s. 9d. to 9s. 3d. 350 bags middling Dacca at 10s. 7½d. One of Siam at 10s. 6d. ex ship or 11s. landed here, and 1,500 tons Rangoon at 10s. 3d. ex ship.

SPICES.—Cinnamon: Nothing doing. Mace: At auction four cases very good Penang were bought in at 3s. 6d. Nutmegs have met little demand; of twelve cases Penang two cases, 102 to the lb., sold at 1s. 4d. to 1s. 5d., the remainder 87's, old import bought in at 1s. 9d.; 11 casks Java part sold 72's at 3s. 3d., 99's at 1s. 4d. per lb.

SUGAR.—There has been an improved demand both for Penang and Manila, and business has been done at a considerable advance on the former nominal quotations. At the public sales 2302 bags Penang superior quality of fresh import sold with good competion at rather above the valuation, good brown to low yellow (duty 9s. 7d.), 32s. to 32s. 6d., middling to fine yellow (duty 10s. 6d.), 34s. 3d. to 38s., superior bright, 38s. 6d. The transactions in Manila are reported as follows:—At the auctions 12,000 bags clayed at 30s. 6d. to 31s., 530 tons Muscovado at 28s. to 28s. 3d. By private contract 2000 bags unclayed at 23s. 6d., 11,700 bags clayed sold at 30s. 6d. (duty 8s.), 1000 bags Muscovado at 27s. 6d. and 10,000 bags at 28s., and for arrival in about six weeks 200 tons Muscovado at 27s. 6d. and 700 tons the cargo per Eastern Empire at 28s. 6d. landed duty paid.

TIN.—The quotations for fine Straits, which at the date of our last report stood at £91 10s., was subsequently reduced to £91, from which lowest point a gradual advance took place, ultimately amounting to 30s. per ton, and a fair business is now doing both on the spot and for early arrival at £92 10s. per ton. The sales amount to about 300 tons.

MANCHESTER MARKETS.

She will be fitted up with a pair of horizontal condensing engines of 60-horse power, which are now being completed by Messrs. Hall, Russell, & Co., Aberdeen Iron Works. The hull and equipments are of the highest class. She is barque-rigged, and will carry two 110-pounder and two 60-pounder guns on deck. The vessel, on being namde "Ho-so-Meru," by Miss Mitchell, took to its future element in grand style, and is expected to leave this direct for Japan in three weeks hence. We understand Messrs. HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS.—THE BEST WAY.—To gain any end there are often many ways, but there is always a best way. This statement applies with wonderful force to Holloway's remedies, which overcome ill-health by driving noxious matter from the frame, by repairing broken or injured structures, and by establishing regularity of action. This is the only safe and feasible method of combating diseases and securing sound health. With pure blood, good digestion, strong nerves, and perfect functional order, most maladies may be vanquished, and strength surely re-established. The balsamic and healing qualities of Holloway's Ointment render it invaluable in the nursery for healing cuts, scratches, and sores, for allaying inflammations, reducing swellings, and cleansing unhealthy skins.

RESOLUTIONS REFERRED TO ABOVE.

Res. II. That the Directors for the time being of the present Company be appointed to act as a Provisional Committee to organise the new Company.

WHARVES.

NOTICE.

THE undersigned call the attention of Masters and Agents of Vessels discharging at this Port to the great advantage to be gained in point of convenience, despatch, and economy, by making use of their WHARVES at NEW HARBOUR.

With the assistance of Steam Cranes, a general cargo can be landed easily in a few days—or in about one-fifth of the time usually occupied discharging in the roads.

There are large, dry, and very commodious brick Godowns on the Wharves, which vessels have free use of for cargo while discharging.

The trouble and disputes with, and pilfering of cargo common among boatmen are avoided by vessels using the Wharves.

Cartage of cargo to the town (which is within easy distance) is guaranteed to be not more than lighterage from the roads, and the coolie hire discharging alongside is less.

There is always a large stock of the best English and Welsh coals on the premises, which are supplied to steamers at the lowest market price, and vessels going alongside to take in or discharge coals pay no wharfage.

Vessels discharging cargo pay a wharfage of 20 cents per ton—a trifling charge when the immense advantages gained are taken into consideration.

Arrangements have been made by which all repairs to ships or steamers can be done with despatch while the vessels are lying alongside the Wharves.

There is an efficient European pilot on the premises and, when required, a steam tug is always available.

THE MAILS, &c.

The present homeward Mail did not reach Singapore until some twenty-four hours after the time fixed for its departure from that port, owing to the defective condition of the Behar's boilers. Notwithstanding this delay it is delivered on its due date.

The next P. & O. Mail, with Hong Kong dates to June 26, will be due on the 10th proximo. The Telegrams in advance of the succeeding one, leaving Hong Kong July 10, are hourly expected.

We regret to observe, by a notification issued in Hong Kong on the 2nd of June, that after that date the Mail steamers would discontinue calling at Nagasaki. Of course such a step as this cannot have been taken without the consent of the Postmaster-General, and it is very strange that such consent should have been given without the fact being made known here.

The Straits Settlements Association has received a further communication from the Colonial-office, stating that arrangements are in progress for the resumption of a postal service to Penang.

Summary of News from the Far East.

JAPAN.

OSAKA AND HIOGO.

From Osaka and Hiogo our latest date is the 24th May, when everything was reported perfectly quiet and trade still dull, but with a little doing in both imports and exports. A correspondent at Kobe writes :—

"The new settlement (that is the sand patch) has for the past week or so undergone great improvement, and up to the hour of writing dozens of coolies are busy making drains here and there to allow the water with which the sand is so thoroughly soaked to run off. Should these improvements go on as well as they are begun, in a short time the land will be in a fit state to be offered for sale, and merchants who are fast migrating to this place will find a spot whereon they will, with some degree of satisfaction, be able to squat.

"The Mikado is still in Osaka, and during the past week we were honoured by the presence of two of his princes, who we believe had some important object in view in thus calling on us. There is no news from Osaka, with the exception of a dreadful accident which occurred at the ruins of the ill-fated castle of 'Stotsbashi. On the 8th instant, a party of coolies were at work clearing away the debris, when one of them, striking a stone with an iron implement, caused some sparks to fly, and these igniting some gunpowder, produced an explosion which sent the stones flying in all directions, killing four of the men and seriously injuring two others."

The British fleet remains still at Hiogo and Osaka.

YOKOHAMA.

Advices from this port by the present mail are to the 31st May, still a few days in arrear of the news brought by the Pacific line, of which a summary was given in our last issue. The outward mail of March 27 was delivered on the 19th May (one day late), and the following one of April 10 was daily expected.

The Japan Herald thus briefly sums up the political situation :—"Several skirmishes have taken place between the Northern and Southern troops, in the neighbourhood of Yedo; we are informed that no less than five or six occurred within two days in the early part of the week, all of which resulted in the defeat of the Imperial or Southern forces. Satsuma became sorely pressed for rice, and but for timely assistance of a friendly Daimio would have been put to his wit's end to appease the hunger and impatience of his retainers. Altogether, Imperial and Southern Confederacy measures appear very gloomy and doubtful. We have heard of an ultimatum having been despatched to the Mikado, signed by the Princes of Kanga, Aidzu, Sendai, Nambu, and other Northern rulers to the effect, that they will not yield allegiance to any new form of government which may be established; in fact, they will not permit Yedo to be held by the troops of the Southern Daimios. The Mikado himself is in a very trying position; he is in the hands of the Satsuma and Chosiu faction, and in order to enable them to carry out their designs must appear not only as Emperor but also as military ruler—in other words, Commander-in-Chief. The church, however, views this combination of dignities in the person of their Spiritual Emperor as sacrilegious, and the Kioto priesthood are preparing for a struggle on behalf of the religion of the gods. The thunders of the Church will probably prove more potent than the Councils of the Confederate Daimios, and the warlike attitude of the North."

The Japan Times says, "Sir Harry Parkes, who was on his way to Osaka when we last wrote, to present himself to his Imperial Majesty the Mikado as the accredited envoy of Great Britain, returned on the 28th inst., having accomplished his purpose. The captains of the squadron were presented to the Mikado at the same time, and his Majesty's sacred seclusion is now a thing of the past. It is pretty well ascertained also that the Mikado, as we anticipated some time back, will make Osaka his residence and the seat of government, and the Mint, Arsenal and other public works will be removed thither.

"Peace is not yet restored to the country, nor—the system of Japanese warfare being taken into consideration—is there any present prospect of so happy a result. A strong confederation of the Northern Daimios is formed, and, though it appears doubtful that they will make any attack, their defensive position is nearly impregnable, and their submission to the new Government, as at present constituted, appears very remote, if not altogether out of the question. The Tokugawa clan, of which Yoshi-Hisa, the ex-Shiogoon, is recognised as the head, though temporarily degraded by the Mikado's order, is too strong, in itself and its alliances, for the southern princes to attack with hope of success. The time is not far distant, we are assured, when the accommodation we have predicted will arrive—the recall of Yoshi-Hisa to the councils of the Mikado—not as Shiogoon, an office which is certainly abolished, but as head of an important department; the restoration to its honours and to most of its territory, of the Tokugawa family and a general amnesty to Aidzu and his friends of the North. Everything points in this direction. The Northern party would not have abandoned the Hakone pass, the Tokaido, Yedo, nor given up their ships without a fight, had they intended to make any attempt against the Southern Confederacy, or to offer to the will of the Mikado ought but passive resistance. The worst feature in the present situation is the guerilla warfare which is now carried on by bands of masterless men, conveniently disowned by their hereditary chiefs, but who are really the picked men of their clans. These keep the whole country immediately north of Yedo in a disturbed state, and make that capital by no means a pleasant residence for the Mikado's representative, and quite untenable by traders, who have accordingly deserted the place en masse, much to the detriment of our commerce."

Sir Edmund Hornby has confirmed the decision of the Consular Court in the case of Reg. v. Short.

Under the heading of "Osaka for Merchants as well as for Ministers" the Japan Times has an ably written article urging the necessity of making this metropolis the principal seat of trade as well as of diplomacy in Japan. The writer strongly advocates the views expressed in our own columns in March last, as to the miserable unfitness of Kobe and Hiogo for business settlements, and the desirableness of procuring the opening of Osaka itself as a place of residence for foreign merchants.

CHINA.

—o—

HANKOW.

We have received the following from a correspondent at this port, dated 2nd June:—

"The great event has been the opening of the Tea Market on the 28th ultimo, or rather on the night of the 27th, for so eager were buyers in a few instances that settlements were made between midnight and two and three o'clock in the morning—a most unusual proceeding, and one which has excited considerable surprise. You may imagine the discontent and excitement of the following day amongst those who had delayed their settlements till the usual business hours, and until they had time to examine the musters, which were only placed on the market the previous evening. About ninety chops have been settled up to the present time, including contract teas. The prices are deemed excessive, and in most cases above London rates by last advices. There will be the usual howl, I dare say, when the intelligence reaches home, at the madness of the Hankow buyers. But in this instance, as far as I can learn, it is the London people alone who are to blame, for they sent out limits which have not been exceeded by the purchases which have been made. No doubt people here, had they held off a little, would have got their teas much cheaper, as the Chinamen themselves are surprised at the prices they have obtained; but such is the competition amongst foreigners, that it seems impossible they can wait when they have orders they can execute. Three ships, the Eliza Shaw, the Gossamer, and the Challenger (which latter arrived this morning), and one steamer, the Agamemnon, are waiting to load with the new teas.

"The only other event worth noticing is the issue yesterday of a notification from the Consul, intimating that numbers of disbanded braves (Imperial soldiers) are passing up the river, with the view, it is feared, of entering some of the tea districts, and plundering the tea farms; but that measures were being taken to intercept them, and prevent mischief. Luckily, they will not find much copper, cash, or sycee to plunder now, if they go there, as the first crop teas is pretty well forward. Some of the disbanded braves, it is said, fired upon the troops on the wall here, as they passed up in their boats, the night before last, but they do not appear to have done much harm."

SHANGHAI.

The outward mail of 18th April (French) arrived on the 2nd June with telegrams to the 2nd May. Dates by the inward mail are to June 6:—

According to the following extract of a letter from Tientsin it appears that the rebels have left that part:—

Tsen-kwo-fan is expected here hourly. Indeed, as we noticed a large body of native troops marching through the settlement yesterday—possibly his body-guard—he may have already arrived though we have been unable to ascertain the fact. He will stay at the Kiangnan arsenal, where there is large accommodation for him and his suite. The alleged motive of his visit is to inspect the works there at leisure.

The rebels have actually left this part of the country and gone to Shantung. The people never speak of them now, and the peasantry are very busy in their fields hoeing their crops. The weather is seasonable, and I think we shall gather this year very good crops of grain. Business still keeps unsatisfactory, and till the soldiers on the route to Shanse at present go south after the rebels we shall not see an active trade in imports.

Mr. Barnard, the barrister, has instituted a criminal prosecution for libel against the Friend of China and Evening Express, and the proprietors have both been committed.

The following letter from a traveller between Peking and Chefoo gives an interesting account of the progress of the coal mines:—

"I bid good bye to Peking and my kind friends at the British and American Legations on the morning of the 13th inst., and after a sharp ride of three hours reached Tungchow and found my boat in readiness for my downward trip. Before I set out, however, I wish to give you a few lines about the coal mines, which lie about 70 miles to the north and west of Tungchow. The main facts were kindly furnished me by Mr. Henderson, who had just returned with Mr. Edkins from a prospecting tour in that neighbourhood, and who was then on his way home to Tientsin.

"These mines are situated at Chai-tang, 65 miles almost due west from Peking. The route thither is via Yang-fang, Hia-ma-ling and Ching-pai-keu, the respective distances being to Yang-fang, 23 miles; to Hia-ma-ling, 46 miles; to Ching-pai-keu, 53 miles; and to Chai-tang, 65 miles. The road lies through an open plain as far as Yang-fang, and thence through narrow valleys to the Fotea Pass, whence valleys of varying width and extent continue to Hia-ma-ling. Through the Fotea Pass Mr. Henderson is of opinion a tunnel will be necessary, in order to make the road practicable. At Hia-ma, another pass, 15 li in length, is reached. This, however, is not steep, and in the opinion of competent judges is practicable for a waggon road. Leaving this mountain pass (Ling), the road leads along the face of the rock, across the Huenho or Muddy River, to Ching-pai-keu, which is distant from the mines about 30 li. A level valley intervenes, which winds about considerably, but presents no real difficulties to the construction of a good road. Lime boulders are here found in great abundance. These the Chinese burn on the spot, and use largely for concrete.

"Thus much about the route. A route varying but slightly from this has long been used by the Chinese working the mines, the product obtained in the ordinary crude and imperfect method finding its way to the capital and other points south and east of it by camels and mules. From one hundred and fifty to four hundred pounds being the average load when the roads are good, or rather when they are at their best, for they can never be said to be good. Some idea of the difficulties and delay attending this mode of transportation may be inferred from the cost of coal delivered at Peking, which has ranged during the past year at from 14 dols. to 17 dols. per ton.

"Mr. Henderson's efforts towards the further development and working of these mines has been so far successful that four of the leading mining firms have addressed him on the subject. This communication, together with specifications and estimates for a substantial waggon-road, has been submitted to the British Minister, and will be pressed upon the attention of the Chinese Government at the earliest possible moment. It is a subject for congratulation to know that the project meets the hearty approval of a majority of the foreign Ministers, and as the necessary initiatory steps have been judiciously taken by the Chinese themselves, it is not improbable that the Peking authorities will take prompt and favourable action in the matter.

"As neither the Huen-ho nor Peiho can be made available for permanent navigation by loaded barges, it is proposed to obtain permission to build a road from the mines at Chaiting direct through to Tientsin. Thence to Taku the river can be used as at present.

"Mr. Henderson is sanguine of being able to deliver coal, not inferior to that now imported at Taku, for 11 dols. per ton, and has already contracted with the S. S. N. Company at that figure. With a railroad in operation between the two points, that price could be still further reduced; but that is looking further ahead than the consideration of the subject, important as it is, at present warrants. It will be a good move ahead to have a good waggon road built, and it is not too soon to agitate the question of organising a company to carry out that object. The entire distance between Taku and Chaitang by the route already surveyed will be slightly in excess of 200 miles, upwards of sixty of which may be by river.

"Leaving Tungchow at 3 P.M. of the 13th, with a lively current and an occasional favouring catspaw of wind, we dropped rapidly down the river to Tientsin, which we reached before daybreak of the 15th, not, however, without meeting with an occasional ugly reminder of the presence of rebels on the banks, in the shape of a headless corpse, floating along, or whirling its bloated ghastly form in one of the eddies inshore."

The North China Daily News mentions that the chief of the French exploring expedition from Cambodia was expected in Hankow daily, accompanied only by the doctor, the other members having remained behind in Yunnan. We regret very much since this to hear that news has been received of his death. We have not heard any particulars, but the information comes from a reliable source.

The following items are from the North China Herald:—

Li, the Governor of Chekeang, and holding also a temporary commission to exterminate pirates, will take up his residence in Shanghai for some months, in order to take vigorous measures (or what he imagines to be such) against the pirates who have been playing havoc with the grain junks.

We are glad to learn that Mr. Mowatt, who has for some time been acting as law secretary and magistrate, is confirmed in the appointment. This, of course, involves his quitting the Consular Service; but we imagine he will not have reason to regret the exchange.

We are requested to state that the statue to Admiral Protet which was subscribed for lately, is being made by a well-known sculptor, Mr. Barri, and may be expected here shortly. It will be erected on the French Bund.

The Ningpo Amateurs gave their last performance for the season, with great success. A cricket club has been started there, which comprises, at present, fifteen members. A capital club is being built in front of the Queen's Hotel. It is to comprise a billiard-room, reading-room, fives' court, theatre, &c.

The great event of the week has been a visit by Tsen Kwo-fan, Viceroy of the two Kiang, who arrived here on Sunday evening, accompanied by a large body of native troops as a body guard. The alleged object of his visit was to inspect the Kiang-nan arsenal, where he accordingly took up quarters. The Chinese, however, had the wildest rumours about his intentions. The excitement to which his visit gave rise among them was intense. It was first reported to have connection with the foreign proposal for a railway to Soochow, as we mentioned. Latterly, however, all kinds of wild rumours have been afloat, all having for their basis an immediate onslaught on, and expulsion of, foreigners from Shanghai. He took up his quarters at the arsenal, to protect it against a supposed design by foreigners to steal the guns and powder. He was going to undermine the settlement and blow it up; to blockade Woosung and, having reduced us to extremity for want of food and ammunition, to exterminate us. It has even been alleged that rich Chinamen were about to leave Shanghai, to avoid the approaching crisis. Tsen-kwo-fan's visit has been the common topic of conversation at every tea-house; and it has been a common remark, in connection with the absurd rumours of warlike design, that he had better quell the rebels, before undertaking foreigners. Of course so noted an official had to undergo the usual amount of complimentary visits. H.B.M. Consul, accompanied by his Vice-Consul and Interpreter, had an interview with him on Tuesday. The French Consul-General visited him on the same day; and he returned the latter's visit and lunched at the French Consulate, on Wednesday, and went afterwards to the English Consulate. His Excellency was to have inspected Messrs. Russell and Co.'s telegraph, but some contretemps prevented his doing so. His Excellency was accompanied by Ting, Futai of Kiangsu, and left with him for Nanking, yesterday.

HONG KONG.

The outward mail of the 24th April arrived out on the 3rd June with telegrams to the 11th May. Advices by the present homeward mail are to the 12th June.

The mails, passengers, &c., from the wrecked steamer Benares, arrived at Hong Kong on May 30. The following account is from the Trade Report:—

Shortly after the departure of the last mail, news arrived by the steamer United Service that the Benares, the overdue P. and O. steamer from Shanghai, had been wrecked on an island of the Fisherman's Group on the night of the 23rd May. At noon on that day the vessel had started from Shanghai, and at about 11.15 P.M. she struck. The engines were backed full speed astern, but failed to get the ship off. She remained aground in spite of all efforts to float her, but fortunately she made no water. The crew and passengers were in no danger until, as the tide receded, the vessel began to heel over to starboard. It was feared that she might capsize altogether, and all hands were ordered into the boats. The night was hazy, and all that could be done was to lie off the wreck, and wait for morning. During the night three of the boats were driven out to sea. When morning broke, it showed the ship still above water, lying over on her side at an angle of 45 degrees. The boats which had succeeded in keeping near the shore now felt their way in among the rocks, and all who were in them safely effected a landing, and made their way to a small patch of level ground, about 30 feet above high water mark. The remaining boats could not then be seen. In this disagreeable situation the shipwrecked party spent six hours, when the steamer China, from Shanghai, came in sight. At first they imagined that she did not see them, as she stood away out to sea instead of coming in shore to their assistance, but in reality she had descried, out at sea, the three missing boats, and had gone to their assistance first. Having picked up these, she came in and anchored near the stranded vessel. All hands were hospitably received on board the China, and two pilot boats which made their appearance at this period were sent, one to Shanghai the other to Ningpo, with the news of what had occurred. During the day the weather changed for the worse, and the China found it necessary to go round to the other side of the island for shelter. The Chinese in the neighbourhood took advantage of this to come down and loot the Benares. They were seen scattering over the hills in all directions when the wreck was visited next day by the boats of the China. During the 25th the weather again moderated. The China came round and began the recovery of cargo. It was found that the specie was nearly all safe. The baggage was mostly recovered, and a quantity of silk. During the 26th the process of salvage was continued. On the 27th the French gunboat Scorpion turned up, and then the steamer United Service. This vessel took on board the mails and some of the passengers, and brought them on to Hong Kong, where they arrived on the 30th.

The British ship Theresa, which arrived at Hong Kong on the 10th May, brought a detachment of the 29th Native Infantry from Madras. There are four commissioned officers, 316 non-commissioned officers and men, and twenty-five native servants. The following is the list of the commissioned officers:—Lieut.-Colonel A. Knox Gore, Major A. Ritherdon, Lieut. and Adjutant J. H. Prendergast, and Assist.-Surgeon J. Wilkins. All the above officers brought their families with them.

The superintendent of the P. and O. Company has issued a notification, dated June 2nd, that in future the company's steamers running between Shanghai and Yokohama would not call at Nagasaki. This has been received with no little dissatisfaction.

The British ship Neville, of 715 tons register, was put up at auction by Mr. W. N. Middleton, and knocked down to Messrs. Douglas, Lapraik, and Co. for the sum of 15,700 dols.

A preliminary hearing has been taken in the case of the Government of Macao against the China Mail newspaper.

The landed property of Messrs. Dent and Co. is to be sold in November. Particulars can be had free of Messrs. Bremner and Laycock, Austin friars.

MEETING OF THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

In our last we noticed the meeting of the Chamber of Commerce. We find the following report of it in the Daily Press, and we are glad to see that the Committee are something more than a formal body. We conclude that very efficient service is rendered to mercantile interests in general. It is satisfactory also to see that the financial condition of the Chamber is in a flourishing condition. There is a surplus in hand of 10,975 dols.

Mr. J. W. Wood, the secretary, read the report of the committee for the past half-year, and as he proceeded various suggestions were put forward by the members, which in the end materially altered the original reading of some of the resolutions.

The first three resolutions were passed without comment, but with regard to the one referring to the Stamp Act,

Mr. Bosman observed that in his opinion the remark at the end of the resolution referring to the duty on bank notes might advantageously be left out; there was only one member present at the meeting (Mr. Kresser) who was at all qualified to give an opinion on the subject. It would be better, he thought, if a general remark on the whole subject were inserted in the resolution.

Mr. Kresser however was of a different opinion; he considered that the present duty on bank notes was much too high.

After some discussion between the two before mentioned members, it was suggested by the Chairman that Mr. Bosman should find a seconder for his amendment, and then put the question formally to the meeting.

Mr. Bosman then looked round the table, but finding no response to his want of a seconder, the amendment was not put to the meeting, the resolution being passed in its original form.

GAMBLING LICENCES.

On the Secretary reading this resolution, Mr. Bosman remarked that he had a few alterations he would like to put forward. In the first place the resolution read, "Indeed it would have been hardly possible for this Chamber to ignore the very strong opinions adverse to the gambling system, which were being daily expressed by the members," &c. Now, he objected to the word very because he did not think such exceedingly ardent sentiments were desired; he had a strong opinion of the question himself, and therefore if it were qualified by inserting the word some, the resolution would read better. As regarded the word daily, that was perhaps expressing the sentiments of the Chamber too strongly, besides which people did not express strong opinions on the gambling question on Sundays. (Laughter.) Further, with regard to the words, "that the system is one which is highly injurious to the trade of the colony," he did not think that that was exactly the substance of what had been recommended at the last committee.

Mr. Taylor concurred with Mr. Bosman in his remarks as to the way in which the sentiments of the resolution had been qualified, and he would also suggest their being taken out of the resolution.

The words were then erased by the secretary, and are not in the resolution, as will be seen.

Mr. Bosman then again observed that the word "most," before "respectable Chinese traders," might be taken out.

Mr. Taylor and others, however, were of a contrary opinion.

Digitized by Google

Mr. Bosman: Then those of 'a contrary opinion to [the resolution are not to be considered respectable. (Laughter.)

After some further remarks, Mr. Bosman's suggestion was not pressed.

Mr. Bosman then said he considered the last part of the resolution, commencing "it is pretty well understood," of no importance whatever. As far as he himself was concerned, he would sooner see the whole of the resolution thrown out; but still as he was sure he could not carry such a motion in the Chamber, he was not going to propose it. He would ask, though, who it was that had made, or was going to make, the "strong representations to the Secretary for the Colonies" mentioned in the resolution.

The Chairman was understood to reply that friends of his in England, and among them the Earl of Shaftesbury, intended using their influence with the Secretary of State for the Colonies. After a few words from Mr. Taylor, however, the words were struck out, and the resolution was passed with the exception of the words "is encouraged and fostered by the Government of this colony," Mr. Taylor remarking that it would not be advisable to make any strong remarks on the action of the Governor in the matter, as it could not be believed that his Excellency intended anything but good results should accrue from the working of the scheme.

Mr. Bosman at the end made an attempt to have that remark taken out of the resolution, which refers to the system being discountenanced by every respectable Government, as he said it cast a slur on the Portuguese Government, which did not discourage gambling. But the words were allowed to remain in, the Chairman humorously remarking that he did not think the Chamber would be open to a charge of slander.

REVISION OF THE TREATY.

The resolution on this subject as originally printed was almost entirely altered by the committee previous to the opening of the half-yearly meeting, and having been read by the secretary in its new form, it was passed with but few remarks from the members.

The remaining portion of the report was passed without comment.

The Chairman then moved the adoption of the report in its amended state, which was unanimously carried.

Mr. Taylor suggested that a copy of the resolutions should be sent to his Excellency the Governor, which was agreed upon.

The meeting then proceeded to elect a committee for the ensuing year.

The Chairman intimated that, with the exception of Mr. Pallanjee, all the members of the late committee were open for re-election.

The votes of the members present were then taken, when it was found that Messrs. Heard, Kresser, Duncanson, Ryrie, Rowett, Hitchcock, Zimmern, Helland, and Pyke were duly elected as members of the new committee.

Mr. Pyke then proposed "That the monthly stock lists, which it was formerly the practice to prepare, be resumed." He observed that in the first instance it would be requisite for all the members to agree to the proposition.

The Chairman, however, observed that it would be little use passing a resolution before the consent of the various members of the Chamber had been obtained.

Mr. Pyke then proposed that the secretary be instructed to inform the members of the proposition he had made.

Mr. Helland seconded this resolution, and it was agreed to.

Mr. Bosman then said that, before the meeting separated, he thought a vote of thanks to the chairman should be passed.

The motion, which was received with approbation, was carried unanimously. The meeting then closed.

This was the seventh anniversary of the formation of the Chamber of Commerce, which was originally opened on the 29th of May, 1861.

The following is the Report as amended by the Meeting before being adopted:—

Report of the Committee of the Hong Kong General Chamber of Commerce presented to the Members thereof at the Half-yearly General Meeting held on the 29th day of May, 1868.

The Committee have the pleasure to submit their report on the principal subjects which have come under consideration during the last half-year.

TELEGRAMS FOR THE USE OF THE CHAMBER.

Your committee, through the secretary, have been in correspondence with the secretary of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce, Calcutta, and also direct with Messrs. Reuter's agent at that port; but so far the result has not been satisfactory. Messrs. Reuter, being anxious to try the result of a system of supplying telegrams to private subscribers, consider tha tfurnishing them to a public body like your Chamber would be prejudicial to the said system they are endeavouring to introduce, and hence their determination not to supply the Chamber for the present.

CHANGE IN THE DATES AND HOUR OF DEPARTURE OF MAILS.

This matter has also occupied the attention of your Committee. The Chairman waited on the Post Master General, and afterwards on the Colonial Secretary, and found that the local Government had no voice in the matter—the orders, as regards dates and hours of departures of mails, coming direct from the Post Master General in England.

The change, in having the mails despatched on fixed days each fortnight, must meet the approval of all, but the change in the hour of departure at 7 A.M. cannot but be felt to be highly inconvenient to the mercantile community and the public at large. The local Government having promised to support the views of your Committee on this point with the Home authorities, a letter on the subject was addressed to the Acting Colonial Secretary—copy of the same will be found in the appendix.

THE CHAMBER'S CIRCULAR.

The improvement of this publication has received the attention of your Committee, various members supplying each mail lists of sales, remarks, and statistics to assist the secretary in its compilation, and they confidently hope that the result has been the production of a circular, conveying information regarding markets, and statistics, which is of real value to those at a distance engaged in the China trade. The increased expense of printing the circular in its present enlarged form, and how to meet this expense, has been discussed by your committee, but they have considered it advisable to continue the previous charge of twelve cents per copy, trusting that, as the increased value of the circular becomes felt, the sale of copies to subscribers will be augmented, and that in course of time the extra expense will be covered.

STAMP TAX.

The modification of the existing Schedule of Stamps has occupied the attention of the Chamber. The local Government, aware no doubt that much dissatisfaction was expressed by the community with regard to the Schedule just introduced, the amount leviable on some documents, such as letters of hypothecation, being unnecessarily high; while on others it pressed unequally on those engaged in trade, a commission was appointed to inquire into the working of the ordinance, and suggest amendments. The members of the commission, of which your chairman was one, requested the co-operation of this Chamber, and a general meeting of members, report of which will be found in appendix, was convened to discuss the subject. At that meeting a special committee of members was appointed to confer with the Government Commission. In the new Stamp Ordinance which has just passed the Legislative Council some suggestions were made by this Chamber at the general meeting, and through its special committee have been adopted, and it is only to be regretted that Government did not declare it expedient to adopt some of the others, more especially the recommendation concerning a reduction of the duty on bank notes.

GAMBLING LICENCES.

The system of licenced gambling, and its alleged evil effects on the trade of this colony, has received the consideration of your committee, also that of the body of the Chamber; indeed, it would have been hardly possible for this Chamber to ignore the strong opinions to the gambling system which were expressed by the members of the foreign mercantile community, and by the most respectable of the Chinese traders. A general meeting of members was called to discuss the subject, and at the meeting resolutions were passed embodying the opinion of this Chamber that the system is one which is injurious to the trade of the colony. Since the meeting your committee have taken no further steps in the matter, nor are they aware of the intentions of the local Government with reference to the system; it is pretty well understood, however, that the Home Government are averse to it, and it is to be hoped that Her Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies will send out orders for its suppression. Your committee hope that should this not happen soon their successors in office will not slacken in their endeavours to remove from Hong Kong a system which is doing much mischief, and is discountenanced by every respectable Government.

REVISION OF THE TREATY.

The Committee beg to call the attention of the Chamber to a circular issued by the British Minister at Peking, on the subject of the memorials from the various Chambers of Commerce, including that from this Chamber.

In the circular referred to an attempt is made to fix the stigma of unfair dealing towards the Imperial Customs upon the entire foreign mercantile community of China, on the grounds of a charge of attempted evasion of tariff duty by one firm at Hankow. The parties charged in that particular case having since published explanations, which tend to prove that the imputation was without foundation, your committee are of opinion that the Chamber should express their regret at the course adopted by the British Minister in accepting a one-sided statement, and drawing from it unwarranted inferences. They further think that the tone of the circular exhibits but little sympathy with the memorialists, the interests of the British portion of which it is his especial duty to watch over. This is clearly shown in the declaration made by the Minister, that he has deemed it incumbent on him to take care that Her Majesty's Government shall in no way be identified with the memorialists. Such a remark made by the representative of a country whose policy at home and abroad has always been the extension of its trade and manufactures (and, as a matter of course, to promote and support those associations which represent them), cannot fail to excite surprise wherever it is read. And your committee confidently hope that Her Majesty's Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs will see the necessity of giving to the representative of Her Majesty in China such instructions as will better assist the development of the commercial and manufacturing interests of Great Britain, and lead to a thorough revision of the commercial articles of the treaty, towards which, as far as your committee are able to learn, but little progress has as yet been made.

MR. CONSUL SWINHOE'S VISIT TO HAINAN.

Your committee regret that it was found impracticable for any member of this Chamber to accompany Mr. Swinhoe on his visit to the West Coast, nor have they been able to obtain any information regarding his explorations, but they trust that any particulars he may have gathered as to the capabilities of trade of the ports he has visited, will ere long be published by the British Minister, for the benefit of those connected with the trade of the South of China generally.

FUND OF THE CHAMBER.

The accounts of the Chamber for the past half-year have been duly audited by Messrs. Riddell and Kerr, and are annexed hereto, and your committee have much satisfaction in pointing out that, notwithstanding the great diminution in the number of members, in consequence of the late commercial crisis, the financial position of the Chamber is most satisfactory. The amount of 10,000 dols. on fixed deposits with the Hong Kong and Shanghai and Mercantile Banks remain untouched, and there is a balance of dols. 975.28 in favour of the Chamber in general account with the secretary.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

—o—

SINGAPORE.

Dates hence are to the 21st June. The home mail of May 8 was delivered on the 9th, and that of May 18 on the 17th June. The latter conveyed London telegrams to June 5. The Straits Times says:—"We have to notice three sittings of the Legislative Council during the fortnight, and three more ordinances which have been passed. The meetings were on the 3rd, 12th, and 15th inst., and another is to be held on the 22nd inst. At the meeting of the 3rd inst. the passenger ship fees and Supreme Court Ordinances were passed, and at the meeting of the 15th inst. the Treasonable Offences Ordinance was made law.

"The first and last ordinance have excited and require no comment. But the Supreme Court Bill has caused much dissatisfaction, both on account of the high-handed manner in which it has been carried through the Council and on account of no provision being made in it securing the complete independence of the judges of the Court. When the Bill was passing through the Committee an amendment was carried against the Governor by Brigadier Cooke voting with the Chief Justice and the unofficials against the Governor and other official members. After the Bill had been committed it was again recommitted, an amendment was proposed by the Attorney-General, reversing the former amendment, the conscientious Brigadier was discreetly absent, and of course his Excellency had his way by main force of numbers. Such an incident as this simply tends to cause the community to regard the Council with feelings of indignant contempt so far as it pretends to be a deliberative assembly, and its existence as at present constituted can only be considered a source of irritation, and a standing insult to the intelligence and common sense of the community. Better far have solely an executive council, and then will the public know exactly what they have got, and they will not be treated like children—imposed upon with a toy, a plaything which is not what it pretends to be.

"The Bill has now been passed, and we suppose goes home by this mail to the Secretary of State for the Colonies. There is tacked to it, however, a protest by the unofficial members, which has the unanimous approval of the community, and a public meeting was to be held in the Town Hall to support the protest. Judges in India, and our judges here, have hitherto been subject only to Her Majesty's pleasure, and there is a very strong feeling that this should continue to be the case, whatever may be the practice in other colonies.

"In connection with this proposed meeting a little incident occurred which has not increased the confidence and goodwill of the public towards the Executive. Hitherto it has been the custom for the Sheriff to call all public meetings, whatever their object, on receiving a requisition from two or three of the residents. Accordingly, a requisition by six residents was sent to the Sheriff for the proposed meeting, but after two days, much to their surprise, an answer was received from that functionary stating that he could not call a public meeting having any political object, as he was a paid officer of Government. On reference to the Governor, his Excellency replied that the Sheriff was right, and acted by his orders, and in strict accordance with the rules of the colonial service. This, however, did not prevent the public from holding a meeting whenever and wherever they pleased. This is satisfactory so far as the right of public meeting is not questioned, but it is felt to be a needless innovation on an old and useful custom that the Sheriff will not in future be allowed to call public meetings."

WE are requested to state that the portrait of General CAVENAGH, lately Governor of the Straits Settlements, that was subscribed for by residents in Singapore and Penang, to be hung in the Town-hall of the former place, is now on view at Mr. McLEAN'S Gallery in the Haymarket.

CHINA AND JAPAN IMPORTS.

YOKOHAMA.—The state of the country north of Yedo, in which more fighting had been going on during the fortnight, had created quite a panic among the merchants of that city, and business, which, at the date of our last, showed signs of revival, had again to be reported as dull and depressed. In Cotton Yarn alone had there been any activity, 28s to 32s having been in chief request, and as much as $50 per picul having been obtained. Other counts had shared in the rise and quotations closed firm. In Grey Shirtings literally not a thousand pieces had been sold, and prices were purely nominal. A small lot of Black Velvets had been disposed of, but all other cotton goods were nearly without inquiry. Woollens were a trifle better than at the date of our last, there being some inquiry for Camlets, black and scarlet having been sold at $17½ and assortments at $15½ to $16. In other classes of woollen goods we have no improvement to mention. The closing quotations were:—Cotton Yarn—Nos. 16 to 24, $42.0 to 43.0 per picul; Nos. 28 to 32, $46.0 to 48.0; Nos. 38 to 42, $45.0 to 46.0. Cotton Piece Goods.—Grey Shirtings: 7 lbs., $2.30 to 2.35 per piece; 8.4 lbs., $2.80 to 2.85; 8.6 to 8.8 lbs., $2.80 to 2.90. White Shirtings: 56 to 60 reed, $3.10 to 3.20 per piece; 64 to 66, $3.50 to 3.70; 68 to 72, $3.70 to 4.10; T-Cloths, 6 lbs., $1.90 to 2.0 per piece; 6.8 to 7, $2.10 to 2.30; Turkey Red Cloth, 24 yards 32 inches, $2.80 to 3.10; Spotted Shirtings, White, $3.25 to 3.50; Dyed, $3.40 to 3.60; Brocades, White, $3.25 to 3.50; Dyed, $3.40 to 3.60; Velvets, Black, $9.25 to 9.75; Assorted, $8.0 to 9.0. Iron, Nail-rod, $3.0 to 3.50; Hoop, $4.25 to 4.50; Bars, $2.75 to 3.50; Pig, $1.30 to 1.50; Wire, $6.50 to 7.0; Lead, $7.0 to 7.75; Tin, $17.0 to 18.0; Tin Plates, $8.0 to 8.50.

HANKOW.—Transactions in imports had been on a moderate scale, the accounts from the interior markets not having been favourable to large investments. Of Grey Shirtings, sales had been on a small scale, holders being reluctant to accept current quotations. Heavy makes had been inquired for at an advance of 1 mace per piece on previous figures. Last prices were Tls. 2.2.3 to 2.2.8 per piece for 8¼ lbs. cloth, and Tls. 1.8.6 to 1.9.0 per piece for 7 lbs. White Shirtings of high counts had been asked for, but lower prices had been current. T-Cloths had been in small demand for all weights, but 7 lbs. commanded the preference. Drills had been in but limited inquiry at lower figures. Fancy Cottons had been extremely dull of sale. Camlets had attracted but little attention. Lastings of favourite chops had been in fair request at low values. Scarlet Long Ells had been in good request at an advance of 4 mace per piece. Assorted colours were also quoted higher. Spanish Stripes had been neglected. Figured Orleans of good assortments had improved somewhat in value.

SHANGHAI.—Cottons: Purchases had been confined almost exclusively to foreigners, attention having been directed principally to goods "to arrive," and solely to 8¼ lbs. Grey Shirtings. Transactions had also taken place in goods on the spot, on speculation, on the part of foreigners, Chinese buyers having kept out of the market. 7 lbs. Grey Shirtings had not met with much inquiry. White Shirtings had continued dull of sale. T-Cloths of 6 lbs. weight had been wanted at rather better rates. 7 lbs. were at one time neglected, and lower, but latterly had come more into favour, and fully recovered their value. Fancy Cottons had been in little or no request. The Titania and Min had arrived from England with general cargoes. Woollens: Spanish Stripes, Medium, Broad, and Habit Cloths had not been asked for. Camlets had been in limited inquiry, at last mail's figures. Long Ells, both Scarlet and Assorted, had changed hands to a small extent, but prices had improved. Lastings continued dull of sale. Figured Orleans had attracted but little attention. Metals: Nail Rod and Bar Iron had remained firm, while Hoop and Pig had been difficult of sale. Lead had been in good demand for cargo "to arrive" by late sailings, and on the spot sales had been made at quotations. For Tin Plates and Steel the inquiry had been trifling. Coals: The market had been plentifully supplied with all descriptions. Sales of Cardiff Coals had been made at tls. 10.5.0 from ship and to arrive. Small cargoes of American brought tls. 13.5.0 and 13.2.5 per ton. Australian Coals had realised 10.0.0 to 10.2.5 for Newcastle kinds, and 10.5.0 to 10.7.5 for Sydneys. Arrivals: 2,176 tons from Great Britain; 250 tons from America; 1,697 from Australia; 2,247 from Japan; and 530 tons from Formosa—total, 6,900 tons; of which 4,185 tons had been to order. The current quotations were:—G. E. Grey Shirtings, 38½ yards 39 in., 7 lbs. per piece, Tls. 1.9.0 to 1.9.5; 8¼ to 8½lbs., Tls. 2.2.6 to 2.3.1; 9 to 9½ Tls. 2.7.5 to 3.3.0; G. E. White Shirtings, 40 yards, 36 in., 52 reed, Tls. 1.9.0 to 1.9.5.; 56 reed, Tls. 2 to 2.1.0; 60 reed, Tls. 2.1.5 to 2.2.0; 64 reed, Tls. 2.3.0 to 2.4.0; 66 to 72 reed, Tls. 2.4.5 to 2.8.0; American Drills, 40 yds. 30 in., 15 lbs., Tls. 4.2.5 to 4.4.0; Jeans, 30 yds. 30 in., 10½ lbs., Tls. 3.5.0 to 3.6.0; Sheetings, 40 yds. 40 in., 15 lbs., Tls. 4 4.0 to 4.5.0; English Drills, 40 yds. 30 in., 12lbs. to 15 lbs., Tls. 4.1.5 to 4.2.0; T-Cloths, 6 to 7 lbs., 24 yds. 32 in., Tls. 1.5.0 to 2.1.0; 8 to 8·4 lbs., 24 yds. 36 in., Tls. 2.2.5 to 2.4.0; Spanish Stripes, Tls. 0.5.5 to 0.7.0; Medium, Broad, and Habit Cloths, Tls. 0.8.0 to 1.1.0; Camlets, English, S., 56 yds. 31 in., Tls. 13 to 13.5.0; S.S., Tls. 12.2.5 to 13.2.5; S.S.S., Tls. 9 to 10; Long Ells, Scarlet, 24 yds. 31 in., 12 lbs., Tls. 6.9.0 to 7; Assorted, Tls. 6.8.5 to 7.1.0; Lastings, 30 yds. 31 in., Tls. 11.5.0 to 12; Crape Lastings, 30 yds. 31 in., Tls. 7.5.0 to 8; Lustres, Tls. 4.5.0 to 4.6.0; Orleans, Figured, 30 yds. 31 in., Tls. 3.5.0 to 3.7.0; Plain, 30 yds. 31 in., Tls. 3.3.0 to 3.5.0; Metals: Iron, Flat and Round, per picul, Tls. 2.5.0 to 2.7.0; Nail Rod, Tls. 2.5.0 to 2.6.5; Hoop, Tls. 2.3.0 to 2.3.5; Pig, per ton, Tls. 12 to 14; Lead, per picul, Tls. 6.7.0 to 6.8.5; Tin Plates, per box, Tls. 4.5.5 to 5.2.0; Steel, per tub, Tls. 4 to 4.0.5; Quicksilver, per picul, Tls. 49.

FOOCHOW.—The only sales reported were as follows:—1,000 pieces, 8¼lbs. Grey Shirtings, at $3.25 per piece; 800 pieces, 7lbs. do., at $2.80 per piece; 2,025 piculs Lead (in barter), at $10.50 to 11.00 per picul.

HONG KONG.—Messrs. Olyphant and Co. report as follows:—Yarn: Transactions have been on a very limited scale, and confined to Nos. 16 to 24, fine qualities of which are down $2.50 per bale. Higher numbers are firmly held for former values. Of the quantity reported settled, 150 bales were taken by a foreign speculator. Piece Goods: Dealers show no disposition to purchase except for actual requirements, and prices of most descriptions are weaker, though holders generally evince no anxiety to realise. A small parcel of American Drills—Pepperell—has been quitted at a decline of 10 cents per piece, and there are buyers still in the market for similar goods at the same figures. Woollens: Blankets have declined with the arrival of moderate supplies. Long Ells and Spanish Stripes are very firm, and Lastings and Camlets are again dearer, and still tend upward, the majority of holders demanding prices above the views of buyers. Metals: Irons are dull of sale, and generally a little lower. Lead weak. Tin, Tin Plates, and Quicksilver firm. Coal: Receipts amount to 1,455 tons English (to consumers), 1,176 ditto Welsh, 990 ditto Sydney (to consumers), and 500 ditto Keelung. Sales have been 888 tons English, ex godown, at $13.50, 1,700 ditto Cardiff, "to arrive," at $14.0, and 175 ditto Keelung at $8.50. No sales of Anthracite have been reported.

CHINA AND JAPAN EXPORTS.

TEA.

YOKOHAMA.—The principal event of the fortnight to be noticed in this market was the arrival of about 375 piculs of the new season's Tea, the quality of which was poor; some small parcels of the same had been settled at quotations, but late arrivals were held for higher prices. Settlements, including some common grade Teas for the London market, amounted to about 1,100 piculs. Stocks were slightly increased, and were estimated at 1,000 piculs of old and 300 piculs of new. Prices were firm, as quoted. The Recife had been chartered for London, and the Seawfell for New York. The closing quotations were given as follows:—Common, $18 to 22 per picul; Good Common, $22 to 24; Medium, $24 to 26; Good Medium, $27 to 30; Fine, $31 to 32; Finest, $33 to 35; Choice, $36 to 45.

SHANGHAI.—Black.—There had been no business whatever. Large settlements of the new crop had been made in Hankow, and all the arrivals thence had been in transit. The few musters shown at Shanghai appeared to be of fair average quality. Teas were expected down daily. Green.—In these also nothing had been done. From Japan some 2,000 packages of Nagasaki-packed had been placed on the market, but no sales had been effected. Ningpo-packed Pingsueys were expected up about ten days hence, a few musters having already been shown. An unusually large quantity was packing at that port for this year.

HANKOW.—Musters of new Teas were shown on the 26th May, and on the evening of the following day the market was opened on a stock of about 50 chops, at prices four to five taels over last season's opening rates. Up to the 30th May some 46,000 chests had been taken, latest settlements showing an advance of three taels on opening prices. Oanfas were superior to those of last season, and Oopacks generally were of about fair average quality. Three days later advices report great excitement on the 2nd June, and settlements by Russian buyers at 28 to 40 taels, but at the close less eagerness was shown, and some parcels had been settled on more favourable terms.

KIUKIANG.—Some 3,300 chests new Teas had arrived, but the extreme prices demanded by Teamen precluded settlements. The Ningchows, though flavory, were very thin, and the Hohows were considered to be inferior to last season's.

FOOCHOW.—The Circular of Messrs. Odell and Co. contains the following:—In our last issue we reported the opening of the market for the new season's Teas, and we have now to advise that during the fortnight succeeding the 6th of June a very large business has been transacted, settlements of Congou amounting to 156,000 chests at prices ranging from Tls. 9.8 to 47.3 ship off. On arrival the finest Kaisows were found to be really choice, and were eagerly competed for at extreme rates. Our market closes with much activity. We quote:—Common to medium grades rather easier, fine to finest Kaisows 2 to 3 Tads per picul cheaper compared with opening rates, while extra fine are somewhat dearer, nearly all the chops having been placed. Total arrivals are much in excess of those to same date last season, and it is estimated that there are fully 80,000 chests first crop Tea still to come to hand. Souchong: Only 4 small parcels have arrived; the finest chops may be expected during the coming (week. Oolongs in the early part of the interval were purchased to a considerable extent, but are now somewhat neglected. Scented Teas, being of good quality and well scented, have been realised at full prices. Flowery Pekoe: Arrivals are light, and the quality but poor, though sales have been made at extreme rates. Our quotations are:—Dust and siftings, tls. 9.8 to 11.3 per picul; Ordinary to good common, Tls. 17.8 to 21.8 per picul; common to good flavoury, Tls. 22.8 to 30.8 per picul; fine to finest Kaisow, Tls. 31.8 to 42.8 per picul; extra finest, crack chops, Tls. 44.8 to 47.8 per picul.

AMOY.—There had been an arrival of about 3,000 packages of new teas, but the quantity being so small no transactions had resulted.

CANTON.—During the interval a steady business had been transacted, and the total settlements, especially in Scented kinds, were very large. At one time a noticeable reduction on previous rates might have been quoted, but later competition had been general, and at the close we note but little average change on opening prices. The second crop of Scented kinds proved to be much mixed with spurious leaf, but still it was eagerly bought at full rates. District Greens had been freely taken at high values. Altogether settlements had been very irregular, as follows:—Canton District Congous, 1,500 boxes, at Tls. 22 to 29½; Scented Orange Pekoe, 22,000 do., at Tls. 20 to 38; Scented Caper, 40,000 do., at Tls. 19 to 36; Gunpowder, 16,000 do., at Tls. 14½ to 29; Young Hyson, 5,000 do., at Tls. 17 to 19.

SILK.

YOKOHAMA.—Business in this staple during the past fortnight had been on rather a limited scale, owing to the smallness of supplies; this may in some degree be accounted for by the lateness of the season, coupled with the continued disturbances in the north. Quotations remained unchanged, and the stock on offer was composed principally of medium and inferior sorts. Late advices from the silk districts spoke well for the prospects of the new crop. The quotations (laid down in London all charges included at exchange 4s. 6½d.) were as follows:—Hanks, Mybash, Sinchu, &c., 1, 2 nom., 36s. 6d. to 38s. 7d.; ditto 1, 2, 3, 33s. 7d. to 35s. 6d.; ditto 2, 3, 4, 29s. 9d. to 32s. 8d.; ditto inferior, 26s. 10d. to 29s. 2d.; Oshu best, 33s. 9d. to 36s. 10d.; ditto medium, 29s. 9d. to 31s. 8d.; ditto inferior, 26s. 1d. to 28s.; Coshu, 1, 2, ditto medium, 28s. 9d. to 30s. 8d.; ditto inferior, 24s. 11d. to 27s. 10d.; Sodai, 1, 2, 28s. 9d. to 32s. 8d.; ditto inferior 24s. 11s. to 26s. 10d.; Etchesen best nom., 28s. to 29s. 7d.; ditto 2, 24s. 11d. to 26s. 10d.; ditto inferior, 22s. to 24s. 11d.; Mashta, best, ditto inferior, 21s. 10d.

SHANGHAI.—Mr. Holdsworth's Circular, dated 4th June, offers the following remarks:—The latest dates received since my last Silk Circular are by letters to the 17th April, and by telegrams via Kiachta to the 5th May, the latter reporting "Silk firmer, Chop 3 Tsatlee 29s. per lb." The first few parcels of the New Season's Silk were received on the 31st May, and during the following few days, arrivals having come forward freely, the unsold stock reached fully 900 to 1,000 bales, before any purchases were made; but on the 3rd inst. the market was opened by the purchase of 8 bales "Tse-quong-Sun's" Chop 3½ Tsatlee at Tls. 540 per picul; 30 bales No. 4½ to 5 Lingho Tsatlee at Tls. 425 to 440 per picul, and during the past two days transactions have considerably increased, making a total of fully 300 bales settled, chiefly Tsatlees. The prices paid have been excessively high, which may be attributable to the existence of unlimited orders (as regards price) to ship by first steamers, and as the natives were aware that such orders had been received they naturally asked very high prices for their Silks, and unfortunately succeeded in obtaining them. The Chinese are unanimous in asserting their belief that if the second crop be only a moderate one we shall have fully 50,000 bales of Silk available for export for season 1868-69; this, coupled with the fact that the latest advices received of the European crop thus far are satisfactory, also that there is a difference of fully 2s. to 2s. 6d. in the London quotations as compared with same date last year—2 chop 3 tsatlee being then quoted 31s., and by last telegrams to hand only 29s., ought to cause foreigners to consider well the probable result of their shipments before paying such excessively high rates as 30s. to 30s. 6d. for true classic thirds tsatlee, for there are certainly no circumstances, either statistically or politically, to justify purchasers in paying such extreme rates for their Silk. Nearly all descriptions of Silk this year are finer in size than last season. Hainings, owing to the greater bulk of the higher numbers, having been purchased for re-reeling, are reported to be commoner than last year, the lower numbers left in the hands of the Silk producers being mixed with the better grades. The arrivals from the interior having come forward freely, the unsold stock is estimated at about 1,100 bales, chiefly medium and lower Tsatlees. The Peninsular and Oriental Company's steamer Benares, with 314 bales Japan and 71 bales China Silk on board, was wrecked on the Fisherman's group of islands. The Silk, which was considerably sea-damaged, was returned to Shanghai and sold by public auction.

FREIGHTS AND CHARTERS.

At HANKOW.—To London: The st. Agamemnon gets £8 8s. per ton of 40 cubic feet; the Eliza Shaw and Gossamer ask £7 per ton of 50 cubic feet.

At SHANGHAI.—For London: Although there are a good number of vessels on the berth, the rate asked is £4 10s. to £5 per ton. For coasting purposes there is no inquiry for tonnage.

At FOOCHOW.—To London £5 to £5 10s. per ton.

At HONG KONG and CANTON.—A fair enquiry exists for tonnage homewards. The last charter was at £4 5s. for London, and £4 15s. for New York: for coast ports there is little doing. The circular of George Holmes gives the number of disengaged vessels in harbour at nine, representing 3,384 tons.

At MANILA.—The American ship Archer takes 300 tons sugar for New York at $12 gold per 20 cwt., loading hemp on owner's account. The Cinco Hermanos and the Manuel, both Spanish, have been fixed, the former for Liverpool with dry sugar at £4 10s., and hemp at £5 5s. per 20 cwt., and the latter goes to Spain with tobacco, taking some 8,000 quintals at 46 reals vellon per 50 cubic feet.

At SINGAPORE.—There have been few arrivals, and a good demand for tonnage has continued; rates for the United Kingdom declined after the departure of the last mail, owing to expected arrivals; the Granite City engaged a full cargo for London at £3, the Mary Nicholson is now laid on at £3 5s. per ton.

LONDON, MONDAY, JULY 27, 1868.

THE BURLINGHAME MISSION.

THE speech delivered by Mr. BURLINGHAME at the banquet given by the New York merchants to the Chinese Embassy has, as might have been expected, provoked a good deal of unfavourable criticism. In our last issue we gave this address at full length, and those of our readers who have had the patience to wade through a couple of columns of Mr. BURLINGHAME'S somewhat fervid eloquence will probably agree in the conclusion that, whatever success it may have achieved as a display of stump oratory, the unmistakable "bunkum" that forms its chief ingredient is not likely to forward the views of the Embassy by its effect on the minds of thinking men. If the Chinese people are in truth all that Mr. BURLINGHAME unblushingly asserts, then European civilisation with its concomitant Christianity,—in short, our entire system of morality, to say nothing of art, literature, science, and political economy,—must be regarded as a gigantic delusion, and the sooner we abandon it all and revert to the primitive philosophy of CONFUCIUS, as practised by his descendants of the nineteenth century, the better. Mr. BURLINGHAME'S glorification of his constituents is almost sublime in its comprehensiveness. They are everything that is good and noble and perfect. They are the incarnation of the "great doctrine" of CONFUCIUS; they breathe the "sentiments" of MENCIUS pure and unadulterated. Of all peoples the most cruelly injured and abused, they now come forward—in the person of Mr. BURLINGHAME—to forgive everything and everybody, and will henceforth condescend to mix on equal terms with the rest of the world, provided only that they are accepted at their own valuation. China, says Mr. BURLINGHAME, asks you to forget your ancient prejudices, and to abandon your assumptions of superiority. So gravely is the point urged that for a moment we are almost induced to believe that it is ourselves, and not the Chinese, who have so long persisted in considering our own country as the centre of the universe, our own monarch exclusively as the near relative of all the heavenly bodies, our own wisdom the only true wisdom, and all outsiders foreign devils and barbarians. Then, says Mr. BURLINGHAME (speaking to his countrymen, but very pointedly at Great Britain), China wishes no war; she particularly requests you not to interfere in her internal affairs, and asks you to respect the neutrality of her waters, and the integrity of her territory. This sounds a little ungrateful. It is solely to our interference with her internal affairs (and that at her own request) that China owes the suppression of the TAE-PING rebellion; as to the neutrality of her waters, the occasional destruction of a nest of pirates can hardly be considered an infringement of it; and the integrity of her territory has been in many cases preserved, and in many others restored, by British arms. Again, we are told that China asks to be left perfectly free to unfold herself precisely in that form of civilisation of which she is most capable; in reply to which demand we are tempted to ask Mr. BURLINGHAME whether, in his vocabulary, unfolding and shutting up are synonymous terms, for the former operation, carried out on purely Chinese principles, would probably turn out very near akin to the latter. Much progress has doubtless been made during the last few years, involving important reforms in military organisation, the collection of revenue, and education; but as for any "unfolding"—in the sense which would extend to foreigners entire freedom to reside or acquire property in any part of the country, to make railways and to work mines—there is no real disposition towards it. Until China is prepared to allow to foreigners, at least to such as are subjects (or citizens) of treaty Powers, all the same rights and privileges that European nations readily concede to aliens, it is idle to talk or her entering the great family of nations on equal terms.

China, says our orator, seeing at last the necessity of entering into relations with civilisation (this, by-the-way, is rather a come-down after his previous flights) does not wait to be approached, but comes out and extends to us her hand. That is, she extends to us—Mr. Burlinghame. Well, we must take him, we suppose—not exactly at his own valuation, but for what he is worth. China extends her hand certainly, but is it open or closed—is the gesture friendly or repellant? It looks more like the latter. It seems, according to Mr. BURLINGHAME'S account, that there is a conspiracy among European nations—England, of course, at its head—to coerce China into compliance with unreasonable demands; to take her by the throat, and shake and bully, and otherwise maltreat her; and it is against the "malign spirit of the tyrannic element" that he is prepared to do better. Now, this is simply a tissue of misrepresentation. What Mr. BURLINGHAME would impress upon his hearers is that the Government of China is the subject of a coarse and brutal tyranny at the hands of the foreign Ministers, more especially our own; while the truth is that our representative is notoriously more solicitous for the interests of the Chinese Government than for the welfare of British merchants in that country. What complaint, asks Mr. BURLINGHAME, have you to make against China? We reply, that in numerous important particulars our merchants have been deprived of the rights granted them by treaty, and that our trade has thereby sustained material injury; that the time agreed on by mutual consent for a revision of the treaty has now arrived; and that such revision, conceived in fair and liberal terms, so as to be beneficial to both parties, should be forthwith effected on the spot where the orginal treaties were signed. We are quite sure that nothing could have a better effect, both on the foreign trade and the internal prosperity of China than this course. By exhibiting a steady honesty of purpose in the prompt fulfilment of their engagements, the Chinese Government will do more to cement a cordial understanding with other nations than all Mr. BURLINGHAME'S oratorical or diplomatic efforts will secure.

TELEGRAPHIC COMMUNICATION.

ANOTHER break in the Malta and Alexandria Cable, reported by a despatch dated Valetta, 23rd instant, has unpleasantly reminded us of the miserable inefficiency of the existing means of communication with India and China. The telegrams usually sent forward from Suez on the arrival there of the steamer have this time reached us via Brindisi. Of course, as far as the Mediterranean portion of the line is concerned, the operations of the new company will soon apply a remedy; but how long are we to wait for a Red Sea Cable? That it is a necessity of the age, and one which must be supplied before long, is a fact now very generally recognised, and that the present Government will give no substantial support to the scheme is equally certain; but few practical men entertain a doubt that it may be done easily and speedily without any such aid. The difficulties of Atlantic telegraphy—at first, to all appearance, nearly insurmountable—have been entirely conquered, and next year will, in all human probability, see another cable in operation between Europe and the United States. The requisite capital for the Indo-European and Anglo-Mediterranean Companies was obtained without difficulty; not only is there just now a plethora of capital, but there is also a manifest disposition on the part of the public to invest in telegraph companies in preference to most other undertakings. And yet, amid all these favourable and encouraging circumstances, the promoters of the long-talked of Anglo-Indian line still hang back. If they would be content once for all to abandon the idea of a Government guarantee, and boldly launch their scheme on its own merits they could hardly fail to meet with a satisfactory response. The present state of things is not only a national reproach, but is especially discreditable to English commercial enterprise.

EXPLORATIONS IN WESTERN CHINA.

WHILE the Bhamo expedition pushes its way eastward in search of a practicable route from Burmah to the Western provinces of China, an attempt is being made by Mr. COOPER, an enterprising explorer, to find a similar route from China to Calcutta. Mr. COOPER left the China coast about eight or nine months ago, and travelled westward by way of the Yang-tsze-kiang, following the route taken by Colonel SAREL and his party in 1861, but with better success. In the beginning of March he arrived at Ching-tu, the capital of Sze-chuen, a place distant from Shanghai in a straight line more than a thousand miles. Here he found the Nepaulese embassy on their way to Peking detained at Ching-tu on account of the disturbed state of the country between that place and the capital. Mr. COOPER, taking advantage of the ambassador's presence, asked him for a letter to show to the Nepaulese officials on the Thibetan frontier, but this was declined, on the ground that there was "no law between Nepaul and England." After a few days' stay at Ching-tu, Mr. COOPER started for Ta-tsien-lu, the last Chinese town on the borders of Western China. The last letter from him is dated Hi-zan-ki, March 28th, a place five days' journey from Ta-tsien-lu, for which town he intended to start on the 7th of April. After leaving Ta-tsien-lu, two routes to Calcutta will be open to him, the one by Bathang and Sudya, the other by Lassa. Mr. COOPER intended to try the former of these routes, and we hope he may succeed in traversing it safely, for in addition to the greater length of the Lassa route the ill-will of the Thibetans makes it a very perilous journey.

THE AUSTRIAN EXPEDITION TO THE FAR EAST.

The journal of the Austrian Agricultural Society publishes an interesting paper read to the Society by Dr. Von Scherzer, on the Government commercial expedition which is to proceed from Trieste for the East next month. Dr. Von Scherzer says that two screw ships, the frigate Danube and the corvette Frederick, have been placed at the disposal of the expedition, and that representatives of all the branches of Austrian industry, such as metallurgy, leather work, glass work, viniculture, &c., will accompany it for the purpose of inquiring into and reporting upon the advisability of opening a trade in any of the manufactured productions of Austria with the countries to be visited by the expedition. Every attempt is also to be made to procure observations and collections of natural products, though no scientific men are to be specially attached to the expedition for that purpose. The places at which the expedition will touch on leaving Trieste will be Capetown, Port Elizabeth, Singapore, Bangkok, and Hong Kong. At Bangkok a commercial and shipping treaty is to be concluded, if possible, with the King of Siam, and similar treaties are to be negotiated with other Eastern States. As soon as the negotiations are completed the Danube will return, leaving the Frederick to see to the due execution of the treaties and to protect the commercial interests of Austria generally. On her way home the Danube is to pass by South America, in order to conclude commercial treaties with Peru, Chili, and the Argentine Republic. Consuls are to be then appointed to the principal ports in the countries with which commercial treaties have been concluded. A "commercial reporter" will be attached to the expedition, whose business it will be to examine into the resources and wants of each country visited, to ascertain the prices of all commodities, and to gather every kind of information likely to be useful to people in Austria who may contemplate opening a trade with the countries in question. The paper concludes with some curious statistics taken from an official report on the trade of China in 1866. It appears that the value of the imports in that year was about £80,000,000, and of the exports about £25,000,000, and that in Shanghai alone the total of the imports and exports together was about £50,000,000. The raw silk exported amounted to 4,328,000 lb., and the tea to 157,750,000 lb. The number of foreign ships engaged in the China trade was 15,672, of 6,877,682 tons burden. Of these 8,276 were English, 3,602 North American, 2,248 North German, and 234 only French.

THE SILKWORM DISEASE.

M. Pasteur has communicated to the Academy of Sciences some fresh researches of his on the disease called in French morts-flats, incident to silkworms. When they are labouring under this affection they evince loss of appetite, and lie extended on the hurdles; their intestines in such cases contain various organised beings, which are not to be met with in the healthy silkworm. Such are, in the first place, very nimble vibrios, with or without brilliant points in their bodies; secondly, a nomad remarkable for its agility; thirdly, bacterium termo, or a vibrio that much resembles it; and lastly a ferment, in the shape of a row of beads. These productions are sometimes together in the same worm, and sometimes separate. That which is most frequently to be met with is the row of three, four, or five perfectly spherical beads, the diameter of which is about the one-thousandth part of a millimetre! M. Pasteur next proceeds to show that the mort-flat disease may be hereditary. If the finest cocoons of a breed strongly affected with this malady be selected for propagation, it will be found that the silkworms issuing from them will be tainted with it. Its effects are various: it will sometimes carry off a whole breed, and at others only thin its numbers; but the worms that attain the age of spinning their cocoons are remarkable for their laziness. M. Pasteur, having examined many in this state of incipient lethargy, and in the chrysalis state, has always found the "row of beads" in the intestines, without either bacteriums, vibrios, or nomads. Nevertheless there is nothing to prove these ferments to be the cause of the mort flat diseases; perhaps they are only the necessary result of an unsound state of the digestive functions. One of our author's experiments consisted in reducing a quantity of mulberry leaves into a pulp with water; at the end of twenty-fours hours, the preparation contained the identical organisms described above. Hence there is strong presumption that the appearances in the intestines of the diseased silkworms are entirely owing to bad digestion.

THE HAVRE EXHIBITION.

The Exhibition has now passed through its probationary month, a period which seems necessary in France by way of law, no matter what be the date fixed for opening the doors to the public. It cannot be said that the carpenters and other workmen have entirely left the premises, but the Exhibition is full and abounding in interest, and the number of visitors is considerable and seems to be increasing rapidly; and here it may be mentioned that the Exhibition is popular, and for one good reason if for none other, namely, that there is less red-tape, less humbug—to use a vulgar but highly expressive word—about the management than usual, and the regulations, as well as the conduct and bearing of the attendants, are, as a natural consequence, more than usually sensible and unobtrusive. Visitors are perfectly at their ease, and we have not heard that any ill consequences have arisen from the fact, although it is not to be supposed that the men of Havre and the foreigners of all nations constantly mixed up with them are more virtuous or less curious than other people; in fact, the population, like that of most seaports, is an energetic, self-reliant, and somewhat rough one, and the fact that a minimum of administrative regulations answers better here than a maximum of the same has ever answered elsewhere is a capital proof of the good effect of leaving people alone as much as possible.

When an abuse is discovered it is stopped in a quiet manner; thus, family tickets of admission have been stopped, because, as we understand, some people took the word family in the broadest possible sense—that of including all men and women as brothers and sisters.

With respect to the contents of the galleries of the Exhibition we can speak now with much satisfaction. The first and chief group, that of navigation, presents a very excellent appearance; there may be a few blanks, but they are scarcely perceptible, and the objects exhibited are well arranged and all well seen, which is more than can sometimes be said. The nautical collection is not so large, of course, as was that of Paris, but it reminds one much of the fine show by the banks of the Seine; and although some of the models and other articles exhibited may have been seen in Paris, there are many that are new and important. The collection of models is not very large, but it is good and characteristic. The Dutch have sent models of their most approved fishing boats; the Americans, among other things, a model of a great river steam ark; the Havre and other French builders contribute largely; but the English exhibitors carry off the palm more in quality even than quantity—this is admitted by all candid judges. There is nothing better, if there be anything equally good, in the Exhibition than the models of Messrs. Napier; Johnson, Scott, and Co.; Bishop, of Guernsey; Kayll, of Sunderland; the London Engineering and Iron Shipbuilding Company, and Palmer's Shipbuilding Company; and this is not the whole list. Messrs. Napier do not show the famous Pereire and Ville de Paris again, but these two vessels appear in the collection of the Transatlantic Steam Company, whose property they are. This energetic company has now twenty-one packet boats, with a steam force of 17,000-horse power, and a total capacity of 80,000 tons; eleven of these vessels exceed 5,000 tons each. "Amongst the packet boats belonging to the New York line," I translate literally the expressions from the company's own notice, "are the Pereire and the Ville de Paris, which are the two most rapid steamers belonging to the company."

If England be first France is a capital second. The Messageries Imperiales Company, which builds all its own boats, and the company of the Forges and Chantiers of the Mediterranean, both make excellent shows, and their models and plans deserve careful attention. Amongst exhibitors from other countries the John Cockerell Company, of Scraing, near Liege, makes the most remarkable show. In other matters connected with shipping France and England balance each other very fairly, and make an admirable show, neither, as far as we have been able to judge, being in advance of the other in the way of novelties.

In instruments of various kinds our neighbours are strong, and show some beautiful scientific and admirably executed specimens; the only articles in which England excels her neighbour in the Exhibition are, perhaps, ship's compasses, apparatus for communication between the captain and the helmsman and engineer of a vessel, and marine chronometers. Of the latter there is a fine show on both sides, but the palm must, we think, be given to the English collection of Messrs. Parkinson and Frodsham; Kullberg; Reid and Sons; and Weichert, of Cardiff. The rivals seem determined to keep the battle even, for one of our first houses, whose name we shall not mention, and one of the first French firms, still exhibit almost empty cases. Perhaps their goods have gone astray.

The class of eatables for exportation is full and really magnificent. The exhibitors are especially numerous in the preserved meat section; most of the great French and several of the English export firms exhibit, but the show of delicate made dishes, fish, vegetables, and other articles on the French side, is extraordinary, and being put up in glass jars they make a grand show, and do the highest credit to the nation that produced Appert, the inventor, as we believe, of the system of conservation by expulsion of air by heat.

It may not be uninteresting to state here that a dinner for 200 persons is to take place here shortly, for which the whole of the provisions as well as the wine—of which, by the way, there is an excellent show—are to be derived from the Exhibition itself. Sardines, prawns, and tunny fish from the Mediterranean, and devilled lobster from the United States, will make good hors d'œuvres; the Loire, Scotland and Holland will supply the salmon, American Cove oysters, and short-necked clams for sauce; the meats will come from all the world; while France will have the honour of supplying samples of her delicate preparations from fish, flesh and fowl, and of crowning all with her perfumed truffles. For fruits, there will be, amongst others, fresh pines and peaches from America, and all the wealth of European orchards, hard and soft, stony and pulpy. As to wine, we could mention half-a-dozen grands crus to be found here, but that would be invidious, and moreover not quite a safe proceeding until the bill of fare is visible.

The second group, articles for ship use and for exportation, let in almost everything in the world, and there is a very nice choice collection of silks and tissues of nearly all kinds, especially sailcloths, wearing apparel, plate, jewellery, perfumery, furniture, porcelain, carriages, agricultural implements, pianos and other musical instruments, printing presses, saddlery, photograph and photographic instruments, and a hundred miscellaneous articles, including stationery, colours, travelling equipage, and toys.

One gallery is devoted to machinery, much of it in motion, and including specimens of the mechanical means used in most of the common trades, such as chocolate manufacture, confectionery, cork cutting, shoe making, the production of mineral waters, ice, &c.

The garden is now bright and gay, the weather being magnificent and the temperature moderate. The Aquarium is the grand attraction there, and its tanks receive accessions every day; amongst the specimens rarely seen alive are half-a-dozen mackerel, a conger eel a yard long, several dogfish, shoals of whiting, gurnet, and grey mullet, flat-fish of almost every variety in great numbers, several large specimens of the limule, with its skull-like shell which with its tail makes it look like a gigantic petrified tadpole, many specimens and two or three varieties of the extraordinary cuttlefish, with head like an elephant, yet made up, as it were, of soft fingers, twenty or more of those polypi which Victor Hugo has brought into so much notoriety, and crabs, lobsters, sea-spiders, and other crawling and creeping things too numerous to mention. The Aquarium is really a great success, and not less so its outworks, which now contain five big seals, an immense turtle, a boa of some kind, and some other "wild fowl," as Bottom the Weaver called the lion. The grounds are made gay in the evening by music and lights, and the cafes, restaurants, beer-houses, American iced cream-drinks, Algerian and other shops, give the whole a gay air and recal the Paris Exhibition to the mind.

Havre was crowded the other day for the inauguration of the Exhibition; it is moderately full now, and will doubtless be crowded enough when Brown, Jones and Robinson can escape the noise and dust of the town.

THE CITY BANK.

On the 21st inst. the half-yearly meeting was held at the London Tavern; Mr. Jones in the chair. The directors' report (the twenty-fifth) shows that after paying interest, and providing for bad and doubtful debts, the gross profits, including £3,077 4s. 1d. brought forward from the preceding half-year, amount to £41,734 4s. 10d. The directors, as previously stated, declare a dividend at the rate of 7 per cent. per annum, and carry forward £3,250 2s. 10d. to the new profit and loss account. On the debtor side of the balance-sheet the amount due by the bank on current and deposit accounts, &c., is £2,514,781 18s. 10d.; acceptances against cash in hand, &c., £2,161,689 19s. 10d. On the creditor side are, Exchequer Bills, East India Debentures, and Government Securities, £326,534 9s. 1d.; cash in hand, £533,946 18s. 3d.; and other securities, including bills discounted and loans, £4,383,699 13s.

In moving the adoption of the report, the Chairman observed that the increase in the assets and liabilities showed the satisfactory position of the bank. There was an increase of £2,000 in the item of premises, the expenses incurred in completing the branch in Tottenham-court-road; but henceforth, all the works being finished and the account closed, there would be a decrease from time to time. There was also a slight addition to the current expenses, occasioned by an increase in the salaries. A decrease of between £1,400 and £1,500 in the profit and loss account was caused by the necessity of calling in former debts.

Mr. Sheriff M'Arthur seconded the motion, and Mr. Ball having remarked that while the number of branches and the working expenses had increased there did not appear to be any corresponding addition to the number of transactions, the Chairman replied that the transactions had increased as compared with the previous half-year, when the assets and liabilities were £4,269,711, while now they amounted to £5,298,806, or an increase of a million, adding that the directors had every reason to be satisfied with the progress of all the branches. The falling off in the profits was owing to the very low rate of discount.

The motion was carried, and the directors and auditors retiring by rotation having been re-elected, the proceedings terminated in the usual manner.

LEGAL.

COURT OF ADMIRALTY.—JULY 16.

THE "MAGGIE LESLIE."—JUDGMENT.

Dr. Deane, Q.C., Mr. E. C. Clarkson, Dr. Tristram, and Mr. Pritchard appeared in the cause. Sir R. Phillimore delivered judgment as follows:—

This is a cause of distribution of salvage money awarded by a competent foreign court. The sum awarded appears to have been £11,000, but by some process which I do not exactly understand relative to the exchange and transmission of money to this country, and other circumstances, the sum which it is agreed I have to distribute is £8,250. On the 9th of October, 1867, the barque Fusiyama, with a master and seventeen hands, fell in near Gaspar Island, in the East Indies, with the ship Maggie Leslie derelict and in very disabled state. I presume, from the amount awarded to the salvors, that the derelict and her cargo must have been of considerable value. The value of the Fusiyama and her cargo was about £70,000. The chief mate and four of the crew of the Fusiyama voluntered to take the derelict into Batavia, which, after undergoing much personal hardship and being exposed to considerable perils, they accomplished on the 21st day of October, the Fusiyama keeping them company for the first five days. The parties among whom I have to distribute the amount awarded are the owners of the Fusiyama, her master and crew, who remained on board, and the mate and four men who navigated the Maggie Leslie. With reference to the principle upon which the owners of the Fusiyama are to be remunerated, I will refer to the following opinion of Dr. Lushington:—"We all know that formerly claims of owners of vessels to participate in salvage did not receive very favourable attention from the judges who preceded me in this chair, but things are now much changed; steam vessels are able to render important services, in which the ship herself is the chief agent." It is my intention to adhere to the principles laid down by my learned predecessor on the subject; but in this case the Fusiyama cannot be said to be the chief agent in the salvage service, because she had no steam power, and because she did not tow, or in any way directly assist the disabled vessel, though her attendance upon her for five days is a circumstance not to be left out of consideration. I do not forget the arguments as to the risk to her insurance in consequence of her deviation from her course, nor the peril to which she was subject from the loss of her mate and four of her men for a time. If she had met with bad weather it would have been a very serious circumstance both for the ship and her valuable cargo to have been without her proper complement of hands. The master took upon himself a great responsibility, especially as the salvage was one of property and not of human life, and much additional labour was imposed upon the crew who remained on board. The principal salvors, however, are unquestionably the mate and four men who took the derelict into Batavia, and pre-eminently the mate himself. Bearing in mind these considerations, I shall distribute the salvage award in the following manner:—To the owners of the Fusiyama, £1,400; to her master, £900; to the twelve men who remained on board, £1,900; to the mate who navigated the derelict, £1,000; and to the four men who accompanied him, £3,050. The costs of all parties to be paid rateably out of the fund.

Decree accordingly.

EXPORT OF COTTON GOODS TO THE FAR EAST.

The following is a summary of Mr. Sam Mendel's tables for the present month, which contain details of the quantities of cotton manufactures and yarn shipped from the ports of London, Liverpool, Southampton, and the Clyde, to Hong Kong, Shanghai, Japan, Singapore, Batavia, Manila, and Ceylon during the month ended 16th July. HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—Unusually hot weather in the summer months is often productive of unpleasant consequences to many. The liver, stomach, and bowels in such cases are more or less seriously affected, so that the natives of England are, at certain seasons, liable to some of the disorders which rage in warm climates. People cannot have a more powerful curative than Holloway's justly celebrated Pills. They cool and purify the blood, and render the system less liable to any irregularity; or, when disease is present, they abate the force, and at last totally destroy it. Dysentery, biliousness, acidity of the stomach, sick headache, and debility soon disappear before a course of these admirable Pills.

WHARVES.

NOTICE.

THE undersigned call the attention of Masters and Agents of Vessels discharging at this Port to the great advantage to be gained in point of convenience, despatch, and economy, by making use of their WHARVES at NEW HARBOUR.

With the assistance of Steam Cranes, a general cargo can be landed easily in a few days—or in about one-fifth of the time usually occupied discharging in the roads.

There are large, dry, and very commodious brick Godowns on the Wharves, which vessels have free use of for cargo while discharging.

The trouble and disputes with, and pilfering of cargo common among boatmen are avoided by vessels using the Wharves.

Cartage of cargo to the town (which is within easy distance) is guaranteed to be not more than lighterage from the roads, and the coolie hire discharging alongside is less.

There is always a large stock of the best English and Welsh coals on the premises, which are supplied to steamers at the lowest market price, and vessels going alongside to take in or discharge coals pay no wharfage.

Vessels discharging cargo pay a wharfage of 20 cents per ton—a trifling charge when the immense advantages gained are taken into consideration.

Arrangements have been made by which all repairs to ships or steamers can be done with despatch while the vessels are lying alongside the Wharves.

There is an efficient European pilot on the premises, and, when required, a steam tug is always available.

C. MITCHELL GRANT, Proprietor.

ARRANGEMENTS FOR 1868.

The Proprietor has made arrangements to run six couriers per month in May and June, in the event of delay in the transmission of telegrams by the Russian Telegraph Service. It may not be generally known that the delays during the last season were occasioned by the overflowing of the Rivers Irtisch, Obi, and Yenessei; upwards of 500 versts of Telegraph Line were swept away from time to time. As such inundations occur only once or twice in a century, the Proprietor hopes that the precaution he has taken will prove unnecessary. During the latter two months of last season the line worked very well, and Telegrams were delivered to and from Europe in 18 days; the average time being as follows:—

London and Kiachta by Telegraph	2 days.
Kiachta and Tientsin by Courier	12 "
Tientsin and Shanghai by Steamer	4 "
Total ...	18 days.

A courier having been killed by a fall from his horse last year, the telegram bag was lost, and has not yet been recovered. In order to prevent a recurrence of the inconvenience, it is the intention of the Proprietor to open all telegrams addressed to his care, and forward duplicates by the subsequent courier to their respective addresses, unless he be specially notified to the contrary. The number of stations in Mongolia will be doubled this year. Contracts have been made to deliver telegrams between Kiachta and Tientsin in twelve days; the non-fulfilment of the contracts as to time entails a penalty upon the contractors of from 1 to 3 taels per hour (6s. to 18s.), thus giving a guarantee that delay will not occur.

After the first two months of the season, which are the most severe as regards the climate, the contractors will reduce their contract time to ten days.

Summary of News from the Far East.

JAPAN.

OSAKA AND HIOGO.

Advices from these ports reach to the 31st May. There is no political news, but the following extracts from a letter, dated Kobé, May 31, contain some interesting gossip about the new settlement:—

"The only event of the slightest importance has been the visit of Sir Harry Parkes to Osaka, to present his credentials to the Mikado, and of this you are already aware. One circumstance in connection with the audience is perhaps worthy of note. The conference was attended by the captains of the several men-of-war, the lieutenant in command of a gunboat, and by the Admiral's Secretary and Flag-Lieutenant, as well as by the Minister and Assistant-Secretary of Legation. H.B.M.'s Vice-Consul at Osaka was, however, excluded from the audience, and had to remain outside in the cold. This may appear a trifling matter, but must have an effect upon the Japanese very injurious to the future influence of the Consul. I believe that under any circumstances a vice-consul ranks with a commander, and it is difficult to conceive why he should have to yield precedence to an admiral's secretary, but even were it otherwise it appears most imprudent to give the Japanese to understand that the representative of Great Britain in so important a city as Osaka is not of sufficiently high rank to have access to the Mikado. They can only conclude that with us, as well as with them, the trading classes occupy a very low position in the social scale. A somewhat similar mistake has been made in Kobé. The Governor of the district of Hiogo is a prince, and lest anything should come between the wind and his nobility our Consul, although he is graciously permitted to have audience with him upon extraordinary occasions, is instructed to communicate generally with Ito, a Vice-Governor or Commissioner, at Kobé. Any Japanese of whatever rank can address the Governor direct, but the representative of the majesty of Great Britain is virtually debarred from this honour, and must approach his High Mightiness through an inferior official. The inference to be drawn by the Japanese is plain.

"The foreign concession, or the 'Sand-Patch,' 'Swamp' or 'Desert,' as the residents affectionately term it, remains an incubus upon the hands of the officials and a monument harder than brass to the imaginary skill of those who planned and executed it. The Japanese, with a perseverance worthy of a better field of labour, continue to delve and level and make drains, but we no longer hear an early date fixed for the sale, and they are evidently beginning to despair of turning it to any account. They have now dug four large water courses, or rather small rivers, across it, which 'roll down their golden sands' on to the beach, and the tsuboes lost by these drains are in a fair way of being reclaimed from the sea, as sandbanks of noble proportions are rapidly forming at the outlet of each beyond the heap of stones called a sea wall. In fact the whole of the bay in this direction is rapidly shoaling, and a dangerous spit is daily extending itself from the west point of the Camber. This latter construction is entirely useless now after half ebb, and although the Japanese are constantly digging at the sand in a desultory manner, it is evident that nothing but a powerful dredge will ever keep it navigable for cargo boats. It is said that the whole of the settlement is to be raised five feet, but as this five feet will probably consist of more sand where too much already exists, the remedy is scarcely likely to succeed. We are curious to know what the upset price will be if, as was at first stated, the Government is to be reimbursed for the entire outlay. In the meantime foreigners have availed themselves to some extent of the permission to purchase land and houses in Kobé, and if fire insurance could be obtained they would be quite content to see the desert abandoned to its native inhabitants, the owl and the bat, &c.

"As our harbour becomes more frequented its great inferiority in every respect, as compared to that of Hiogo, cannot be overlooked. I am told by people who have taken pains to ascertain the fact for themselves, that when the water is breaking over the sea-wall here there is scarcely a ripple in Hiogo Bay. If the native trade here increases at all there will be great inconvenience for want of room, as even now the junks are unpleasantly close together in the best part of the anchorage. It is quite certain that the village of Kobé can never be the site of the important foreign settlement that will be required here by this time next year.

"There is nothing new or interesting fron Osaka. Two firms represent the resident foreign community, which is occasionally increased by visitors from Kobé. No word is heard as to the sale of the concession, which is now used as a people's park by the native population, who come in swarms to picnic under the trees and look at the foreigners. It is stated in the regulations for trade that a revision was to take place in six months. This time will expire at the end of June instant, but I do not hear of any steps being taken to have the port opened. If the Ministers or any one of them really wish to consult the merchants, they have now a capital opportunity, as it cannot be said that they would serve any private interests by so doing. Upon the action now taken will depend the future prosperity of foreign trade in Japan."

YOKOHAMA.

Advices from Yokohama by the English mail delivered to-day are to the 14th June. The London mails of the 10th and 18th April arrived out on the 31st May and 7th June respectively.

The Japan Times, in noticing the arrival of the new French Minister, Mons. Outrey, and noticing the approaching departure of Mons. Roche, states that though it has been their misfortune to differ with him on many important points of commercial policy, they have invariably given him credit for the same honesty of purpose which they trust they have shown themselves on the side opposed to him, and in leaving Yokohama he carries with him the respect, at least, of those—including the Japan Times—who have most vehemently attacked him. The above paper states: We have to report a state of political affairs rather calmer than at the date of our last; the ronins have for the time retired from the vicinity of Yedo, and the city, by last advices, was quiet enough. More than one fire has taken place there and at Kawasaki, midway between us and the capital; but fires, incendiary or accidental, are really such an ordinary feature of normal Japanese social life that they excite no more attention than accidents to omnibus horses in London. Ohara Sakino no Gijiu, who disappeared at the time when Arisugawa no Mia was reported to have been killed—a report, by the way, which has never been denied, though not officially confirmed,—has turned up again, and we now hear of his having applied to the American Minister for the Stonewall, offering whatever balance may be due on her. General Van Valkenburgh will probably receive his instruction by the next American mail; meanwhile he preserves a dignified neutrality, and the Stonewall remains gathering barnacles in our harbour.

The Japan Herald takes a less favourable view of political matters; it says the political horizon is gradually becoming more gloomy and overcast, and threatens again to spread dissension and bloodshed throughout the country. "Rumours still reach us of skirmishes and the concentration of forces in the vicinity of Yedo, in which Aidzu and his Northern allies have met with general success; our prediction as to the increasing want of confidence in the present Southern confederation was apparently not ill-founded, as is evinced by the steady growth of sympathy and proffers of assistance for those leaders of the Northern interest who, up in arms, refuse in their own names and in the name of the Tokugawa clan to submit to the arrogant and humiliating terms dictated to them by their ambitious rivals, Satsuma and Chosiu."

The Japan Times says: "We announced, a month ago, the imminent dismissal of Mr. Dohmen from the office of Municipal Director. This has lately occurred, and the post has been thrown open to a semi-public competition. The community of Yokohama are to vote for what candidates present themselves, and the three names at the head of the poll will then be submitted to the Board of Consuls, who will select one for recommendation to the Japanese Government for the appointment. Before our next report is published the election will be over, and we shall, probably, then take the opportunity of making a few remarks upon the subject. The contest for the situation, which is hardly worth having, pecuniarily, is confined to four candidates, Messrs. Boyle, Benson, Williamson and Seare. A fifth name, that of Mr. Wirgman, the editor of the Japan Punch, has been sent in, but we presume this to be only a joke. It is a singularly bad one."

Advices had been received from Hakodadi of the destruction by fire of the godowns belonging to Mr. Alex. P. Porter, with their entire contents. This sad event occurred on the 29th of April, the fire only ceasing after destroying the Russian Hotel (adjoining Mr. Porter's dwelling-house), the establishments of Lindsay and Co., Dent and Co., Wilkei and Co., the American Consulate, and a large number of native houses.

NAGASAKI.

The steamer Osaka, belonging to Messrs. Kroes and Co., which was expected at Shanghai from Nagasaki with the despatches for the present homeward mail, had not arrived, and a rumour was current that she had been seized by the British authorities, charged with the international crime of conveying Japanese troops to ports at which civil war is raging. We hope the report is not true. The Osaka was lying at Yokohama on the 13th instant, according to the Japan shipping lists.

The following is from Messrs. Alt and Co.'s Market Report, dated May 30th:—

Imports.—We are again obliged to advise a continuation of the stagnation in our piece goods market. Sales of cotton and woollen goods of all descriptions have been on the most limited scale. Native dealers have ample stocks on hand, and no money to make fresh purchases, even when goods are offered at tempting rates. A variety of goods were sold three days ago by public auction, comprising nearly 3,000 pieces of woollen and worsted manufactures. The only purchasers were foreigners, though the sale was attended by the principal native dealers, and the prices realised were such as must have left heavy losses to the importers. Quotations must be considered nominal. Lead is inquired for, and the market has been cleared at quotations. Tin and Tin Plates are not wanted, and stocks are small. For Nail Rod Iron there is but little inquiry.

Exports.—A good business has been done in Vegetable Wax during the past month, and prices have been well maintained, though supplies have come forward freely. The market for Gall Nuts has been cleared at advancing rates. In Tobacco no operations are reported, stocks are small, and there are no buyers at the moment. In Tea a few settlements of Old Leaf have been made, and small musters of New Crop have been shown, but the Tea is not expected down in bulk for three weeks' time. The crop is said to be large, but it is too soon to form an opinion on this subject.

Exchange.—We quote Bank paper on London at 4s. 5d. for six months' sight. On Shanghai, drafts at 10 days, 1 per cent. discount to par. On Hong Kong, no rate is quotable. The prices of Bous has risen rapidly, and may to-day be called 288 to 294 per 100 dols., but the market is very uncertain.

Freights.—To London, £4 per ton of 50 cubic feet. For Shanghai, 3 dols. 50c. to 4 dols. per ton of 40 cubic feet. To Hiogo, 4 dols. per ton.

CHINA.

TIENTSIN.

The following letter by H.B.M. Consul at Tientsin, on the subject of improved communication with the Chaitang coal mine, is not encouraging; but the permission to foreigners to work mines which is now looked forward to as certain must involve permission to make communications with them also. We have reason to believe, moreover, that the representations as to engineering difficulties and opposition by the inhabitants have a very slight foundation. How far the Feng-shuy may be opposed we know not; but the Chinese owners of the mines are most anxious for a road.

H. B. M. Consulate, Tientsin, 5th July, 1868.

Sir,—I regret much to inform you that the report made by the officers who were lately deputed by the Tong-li-yamen to examine into the practicability of constructing a good cart road, for the transport of coal from the Chaitang mines, is most decidedly unfavourable.

There is at present therefore no reasonable ground of hope that the Chinese Govenment will either make such a road or permit any private individuals to make it, and H.B.M. Minister is of opinion that no progress in the matter can be immediately looked for by any diplomatic action on the part of foreign Powers.

The road cannot be made, according to the report, first on account of engineering difficulties; secondly, because the local popular feeling is against it; and, thirdly, because its construction would injure the Feng-shui. It might be shown, perhaps, on the other hand, that the engineering difficulty is surmountable, and that the popular dislike is only partial; but the Feng-shui argument is unanswerable, and the third objection therefore is insuperable.

It is better then that you, and any others who are interested in the northern coal question, should recognise this fact, discouraging as it is, and give up all present hope of seeing the Imperial Government take any steps to improve the means of transit to Chaitang, either by road or rail.—Your obedient servant,

(Signed) J. Mongan, Consul.

J. Henderson, Esq., Tientsin.

SHANGHAI.

The London mail of 24th April arrived out on the 8th June, and telegrams to the 25th May. Dates are now down to the 20th June. The clippers Leander, Titania, Forward Ho, and Taitsing had sailed for London with new teas.

The following summary is from the North China Herald:—

The matters of local interest that we have to record are the trials for libel of the editors of three of the local newspapers. The editors of the Evening Express and Friend of China were charged, at the instance of Mr. Barnard, with publishing a series of silly libels against that gentleman. They were each found guilty, and sentenced, respectively, to pay 25 and 30 dollars fine, and the costs of the case. In the course of his speech at the preliminary investigation, Mr. Barnard denounced the defendants in rather emphatic language, which was duly reported in the columns of the Daily News. Mr. Tarrant, feeling aggrieved thereat, and alleging, moreover, that the case was unfairly reported, brought an action for libel against the editor of that paper; but the magistrate dismissed the application, holding that the report was privileged, and that the prosecutor had failed to show malice. Seven other libel cases are pending, in all of which the local newspapers are concerned; so the court and community are likely to have a surfeit of this branch of law.

An interesting letter has been received from Mr. T. T. Cooper, dated Ta-tsian-loo, on the extreme western border of China. His funds are exhausted, and he has had to borrow tls. 150 from a stranger who kindly aided him in Sze-chuen. We are glad to hear that H.B.M. Consul has refunded this sum out of the public money. Mr. Cooper has abandoned his intention of crossing to Sudya on the Brahmapootra, having neither sufficient instruments nor funds. He purposes trying to cross Thibet, into Nepaul; and if he fail, to work southward and enter Burmah by way of Tsantah and Bhamo.

The French exploring expedition from Cambodia arrived here per Plymouth Rock from Hankow.

The Spanish Minister and his suite are expected here at the beginning of next month from Peking. A man-of-war will await his Excelleney to take him across to Japan, there to conclude a treaty.

Pending the construction of our new Supreme Court buildings, various alterations have been made in the old Court room at the Consulate, which greatly improve the accommodation, both for the judges and officers of the Court, and for spectators. We speak comparatively, because there is still much to desire, especially in matter of space, that can only be expected in the new buildings; but in the meantime the change is greatly for the better.

The Formosa has brought up divers and a quantity of apparatus from Hong Kong, with which she has gone down to assist at the wreck of the Benares. Some damaged silk brought up from the wreck of the Benares by the Formosa was sold by public auction. The prices for 49 bales ranged from tls. 155 to tls. 310 per bale:—1 bale, tls. 100; 3 bales common, tls. 90; 13 bales waste silk, weighing about 2 to 300 lbs., tls. 100 per bale. In piece goods—20 pieces brought the lot tls. 230; 9 do., tls. 112.50; 38 pieces Ponjee, tls. 256.50.

The ballot for the committee of the Shanghai Rifle Club has resulted in the election of Messrs. Cameron, Harton, Milsom, Thorne, and Sibbald.

A meeting of shareholders in the Shanghai General Hospital has been held, at which it was shown that the revenue during eighteen months up to 31st December, 1867, had been tls. 30,018, against an expenditure of tls. 26,287. The excess of revenue had been mainly derived from the increased charge imposed during 1867 on second and third-class patients. A more satisfactory position of funds having been now attained, it was resolved to reduce the third-class scale again to 1 dol. 50c. During the year 479 patients were treated; the mortality was 11·9 per cent. A report by Drs. Coghill, Sibbald, and Galle recommends various changes in the constitution of the hospital—amongst others a reduction in the number of attendants, and the engagement of a house surgeon, who should also act as secretary.

At the meeting of the North-China branch of the Royal Asiatic Society, held on Tuesday last, the Rev. Dr. Jenkins, of the United States Consulate, read a translation of the Foh-ki or Memorials of Music, illustrative of the notion of the ancient Chinese respecting music. Dr. Macgowan made a communication on the Fogs of the Yangtsze and how to neutralise them. Mr. Kingsmill read portions of Mr. Cooper's Journal.

We hear that the following changes are likely to occur shortly in H.B.M.'s Consular service. Mr. Winchester goes home on leave, and Mr. Medhurst takes his place. Mr. Caine, from Swatow, succeeds the latter at Hankow, and Mr. Alabaster goes to Amoy. Mr. Markham relieves the latter at Chefoo, Chinkeang being handed over to the charge of a consular assistant. Mr. Lay, from Taku, succeeds Mr. Hughes at Kiukiang, the latter going home on leave.

We understand that the North German steamer China, which salved a quantity of silk and rendered general service to the P. and O. steamer Benares, has accepted 20,000 taels as full compensation.

Mr. F. Jenkins, son of the Rev. Mr. Jenkins, interpreter at the United States Consulate General, says the Friend of China, was examined by the United States Consul to-day, touching the part he took in that Corean expedition led by Captain Moller, of the Prussian steamer China, the other day. The inquiry resulted in his having to give bonds in 5,000 dols. to appear when called for, that being about the sum total of all his interest in the concern, we expect. Mr. Tettenborn does not intend to let Mr. Oppert off so easily, it is said.

KOREA.

Some attention has again been directed to Korea; the North-German steamer China and the U.S.S. Shenandoah have both returned from journeys thither. The doings of the former are not yet known fully, and have been the subject of some comment. During her trip she stopped at several points of interest along the coast. The people were found to be very friendly, and well-disposed towards foreigners, but were unable to trade in consequence of the objection of their officials. The general appearance of the country is reported to be very fine indeed. The Government, though paying tribute to China, as a matter of form, is still quite independent, and does not—at least through its agents, wish any foreign intercourse whatever. This fact was shown in a marked manner upon the occasion of a visit at one place, where the landing party had previously been well treated by the natives. While grouped under the walls of the city, and near one of its gates, and conversing through their interpreter with the inhabitants inside the city gate in a most friendly manner, the party, consisting of some twenty-five persons, were suddenly fired upon by a large military force armed with matchlocks, stationed behind the walls, and caused the death of two men, and the wounding of one. Leaving the dead under the walls, the visitors retreated precipitately to their boats still under fire from the city walls, but without sustaining further casualties. Before this rencontre the fate of the General Sherman's crew was learned from the officials, who stated that all on board were beheaded, and not burned alive, as had been previously reported. The schooner was said to be lying an unbroken wreck on the banks of the river where the massacre took place.

The Shenandoah found the people to be civil enough, unarmed, and curious to know, but reticent of any knowledge they possessed. They use the Chinese characters, and nearly all of them appear to be able to read and write. As surveying was one of the objects in coming here, the officers immediately set to work to measure their base line, and establish some triangulation points. At one point, a small island or patch of rocks abreast of a creek on the other side of the river, a boat's mast was put up and an old piece of bunting as a signal to work on, and a few moments after it was put up the natives took it down. It was seen from the ship, and during the mid-watch a light was observed to be kept burning there the whole time. In the morning the signal was up again, but over it was a white object, which a boat was sent to examine. It proved to be the following communication:—"Of what country are you? For what purpose come you here? On what month and what day did you start, and from what place did you come all the way here? Are you all well after your journey of 10,000 le through winds and waves? Is it your design to barter merchandise, or is it your design simply to take a view of the hills or rivers? Or do you rather wish to pass by to other places and return to your native land? All under the whole heaven are of one original nation. Clothes and hats are very different, and language is not the same, yet they can treat each other with mutual friendship. What your wish really is please make known, and do not conceal anything. A particular reply returned to this island will be very acceptable.—The region of the Yellow Sea. Local Magistrate of Au-You."

This document does not amount to much, but it was evidently written in a friendly spirit, and the captain answered in the same manner, but did not tell his object. The answer was tied to the staff on "Station Isd," which thenceforth became the post-office. Shortly after this was received a second paper, in which the "Local magistrate of Au-You" is suddenly transformed into the "Local magisturate of San Hwo." He asks many questions, and finally comes down to the pitch of his paper—the General Sherman. He admits that a foreign vessel came to this river a year ago, and says that she was received kindly by the people, "with presents of fruit, provisions, &c." He goes on to say that about this time "the men of the vessel became hateful." They refused to listen to the local magistrates, who advised them not to ascend the river, as there was nothing to be gained. The vessel pushed her way to the capital of the province. "Every day, riding on the tide." Then they captured and confined a mandarin high in authority, and destroyed several other vessels, killing and robbing broadcast. The capture of the mandarin exhausted the patience of the people, and "several tens of thousands of soldiers and people could not restrain their indignant rage." A "ruction" was the result of this coalition of soldiers and citizens, and attack was commenced by sending burning rafts against her. Her magazine was exploded, and every soul on board destroyed. "Up to this time," says the paper, "inquiry has failed to discover the nation of the man Tsay, or his vessel." It appears Tsay (whoever he was) called himself a Frenchman, and from the prominence of his name throughout the document, they thought he was the captain.

HONG KONG.

The London mail of 8th May arrived out on the 15th June, and the French mail of 18th May on the 24th June, with London telegrams to the 5th June.

A very serious mistake has it appears been committed by the gunboat Algerine in her late cruise. The Daily Press thus describes the affair:—

"A very painful discovery has been made in connection with the engagement the Algerine lately had, as described in the last report, with a fleet of Chinese junks, supposed to be pirates, down the west coast. One of these, it will be remembered, was captured and brought into Hong Kong. It was here ascertained after a while that the fleet had not been a pirate fleet at all, but had simply been composed of Canton trading junks on their way to Hainan, which had been sailing in company for their own protection. It must be understood that the trading junks are almost as much in fear of the Chinese Government gunboats as of the pirates. Latterly in particular, these revenue cruisers have been levying blackmail at sea, over and above the regular duty which the Chinese merchants have paid on their goods. Of course such proceedings were utterly illegal, but the victims had no remedy at their disposal. To resist the cruisers they had, it seems, determined to sail on this voyage strongly armed, and in company. Of course it is very painful to think that a British gunboat attacked them with round shot and grape, and slaughtered immense numbers of innocent persons. That the junks brought their misfortune on their own head, by pertinaciously refusing to show their papers, is but an imperfect consolation. The Algerine had a Chinese mandarin on board, by whose authority she attacked the junks, and whether he was misled by their character, or deliberately made use of the English gunboat as a tool with which to wreak vengeance on the native merchants who had succeeded in escaping from the Government 'squeeze,' is a question not easy to answer."

The sale of the Hong Kong Mint to the Japanese Government is announced for the sum of 70,000 dols.

THE GAMBLING ORDINANCE.

In our last number we gave the report of the Chamber of Commerce, and we are not surprised to receive by this mail the copy of a letter addressed by the Governor to the Secretary, from which we extract a portion. Such an undignified document signed by a governor we have never seen. The Chamber may have committed some indiscretion in the matter, but under no circumstances can any governor be justified in writing such an insulting and sarcastic despatch, and we cannot understand how Mr. Austin, the Colonial Secretary, could affix his name to it.

The following paragraphs will show the style of the document.

"Of the thirteen gentlemen out of thirty-seven who attended the meeting there was a majority in favour of expressing an immediate opinion, and this haste led to the adoption of the extraordinary resolution that a measure which had almost broken up the illegal gaming haunts of the criminal population had 'injuriously affected the trade of the colony.'

"One gentleman indeed asserted that "trade to his knowledge had fallen off 25 per cent. among the small traders, who had no doubt given up their business because they thought they could make an easier living at gambling!" The same gentleman, who, it may be remarked, was not even accurate in the facts which he could have ascertained, and who over-estimated the amount of the annual licence-fee paid to Government by nearly 100,000 dollars, argued as follows:—'The 7 per cent. (on the profit to the licencees) must be made from all bets out of which the 250,000 dollars (?) paid to the Government was supposed to come, and he would like to inquire what amount of gambling capital must be involved in the affair in order to produce a profit to the farmer. Mr. Taylor had suggested a total profit of 500,000 dollars (!), and this at 7 per cent. would produce over 7,000,000 of capital," &c.

"It is to be hoped that the mercantile business of the eminent firms represented by some gentlemen at the meeting is not always conducted on a system which has no better foundation than the above argument.

"Nothing, however, appeared too unlikely, or was actually too inconsistent with fact, for the indulgent humour of the Chamber on that occasion. Thus, Mr. Taylor, the originator of the meeting, and a gentleman for whose singleness of purpose and upright motives his Excellency has the highest respect, appears to have been so amiably credulous as to inform the meeting that 'when the Governor first came to the colony he had put down gambling for about two weeks without himself knowing it. He had sent round officers to say he would not allow gambling in any form, but the Chinese after waiting for a fortnight saw no proclamation on the subject and heard nothing further; they consequently concluded that they were the words of a man who did not mean what he said,' &c.

"It seems almost incredible that any grown up person could have believed that the Chinese secret gaming haunts, which had for years been kept in full operation despite of the police and the laws, should suddenly have been closed at a rumour that the Governor intended to issue a "Brutum fulmen" in the shape of a proclamation requesting obedience to laws which had been for years openly defied, notwithstanding the heavy penalties for their infringement. It is due to the Chinese, whose sagacity is impugned, to say that there never was any foundation whatever for such an inference."

In the letter alluded to, the Governor appears to admit that the receipts from the gambling licenses will be, by permission of the Home Government, appropriated to police purposes.

THE "ALGERINE" AMONG THE PIRATES.

The following account of the raid on pirates made by the gun boat Algerine, taken from the Daily Press, was unfortunately shut out of our last issue:—

On the 27th of May H. M. gunboat Algerine, having received on board a mandarin from Kowloon, left this port for the neighbourhood of Mirs Bay. The original intention when the gunboat first started was to endeavour to capture a junk or snake boat, which had committed a piracy just outside the harbour, and with this view Mr. Deane, acting superintendent of police, and Inspector Daly were taken on board on leaving, to give any additional information they could with reference to the pirates. The two above-mentioned officials were put ashore at Stanley Bay; the gunboat immediately proceeded to Mirs Bay, where she arrived on the evening of the same day (27th). The first search was made in the district of Namho, but the scoundrels could not be found; however, the mandarin of Namho gave information of another piratical craft, and on the strength of the news was taken on board. The gunboat then coasted down the east side of the bay to Taiwan, where a suspicious looking junk was found at anchor. The pirate, as she proved to be, was empty, the men having taken everything out and bolted on the approach of the man-of-war. The crew of the Algerine endeavoured to pursue the junk men up the hills, but to catch the nimble scamps was a matter of difficulty, so the chase was soon abandoned. The pirate craft, although small, was taken to Namho, and there burnt to the water's edge, the mandarin of Namho at the same time being put ashore.

On the 28th May during the forenoon a cruise round the bay was taken without any result, so in the afternoon the gunboat made for Harlaein Bay, arriving during the evening, and anchoring for the night. On the morning of the 29th the Algerine went round Harlein Bay, and thence to Bias Bay, but seeing nothing the gunboat's head was put up for Ty-pong Bay, were the anchor was dropped for the night. Started for Stanley Bay on the following morning, and on arrival there communicated with the commodore. On the 31st May the trip to the Westward was commenced, a preliminary cruise round the islands adjacent to Hong Kong being first made, after which the gunboat bore up for Macao, anchoring there for the night. After a stoppage at Macao of one day, the Algerine left for the Westward on the 2nd instant, and arriving at Namoa the same evening, remained there for the night.

On the 3rd June, the day on which the fight took place, the Algerine left Namoa at 7.30 A.M., and proceeded to cruise round the harbour of Mongchows. Seeing, however, that there were no junks in the vicinity of the island they left for the eastward, and at 12.30 P.M., when about between Hawchean and St. John's Islands, fell in with a fleet of ten junks, of from 200 tons to 350 tons, all heavily armed, the largest carrying twelve guns and the remainder nine guns. The commander of the Algerine and also the mandarin, having strong suspicions as to the character of the junks, the gunboat was run within hailing distance, when the mandarin called to them, asking them where they were from and where bound to. The reply was that "they were from Macao to Hainan." The mandarin then called to one of the junks to send her papers on board the Algerine for examination; to this demand, however, no attention was paid. The request was several times repeated, but without effect, so at last Commander Domville thought it high time to bring the gentlemen to their senses. A shot was accordingly fired across the bows of one of the large junks, as a firm intimation of the gunboat's intention of having her requests complied with, at the same time the Algerine being brought round with the intention of keeping in close company with the junks. Immediately it was perceived that the Algerine intended to follow the pirates, six of them then brought their broadsides to bear, and opened a smart and rapid, but ill-directed fire on the gunboat, thus commencing hostilities. The Algerine was at this time about 800 or 900 yards from the junks, and on perceiving that fighting was meant, returned the fire of the junks with good effect. This continued for about an hour and a half, the pirates all the time running through the water with a fresh breeze, the gunboat keeping up under steam. The junks fought remarkably well, signalizing each other with flags, and evidently having some organisation amongst themselves. During the hour and a half mentioned the gunboat kept about the same distance, viz., 900 yards, occasionally throwing a shell, which must now and then have done considerable execution, if the yells and shouts from one or other of the junks could be taken as a criterion.

About three P.M. one of the bolts in the gunboat's side, to which the breeching of the large gun was shackled, drew, thereby causing the gun to be dismounted from the slide and put out of action. This accident left the Algerine with only one 24-pounder gun to fight the junks, with thirty or forty. When, by dint of great exertion, the big gun was again got into working order a large junk, which had separated herself from the fleet, was singled out and chased, the others temporarily escaping. On boarding this junk it could not be proved that she was one of the six who had first opened fire, but as her guns were all loaded and supplies of ammunition placed on deck, her captain was taken out and put on board the gunboat, and all the guns thrown overboard. This having been done, the pursuit after the other junks was then recommenced, and they were overhauled at about seven in the evening, at which time it was discovered that an additional four junks had joined the fleet, thus bringing the total number to twelve. Four of the largest and heaviest armed pirates at this time fell behind towards the gunboat, as if with the intention of covering the retreat of the other eight, who were making the most of the fair wind. On the Algerine coming up with the hindermost junk, which was one of the largest, the captain was again asked, in the most pacific manner, to send his papers on board the gunboat, and also to lower his sails. To this request the scoundrel replied that "if the Algerine came any closer he would fire with all his guns." On Capt. Domville receiving this reply he sent a rattling shower of grape into the fellow, which immediately brought forth terrific yells and howlings, thereby leading those on board the junks to believe that the grape shot had fulfilled its errand. This discharge from the gunboat was delivered at about eighty to a hundred yards, and was returned by the junk with spirit. The Algerine then proceeded along the whole line of junks at full speed, sending a broadside into every one as she passed, which was gamely returned by the pirates, whose firing however was ill-directed, and generally fell ahead or among the fore-rigging, which was much cut up. On the Algerine reaching the end of the line of junks she turned round, and, passing at full speed, got to the last junk again, when she turned about, and twice repeated the manœuvre of giving each pirate a dose of shell and grape in turn.

During all this time the junks were heading towards the land, and at 8.30 P.M., the water beginning to shoal rapidly, the Algerine gave a parting round and left them. One of the junks, unfortunately for herself, did not run for the land, but made the best way she could with a fair wind, which on being perceived on board the gunboat, chase was immediately given. Overhauled this pirate about 9.30 P.M., and having fetched her to, with but slight resistance she was boarded, found to be armed with nine guns, viz., two 24-pounders, two 12-pounders, four 8-pounders, and one bow-gun of about from 18 to 24-pounder, which pieces of ordinance were all of British make, being marked B. P. & Co., 1862, all in good condition, and ready loaded, at the same time supplies of shot and powder being at the foot of each gun. There was also from thirty to forty gingals on board, but no muskets, there being, however, about forty good spears or boarding pikes on board. There were about two tons of powder on board, and an ample supply of shot, some of which was of curious make, consisting of bags containing from eighteen to twenty slugs of iron, each weighing somewhere about three ounces. The twenty-five men found on board the junk were taken as prisoners to the gunboat, the late piratical craft being taken in tow to Namoa, where the gunboat and her prize arrived on the morning of the 4th instant, and left for Hong Kong the same evening, arriving at about midnight the following day.

The result of this affair is most satisfactory, as the Algerine had to fight against great odds, and was therefore fully occupied in firing into the pirates without thinking of capturing any of them. The captured pirate has on board a valuable cargo, a good deal of which is opium, but the actual value of the contents cannot be ascertained until an examination has taken place, although it is variously estimated at from 8,000 dols. to 10,000 dols. Two of the crew of the junk are rather badly wounded, apparently by shells, one man's hand being smashed, and the other having a severe facial wound, the nose being cut nearly off the face. None of the crew of the Algerine were injured in any way, owing to the wild way in which the pirates fired, although there is every reason to believe that they were all old hands, from the systematic style in which they stuck together during the fight. The gunboat was several times struck in the hull by spent balls, the rigging suffering most from the fire, in fact, the narrowest escape during the action was when a large shot passed through the wind sail about two feet above the heads of Commander Domville and Nav.-Lieut. Quinn, who were both standing on the bridge at the time.

BORNEO.

LABUAN.

A correspondent at Labuan, writing under date June 10, says:—"We are really so pleased with the flourishing state of this small but apparently promising colony, that I think it but right that the doings at Labuan should be known. . . You will, no doubt, be pleased to hear that our worthy and excellent Governor still pursues the same energetic policy with which he inaugurated his Government, and greatly to the benefit and prosperity of this little colony.

"Everything has received an immense stimulus; those who had before despaired of the colony are now quite sanguine that under our present Governor it will become a flourishing centre of trade, though, perhaps, it will never be so important a centre as Singapore, owing to its not being so favourably situated. At present we are unable to predict anything, but all must agree that Borneo is a large island, and it must be allowed that its riches are immense, and if so, what is there to hinder this colony from becoming a grand centre? The native traders about Borneo and the Sooloo Islands will in a very short time (they are now commencing it) bring all their produce to this colony, where they are sure of British protection; this fact has been told to me by a great many of them.

"A short time ago where the present Chinese traders reside there was not a single brick building, whereas now there are no less than a dozen; this in itself is a proof of the prosperity of the colony. We have now a very neat little fish-market (just finished), which stands in the sea about fifty yards from the beach, and which is a great improvement. One may now take a walk in this part of the island in the morning without inhaling the effluvia of fish.

"Rumours are now prevalent that Governor Hennessy will soon be transferred to another and much more important colony; and certainly he well deserves such promotion, for the great improvements he has already made in his present little Government during the short time he has been in power here. Though we all wish him well, yet we think it would be a great pity, I may call it a calamity, to lose him just now, as he has not had time to set everything on a sound and sure footing."

THE COAL MINES.

The news which we recently published about the Oriental Coal Company has been fully verified. The manager, Mr. Alexander Lumsden, is now at work with his new staff, and he reports favourably on the condition and capacity of the colliery. When he was passing through Singapore he received information that the creditors of the old company had obtained judgments against the property in the island, and he appeared to be very uneasy as to the consequences; for, under the former law of Labuan, the compulsory execution and sale should take place ten days after final judgment. However, on reaching the colony he found that Governor Pope Hennessy had taken steps to save the property and protect the interests of all the creditors by amending the powers of the local court, and enabling the judges to extend, at their discretion, the time of compulsory sale from ten days to six months. Acting upon the provisions of this new ordinance, the Governor refused to allow the property to be put into the hands of the bailiff, and he deferred the execution to a distant day. The delay which has been thus obtained was most fortunate, for it not only kept the colliery going till Mr. Lumsden's arrival, but it has enabled him to obtain possession without difficulty and to make satisfactory arrangements with all parties. It has also had the happy effect of inducing the directors of the old company to send out funds sufficient to pay all just claims in the colony. We have some reason to know that the whole of the purchase money obtained by the sale in London, amounting to £7,500, will reach Labuan in a very short time, so that the local creditors, instead of dividing the few hundred pounds which a reckless sale of the plant in Labuan would alone fetch, will now be paid in full.

The new manager, we are happy to learn, was informed by the Governor that the only interference he may expect from his Excellency is a careful inspection and enquiry as to the quality of the coal shipped from the colony. No doubt Governor Pope Hennessy must have heard how the quality of Labuan coal has been depreciated in the market by the disgraceful state in which it has been so often shipped; and if he exercises a proper supervision in this respect, so as to have good sized coal, thoroughly clean, and from the best seams, sent into market, he will still further increase the usefulness and popularity of his administration.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

—o—

SINGAPORE.

Advices from this port are to the 4th July, on which day both the English and French steamers started. The outward mail of May 22nd was delivered on the 23rd June (one day before its time). The latest London telegrams received were to the 15th June (via Calcutta). The Straits Times' summary of news is as follows:—

"The fortnight has been one of average interest, politically and socially, in our little community.

"The Legislative Council has held two sittings, one on the 22nd and one on the 30th June. At the first the Contagious Diseases Ordinance was read a third time and passed, with a protest by the Hon. Dr. Little, supported by the Hon. T. Scott. At the second sitting the Gunpowder Ordinance was passed, and these two Bills represent the legislative labours of the fortnight. The Ordinances regarding Pilot Licenses and Passenger ships have been postponed for further consideration. An influential deputation waited on his Excellency on the 30th ultimo, and deprecated any interference with existing customs in regard to pilots.

"A great public meeting was held in the Town-hall, on Monday, the 22nd June, in support of the protest of the non-official members of the Council against the Supreme Court Ordinance, in so far as it does not provide for the entire independence of the judges of our courts of the Executive. A petition signed by nearly all the residents and by the principal Chinese merchants goes home by this mail to the Duke of Buckingham and Chandos, praying that our judges shall be in future, as they have been heretofore, absolutely independent of all local interference.

"The Perseus, with the Peiho, started with Captain Playfair, our Colonial Secretary, on board, on the 30th ultimo, for Acheen, via Penang, to make inquiries of the Rajah there regarding the atrocities committed on board the brig Mydin Bux a year or a year and a half ago off the Acheen coast. Although somewhat late in the day, this is the right and proper thing to do.

"The steamer Achilles, which left Hong Kong on the 18th June, passed through here on the 2nd instant, en route homewards via Penang, with 2,600 tons of tea on board.

"The Hon. W. W. Cairns, Lieut. Governor of Malacca, goes home by this mail on leave. The hon. gentleman's term of office has been too short to call for any comments either in praise or censure."

Commenting on the absence on leave of the Lieutenant-Governor of Malacca, the Straits Times says:—"It is said that Captain Ord, Magistrate of Police at Malacca, is to be the Acting Lieutenant-Governor of Malacca during the absence of the Hon. W. W. Cairns in England. The promotion is sudden, considering the gallant captain's previous gubernatorial non-experience, and more especially his display of legal knowledge as Commissioner of the Court of Requests here. But a governor's brother is not to be treated like any common hard-working experienced official who is glad of anything he can get. A correspondent foreshadowed the above notable appointment, and we must suppose that his further prophecy, that Mr. Cairns will not return from England, and that Captain Ord's appointment is not to be temporary, but permanent, will turn out true also. If so, we can only say that it will be perpetrating, not only a piece of jobbery, but committing a most cruel act of injustice to older and more competent and experienced officials. Who is to succeed Captain Ord as Police Magistrate and Commissioner of the Court of Requests has not transpired. Mr. Braddell, the Attorney-General, we understand, is performing the duties of Colonial Secretary during the temporary absence of Captain Playfair."

THE MEETING.

The public meeting regarding the Supreme Court above alluded to was held on the 22nd June; A. T. Carmichael, Esq., in the chair. It was attended by a large number of the most influential residents, many of whom made excellent speeches, but the proceedings were too lengthy for us to reproduce in full. We give, however, the principal resolutions, five in number, which were unanimously agreed to:—

1. "That the people of this settlement have long enjoyed, in common with their fellow-subjects in the United Kingdom and India, the great advantage of having the Judge of the Supreme Court independent of the control and interference of the Executive Government, and the meeting desires to record their strong sense of that advantage."

2. "That the meeting views with concern and alarm the constitutional power passed by the Governor of suspending any judge of the Supreme Court, and considers the existence of such a power as most injurious to the administration of justice."

3.—"That the Ordinance constituting a Supreme Court of Judicature is incomplete in so far as no provision is made therein to secure the independence of the Judges from interference on the part of the Local Executive."

4.—"That a Petition of the inhabitants of Singapore embodying the Resolutions just carried be forwarded to the Secretary of State for the Colonies through his Excellency the Governor;" and

5.—"That a Committee, consisting of Messrs. Carmichael, Atchison, and Adamson, be appointed to draw up the said Petition."

The Chairman, in his concluding remarks, said, "In adopting the proposed course it is, gentlemen, clearly to be understood that we do so through no hostile feeling to his Excellency the Governor, or any other member of the Local Government, but from the solemn conviction that this is a question in which the welfare of the settlement is deeply at stake, and as such I think we need not fear but that our petition will receive from the Secretary of State for the Colonies the attention which the matter seems to demand."

PENANG.

It would appear that the feud between the Lieutenant-Governor of Penang and the residents still exists, although the bitterness of feeling at first manifested would appear to be toning down. The two papers of the island are full of letters on the subject. The Gazette takes Colonel Anson's part, and maintains him to be perfectly correct and immaculate in all he has done. The Argus would appear to be neutral on the questions in dispute. Some further correspondence has taken place between the chairman of the meeting and the Lieutenant-Governor. The Singapore Daily Times says:—"Colonel Anson was laconic and vague enough in his first reply, and his second is not much more perspicuous or to the point, but apparently he desires to withdraw from an untenable position. We can hardly imagine he can be so singularly ungracious and selfish as to wish to confine to himself the use of the hill, knowing as he must its importance to the life and health of the inhabitants. Let us hope, therefore, that we have heard the last of the controversy—that the hill will be open as heretofore, and the esplanade put in its normal state."

Commercial Report.

CHINA AND JAPAN IMPORTS.

Yokohama.—The only feature of the import market worth notice during the fortnight was the demand for Cotton Yarn, which had been large, both legitimate and speculative, for immediate delivery and "to arrive." Prices had risen from $5 to $7, and considerable business had been done. The excitement was over, however, and the market closed very weak. All other goods, Cotton and Woollen, were alike without inquiry, and quotations for them were nominal. Only 650 pieces of Grey Shirtings had been delivered during the fortnight. Stocks of all kinds were heavy, having been increased by the arrivals of the Parmenio from London, and the Sophie et Helene from Bordeaux. Three or four other ships were also due. China Sugars had been lately imported again and forced upon the market; a decline in price was the consequence. Arms continued in good demand. The following were the current quotations:—Cotton Yarn—Nos. 16 to 24, $48.0 to 50.0 per picul; Nos. 28 to 32, $51.0 to 54.0; Nos. 38 to 42, $50.0 to 52.0.—Grey Shirtings: 7 lbs., $2.30 to 2.35 per piece; 8.4 lbs., $2.85 to 2.95; 8.6 to 8.8 lbs., $2.80 to 2.90. White Shirtings: 56 to 60 reed, $3.10 to 3.20 per piece; 64 to 72, $3.50 to 3.70; 68 to 72, $3.70 to 4.10; T-Cloths, 6 to 7 lbs., $1.90 to 2.0 per piece; 7, $2.10 to 2.30; Turkey Red Cloth, 24 yards, $2.80 to 3.10; Spotted Shirtings, White, $3.25 to 3.50; Dyed, $3.40 to 3.60; Brocades, White, $3.25 to 3.50; Dyed, $3.40 to 3.60; Velvets, Black, $9.25 to 9.75; Assorted, $8.0 to 9.0. Long Ells, $8.0 to 9.50; Lastings, $13.0 to 16.0; Lustres, $4.0 to 5.50; Blankets, $0.55 to 0.60; Iron, Nail-rod, $3.0 to 3.50; Lead, $7.0 to 7.75; Tin, $17.0 to 18.0; Tin Plates, $8.0 to 8.50.

Shanghai.—Cottons: The market had been very quiet, and the bulk of the transactions in Grey Shirtings had been re-sales on the part of needy Chinese holders. The absence of any active demand, on account of the Tientsin dealers, had been the chief cause of the prevailing dulness, and this had been further increased by the arrivals of six ships and one steamer from England with cargoes of manufactured goods. White Shirtings had been in most limited demand at lower prices. T-Cloths of best makes have been in good request, and quotations for such were slightly higher. Drills had met with a good inquiry. Most descriptions of fancy cottons had been quite neglected. Woollens: Spanish Stripes, Medium, Broad, and Habit Cloths, had continued neglected. Camlets had experienced more inquiry at about last mail's figures. Long Ells, both scarlet and assorted, had been in limited demand. Lastings, with the exception of black, had been dull of sale. Figured Orleans had not been wanted. Metals: Of Iron, Nail Rod had continued in good request, other kinds being comparatively neglected. Lead had further advanced in value, and stocks were confined to a small compass. Tin Plates had been in small inquiry. Steel had been asked for at the quotations. Coals: The demand had been less active, and prices were declining. Sales of Cardiff, "to arrive," had been at Tls. 10.5. per ton. In average English nothing had been done, the quotation, nominal, being Tls. 10 per ton. For American, there had been some inquiry at Tls. 13 to 13.5. Australian Coals had been very dull of sale, at Tls. 10.7.5 for Sydneys, and Tls. 9.7.5 to 9.8 for Newcastle. Japan, best, Tls. 7.5, but inferior cargoes sold at Tls. 5.2.5 to 5.5.5. Formosa, Tls. 7 to 7.5. The arrivals have been: 540 tons from Great Britain, 350 tons from America, 2,006 tons from Australia, 470 tons for Japan, and 1,331 tons from Formosa; in all, 4,697 tons, of which 1,319 tons were to order. The quotations at date of mail's departure were as follows:—Cotton Piece Goods: G. E. Grey Shirtings, 38½ yards 39 in. 7 lbs. per piece, Tls. 1.8.6 to 1.9.2; 8¼ to 8½lbs., Tls. 2.2.4 to 2.2.8; 9 to 9¾ Tls. 2.7.5 to 3.2.5; G. E. Hankow.—The inquiry had been chiefly confined to cotton goods. Grey shirtings had found buyers to a considerable extent, at an advance of about 5 candareens per piece on previous quotations, latest prices being Tls. 2.2.7 to 2.3.2 per piece for 8¼ lbs. cloth, and Tls. 1.9.2 to 1.9.5 for 7 lbs. The inquiry for fine White Shirtings, noticed in last report, had ceased, and few sales had been effected. T-Cloths, of 7 lbs. weight, had attracted attention at last mail's figures. Drills had improved in position, and prices were firmer. Fancy Cottons showed no improvement. Of Camlets, a few favourite colours have been asked for, but general assortments have been difficult of sale. Lastings had been dull of sale. In Long Ells a further improvement had taken place in Scarlet, HH quality being worth by last accounts Tls. 7.0.0 per piece. Spanish Stripes and Medium Cloths had met with no attention. Figured Orleans had not been wanted.

Foochow.—The only transactions in imported goods since the previous mail had been:—1,000 pieces, 8¼lbs. Grey Shirtings, at $3.40 to $3.50 per piece; 300 pieces, 7lbs. T-Cloths, at $2.80 per piece; 1,000 piculs Lead, at $11 to $11.50 per picul.

HONG KONG.—The amount of business transacted during the fortnight had been very limited, owing chiefly to the scarcity of money. The following is from Messrs. Olyphant and Co.'s Circular, dated 25th June:—Cotton Yarn has been in moderate request at former values, and the market closes steady but somewhat more quiet. Piece Goods: Only a very moderate business has been done, and 30 yard English Drills, finest 7 lbs. T-Cloth, and Turkey Reds are the only descriptions that have not suffered a decline. Grey Shirtings are very dull, and 8.4 lbs. are 10 cents lower. T-Cloths, with the above exception, are down 5 cents. 40 yard Drills—both English and American—are again lower. Sales of American have been made at $5.25, one month's credit. Woollens: The market continued very firm, though quiet, until within the past few days, when some holders, apparently anxious to realise so as to take advantage of the advance in exchange to remit, made some slight concessions, and buyers are now unwilling to purchase except at a decided decline for all kinds, excepting Crape Lastings, which are scarce and firm. The majority of holders, however, refuse to make any concessions, and we shall probably again see an upward tendency in values ere long. Metals: Nail-rod Iron is unchanged, Wire steady, and Tin Plates a trifle dearer, but all other descriptions are lower. Coal: Arrivals have been very large, amounting to 8,835 tons Welsh, 4,790 ditto English, 1,735 ditto Sydney, and 1,700 ditto Anthracite—all to consumers, by whom they have been landed and stored. The only sales have been 700 tons Sidney at $11 and 220 ditto Anthracite at $13 per ton ex ship. We quote all kinds lower, especially Anthracite, respecting which advices from Shanghai are not so favourable.

CHINA AND JAPAN EXPORTS.

TEA.

YOKOHAMA.—Arrivals had come forward rather more freely and amounted to about 2,200 piculs, 1,000 piculs of which consisted of new leaf. Settlements were on a par with those of the previous fortnight, and were estimated at about 1,000 piculs, including about 400 piculs of new, which had been settled at prices as quoted. Stocks were somewhat increased, and prices were unchanged, but showed a slight weakness at the close of the market for this mail. The Scawfell sailed on the 6th June for New York with 453,933 lbs., of which about 10,000 lbs. were of the new crop. The current quotations were:—Common, $18 to 22 per picul; Good Common, $22 to 24; Medium, $24 to 26; Good Medium, $27 to 30; Fine, $31 to 32; Finest, $33 to 35; Choice, $36 to 45.

SHANGHAI.—Black.—Owing to the excited state of the Hankow market, and the prices which purchasers there had paid, but few Teas had been offering for sale at this port, holders preferring to secure the good profits which Hankow rates afford to the risk of shipping thence. Settlements consequently had been very limited, and consisted of Kiukiang Tea, with the exception of 2 chops Oanfa, which had realised a profit of about Tls. 2½ over the prices paid for them in Hankow at the opening of the season. The demand appeared to have run chiefly on moderate cost Tea, and prices of these were relatively high. A settlement of Hohow reported at Tls. 28 was of inferior quality to similar class purchased in July last year as low as Tls. 19. The export shows a falling off from that of last year, but by next mail figures for this season will probably show some excess. Settlements on the market, 8 chops, 4,090 chests; re-shipments on owners' account, 82 chops, 46,136 chests; stock, 32,000 chests. The following are the prices that have been paid:—Hohows, Tls. 28 to 34; Oonahms, Tls. 39; Oopacks, Tls. 39. Green.—The new Pingsueys had begun to come in freely from Ningpo during the fortnight, and had been eagerly bought on arrival. Prices were about the same as last year, the later settlements costing nearly 3d. per lb. above home rates. The Teas were good in water, but the make and proportion was somewhat inferior to last season. The bulk of the Teas, especially of the country-packed, was, however, not to hand. Settlements for the fortnight, 12,000 half-chests. Stocks, 8 chops, or 7,000 half-chests. The quotations, duty paid at exchange, 6s. 3d. per tael, and freight £4. 10s., were as follows:—Pingsuey Gunpowder, 1s. 6d. to 3s. 8d.; Pingsuey Imperial, 1s. 3d. to 2s. 6d.; Pingsuey Young Hyson, 1s. 2d. to 2s. 10d.; Pingsuey Twankay, 10d. to 1s. 3d.

HANKOW.—Business was proceeding briskly, 75,000 chests having been bought since the 1st of June, at rapidly advancing rates. In most instances the chops were settled as soon as the musters were shown, and so greatly were the Oanfas in favour that second chops were being paid as high for as first chops. The crop generally was maintaining its reputation for quality, the Oopacks from Sung-yong redeeming the deficiency in the Young-low-tungs. Quotations exhibited an average advance of about 2 taels. Two ships had sailed, leaving three (including the Agamemnon steamer) on the berth. The North China Herald says:—A more extensive acquaintance with the teas leads to the opinion that the crop is quite up to an average, and generally is not deficient in the important qualification of strength. The Oopacks from Yang-low-toong are inferior, but from Suun-yang are superior in every respect to last year's crop. The Oonams throughout compare most favourably with those of the previous season. The settlements since last mail have been 130 chops, 74,907 chests, contracts 15 chops, 11,855 chests, making a total of 86,762 chests. The closing quotations at exchange 6s. 2⅛d., and freights £4. 10s. were:—Oopacks and Cheong-sou-kias—Finest, 2s. 3½d. to 2s. 7¼d. per lb.; Medium to Fine, 2s. 0¼d. to 2s. 3¼d. Oonams—Fair Medium to Fine, 1s. 7½d. to 2s. 2d. Oanfas—Fine to Finest, 2s. 1d. to 2s. 3¼d.

KUIKIANG.—The market for new Congous was opened on the 6th June by the settlement of two chops fine Ningchows, and buying had been continued at those figures; purchases, up to the time of mail closing, amounting to about 4,800 chests, leaving about 9,500 packages in stock, but hardly any chops of really fine. The quality of the Ningchows was fully up to the average.

FOOCHOW.—Messrs. Odell and Co. report as follows under date 19th June:—We have to report a very large business, though settlements show a considerable falling off as compared with those for the previous fortnight. Congou.—In the early part of the interval which has elapsed, buyers for the English market operated very freely, but since the arrival of the mail steamer transactions for that quarter have been on a much more limited scale, and sales of medium flavory to finest Kaisows have been made at a reduction of Tls. 1 to 3 on previous quotations. The whole of the first crop Teas have come to hand, and there are only about 1,000 chests fine Kaisow remaining in stock—finest kinds are exhausted. Australian buyers have bought largely, and in consequence rates for low common to common flavory kinds have been maintained. Dust and broken leaf kinds are in large supply. The second crop is now commencing to arrive, but it is as yet too early to speak as to its quality or probable quantity. Souchongs.—Arrivals have been large, but with the exception of a few chops the quality is considered to be very inferior. The market was opened at Tls. 46.3 ship off for finest; there are however but few buyers, and the teamen are now anxious sellers at reduced rates. Oolongs: American buyers have not yet entered the market, and only a few settlements have been made for England. Scented Teas: Transactions have been to a moderate extent at prices tending in favour of buyers. Flowery Pekoes: Arrivals continue very limited, and in consequence settlements are small, though at full rates. Our quotations are:—Dust to broken leaf, Tls. 9.8 to 12.8 per picul ship off; low ordinary to good common, Tls. 14.8 to 22.8 per picul ship off; common to good flavoury, Tls. 23.8 to 29.8 per picul; fine to finest Kaisow, Tls. 30.8 to 42.8 per picul ship off. Settlements for the fortnight have been: Congous, 97,649 chests; Souchong, 2,853 chests; Oolong, 4,608 ½-chests; Scented tea, 13,574 boxes; Flowery Pekoe, 310 chests.

CANTON.—The busines of the fortnight was comprised in the undernoted small settlements, the trifling totals of which were due partly to buyers having been busy shipping their late purchases, but principally to the rise in both exchange and freight. The teamen still held Scented Capers for very extreme prices, but Scented Orange Pekoes had been sold at a reduction of from 2 to 3 tls. on previous rates. The selection of both descriptions on offer was very poor, and the Teas were much mixed with old and spurious leaf. The few parcels of district Congous remaining in teamen's hands were of most undesirable quality, and we have not heard that any chops of either country Congous or Green Teas were expected to arrive. The following settlements had been made:—Canton District Congous, 1,000 boxes at Tls. 23 to 28; Scented Orange Pekoe, 8,800 boxes at Tls. 19 to 34; Scented Caper, 6,500 boxes at Tls. 23 to 32½; Imperial, 1,000 boxes at Tls. 23 to 25.

SILK.

YOKOHAMA.—There had been some activity in the market during the fortnight. Supplies, however, had been on the smallest possible scale, and the old stock had nearly all been bought up, at very full prices; an advance in some cases of $25 having been paid for common hanks. A few parcels of good Sodai had been bought at $760 to $780 per picul. The weather continued favourable for the new crop, and small parcels of new Silk were expected down by the end of June; but arrivals in any quantity could not be looked for till some weeks later. The quotations (at exchange 4s. 6½d. laid down in London all charges included) were as follows:—Hanks, Mybash, Sinchu, &c., 1, 2 nom., 36s. 6d. to 38s. 7d.; ditto 1, 2, 3, 34s. 7d. to 36s. 8d.; ditto 2, 3, 4, 30s. 8d. to 33s. 7d.; ditto inferior, 26s. 10d. to 29s. 2d.; Oshu best, 33s. 9d. to 36s. 10d.; ditto medium, 29s. 9d. to 31s. 8d.; ditto inferior, 26s. 1d. to 28s.; Coshu, 1, 2, ditto medium, 28s. 9d. to 30s. 8d.; ditto inferior, 24s. 11d. to 27s. 10d.; Sodai, 1, 2, 30s. 8d. to 32s. 8d.; ditto inferior, 24s. 11s. to 26s. 10d.; Etchesen best nom., 28s. to 29s. 7d.; ditto 2, 24s. 11d. to 26s. 10d.; ditto inferior, 22s. to 24s. 11d.

SHANGHAI.—Mr. Holdsworth's Circular, dated 18th June, is as follows:—The latest advices received from England since the date of my last Silk Circular are by letters to the 24th April, and by telegrams via Kiachta to the 25th May, the latter quoting Chop No. 3 Tsatlee 26s. per lb., and speaking very favourably of the coming European crop. On the 10th inst. the market here was reopened by the purchase of a few bales of Laeyongs at Tls. 350 to 355 per picul, and settlements to the extent of about 70 bales were made on that and the following day, about which time telegrams via Kiachta were received dated the 19th May, quoting Chop 3 Tsatlees 27s. per lb., which caused a cessation of business for fully a week, when telegrams bearing date of 25th May arrived which gave 26s. per lb. as the quotation for Third Tsatlees. These adverse advices naturally made foreigners very cautious, and those firms who were desirous of purchasing in execution of orders were demanding a decline of fully Tls. 50 to 60 per picul on good and Chop Silk, and a greater diminution in the prices for the lower descriptions. But for a short time the holders of Silk refused to submit to any material abatement in their quotations; subsequently, however, becoming more reasonable in their demands, business was resumed, and settlements amounting to fully 1,500 bales have been made; these, added to 600 bales settled at the close of the last mail, and to the estimate of transactions given in my last circular, gives a total of 2,400 bales purchased since 1st June. About 500 bales of this mail's purchases are going forward on Chinese account, or joint account of natives and foreigners. Arrivals from the country having come forward freely the unsold stock has increased to fully 3,000 bales. From Ningpo about 200 bales have been received. By the steamer Phase, from Yokohama, letters to the 12th inst. were received. During the past interval an increased demand had existed in their market, and fully 300 piculs had been settled. Prices showed an advance of $20 to 30 per picul. Unsold stock was reduced to barely 100 piculs. Prospects for the new season's Silk continued favourable, and small musters were looked for in a fortnight or three weeks hence. The quotations, all charges paid to England at exchange 6s. 3d. per tael, were:—Tsatlee, chop 1, none; ditto 2, 30s. 6d. to 31s. 3d. per lb.; ditto 3, 28s. 10d. to 30s. 2d.; ditto market 3 and 3½, 27s. 3d. to 28s. 4d.; Red Peacock and 4, 23s. 7d. to 26s. 3d.; ditto 5 and common, 20s. 5d. to 22s. 6d.; Karshing Taysaam, chop 1, 24s. 1d. to 25s. 2d.; ditto 2, 22s. 6d. to 23s. 7d.; ditto 3, 20s. 5d. to 22s; ditto 4, 5, and common, 19s. 4d. to 20s. 5d.; Chin Cum Taysaam, No. 1, none; ditto 2, 20s. 11d. to 22s. 6d.; ditto 3, 19s. 11d. to 20s. 11d.; ditto 4 and common, none; Yuenfa and Hainings, No. 1, 25s. 8d. to 26s. 9d.; ditto 2, 24s. 8d. to 25s. 5d.; ditto 3, 23s. 1d. to 24s. 1d.; ditto 4 and common, 22s. to 23s. 1d.

Exchange.—Since the departure of the last mail sterling exchange has risen nearly 4 per cent., and the market has at times been much excited. On the 13th instant a large business was done in credit bills at 4s. 7d., and rupees were then being offered, on Bombay at 228, and on Calcutta at 229. The market rapidly advanced after this to 4s. 8¾d. for credits, a considerable business having been done at intermediate rates. Rupees have advanced to 240 on Calcutta and 239 on Bombay, but little or no demand has shown itself since the departure of the Calcutta steamers. Money has been in great demand, and it is all but impossible to get it at even 18 per cent. per annum. Rates show firmness at the close, although very little paper remains on the market. The estimated amount of business by the present opportunity, independent of operations at higher rates that have been put through for next mail, amounts to about £930,000, say £170,000 Bank Bills, and £760,000 private paper and fifteen lakhs rupees.

Bullion.—No Bar Silver has come to hand since the departure of last mail, and, indeed, with present rates ruling on India, sales would be very difficult. The first shipments that arrive will be easy of realisation now that the Hong Kong Mint is closed. The quotation is entirely nominal, as also for Sycee, of which there is none on the market.

Shares.—In consequence of the tight condition of money, the business in shares has been of rather a limited nature during the past fortnight, and the market has been quiet. Bank have declined, in consequence of some holders being forced to realise in order to raise funds, and of others, who, finding a better investment in exchange, forced their shares upon an impoverished money market. A small lot of old changed hands at 20 premium; but there are eager buyers at this rate, to a considerable extent. New have been neglected, and nothing doing. Union Dock are steady, with no sellers at quotations. Early in the fortnight a few new Whampoa Dock were settled at 7 premium, and again some days after resold at 10 premium. There are now sellers of both old and new at the quotations given. There are small buyers of Hotel at 30 discount, and sellers of Steamboat and China Trader's. The market must generally be considered as dull, and no sign of improvement can be looked for until money becomes easier.

THE IMPERIAL JAPANESE TROUPE.—The extraordinary company of Japanese acrobats who lately astonished London by their performances at the Lyceum Theatre, have made a great and almost unprecedented hit at Madrid. Large offers have been made to induce them to visit Lisbon; and it is not improbable that they may proceed from Spain to Portugal before returning to England, where their popularity was bidding fair to become permanent just at the time of their leaving this country.

THE EAST INDIA TELEGRAPH COMPANY.

The East India Telegraph Company of New York has been reconstructed, and comes once more before the public under circumstances which, we are informed by Mr. Ritso, the company's agent in London, leave no doubt that the required capital will be obtained without difficulty. Mr. H. E. Curtain (ex-Governor of Pennsylvania) is President, and the board of directors comprises Messrs. Alexander Holland, N. Mickles, F. Westray, J. Livermore, Jas. Noxon, S. H. Gay, O. H. Palmer, Chas. Boteler, and C. S. Westcott. The primary object of the company is to lay a series of cables, some 900 miles in length, along the China coast, connecting Hong Kong with Shanghai and the intermediate ports, and the capital is fixed at 5,000,000 dols. in shares of 100 dols. each. A project is also on foot for a Pacific cable, connecting San Francisco with Japan and China by way of the Aleutian Islands; a Bill authorising the undertaking is already before Congress, and by this time has probably been passed.

LEGAL.

ROLLS COURT.—JULY 23.

RE COMMERCIAL BANKING CORPORATION OF INDIA AND THE EAST.

A large amount being in hand available for a second dividend, an application was now made to the Court on behalf of creditors and the liquidator for leave to pay a dividend and make a further call, although various contributories, shareholders in the new bank, insisted that many of the debts were debts of the old bank, and not properly debts of the new, or had not been so contracted as to be valid debts of the new bank.

Sir R. Palmer, Mr. Baggallay, Mr. Jessel, Mr. Swanston, Mr. Bristowe, Mr. Everitt, Mr. Osborne Morgan, Mr. Kekewich, and Mr. Fischer were the counsel engaged in the case.

His Lordship directed the liquidator to take out a summons for Michaelmas Term for a further call, and directed that a dividend of 2s. 6d. in the pound, or such further dividend as the liquidator was able to pay, should be paid to all the creditors, but as to the creditors whose debts were disputed, only upon their giving undertakings or securities satisfactory to the liquidator for the return of any dividends they might receive.

VICE-CHANCELLORS' COURTS.

IN RE THE AGRA AND MASTERMAN'S BANK (CANNAN'S CLAIM); EX PARTE CANNAN; EX PARTE COMMITTEE OF SHAREHOLDERS.

In this matter a long discussion was started, arising out of the circumstance that Mr. Cannan was desirous of retiring from the office of official liquidator of the old bank. The parties having agreed upon the appointment of Mr. Ball, as the new official liquidator,

The Vice-Chancellor made an order to the effect that, Mr. Cannan being desirous of retiring, Mr. Ball be appointed liquidator; and, with respect to the balances remaining in Mr. Cannan's hands, directed that £5,000 be retained by Mr. Cannan on account of his remuneration and costs, without prejudice to any question; that he transfer into Court Consols equivalent in value to £45,000, as an indemnity fund to answer the claims in respect of which a right of retainer had been given by the orders already made, and the deed of covenant which had been executed by the direction of the Court; he also to transfer and pay to the existing or new bank the residue of consols which after such transfer might remain, and all cash in his hands; the amount to be verified by affidavit; the pending applications in all other respects to stand over till Michaelmas term.

Sir R. Palmer, Q.C., and Mr. Westlake appeared for the bank; Mr. Druce, Q.C., and Mr. Fooks for Mr. Cannan.

In the course of the discussion, it was stated by Sir R. Palmer that nothing could be more successful than the scheme for the resuscitation of the Agra Bank had turned out to be.

TELEGRAPH TO INDIA COMPANY (LIMITED).—A special meeting of the shareholders in this company was held on the 31st ult. at their offices, under the presidency of Sir Macdonald Stephenson, who said that the meeting was held for the purpose of declaring a dividend. It had already been explained that it was owing to the Government having started an opposition line, and taken away the whole of the traffic from the Persian Gulf, that the dividend had been reduced from 5 per cent. to 3 per cent. The Anglo-Indian Telegraph Company were, as far as he knew, progressing satisfactorily in their organisation. The Telegraph Construction and Maintenance Company and the Anglo-Indian Company were exerting themselves in furtherance of the objects in view. It was hardly likely that they would let the Red Sea line remain in abeyance, and leave us dependent upon Russia for our telegrams. When this was carried out the terms of the lease granted by this company were that when the new line reached Aidin the shareholders should receive 7½ per cent., and when they got to Bombay 10 per cent. In conclusion he moved a formal resolution declaring a dividend at the rate of 3 per cent. per annum, which was seconded by Mr. Dent, and adopted nem. con. The proceedings then terminated in the usual manner.

A JAPANESE NEWSPAPER IN LONDON.—The Athenæum says:—"What with missions and what with conjurers London has lately had a large population of Japanese, and it is proposed to establish a separate Japanese newspaper here, as our Chinese newspaper has little influence on Japan. It is to be regretted, and is a consequence of the want of public encouragement, that the number of students of Japanese in London increases very little, although our intercourse with Japan has become of so much importance."

Continental Intelligence.

HAMBURG, Aug. 1.

From time to time rumours crop up in the Berlin newspapers of the intention of the German Confederation to found colonies in various parts, but they must be received with great caution, as "the wish is father to the, thought;" and such reports are frequently put in circulation as feelers. Some time ago there was—as your readers will remember—a great flourish of trumpets about taking possession of the Island of Formosa, and colonising it with Germans. Then it was proposed to build a fort and establish a trading factory on the Gold Coast, because there is a tradition extant that in the time of Frederick the Great Prussia had seized some land in that part of West Africa, and held it some years. And now comes the intelligence that the captain of the steam corvette Augusta, lately returned to Kiel, from the West India station, has been negotiating a treaty with one of the States of Central America, for the transfer of a territory and harbour on that coast, for the purpose of eventually forming a German colony there. Although it has been officially denied, there is strong presumptive evidence that the captain had really instructions from the Prussian Government to negotiate on the subject with the Republic of Nicaragua, for as the days of Raleigh and Drake are past, it is scarcely credible that a naval subaltern—for he has only the rank of commander—should take upon himself the responsibility of entering into a treaty for the transfer of a large tract of country without formal and special instructions. Besides, the whole of the official correspondence between the captain of the Augusta and the President of Nicaragua has been published in extenso in the New York papers, from which it appears that the captain did really make application, but that it was declined, as contrary to the Monroe doctrine of America for the Americans only. This correspondence has been translated and published in many of the German newspapers without its authenticity being called in question by the official or even semi-official press.

Great exertions are being made in the arsenal at Pola to get the vessels under orders to proceed with the Austrian expedition to the Far East ready to sail from Trieste at the appointed time. The Emperor sends as private presents from himself to each of the monarchs of Siam and Japan a statue of himself in Carrara marble, size of life, by the sculptor Cauer, at Rome; also a set of picked arms, including rifles, fowling pieces, pistols, and revolvers, and a dinner service of Vienna porcelain of great value as a work of art. Rear-Admiral von Petz, who commanded the Austrian line-of-battle ship Kaiser at the naval action off Lissa two years ago, and since then commandant of the arsenal at Pola, will hoist his flag on board the steam frigate Donau, Capt. Wipplinger, as supreme head of the expedition, whilst the Friedrich is commanded by Capt. Lindnev. Dr. Wavra, who accompanied the late Archduke Maximilian in 1859 to the Brazils, and who now goes out as staff surgeon, is an accomplished botanist. The five Austrian commercial commissioners are not yet appointed, and there seems to be some difficulty in finding duly qualified persons; the three Hungarian commissioners are Baron Kaes, and Messrs. Cserei and Szekacz.

The Arcona, North German steam corvette, is fitting out at Kiel, to replace the Hertha, under orders to proceed to Japan.

THE TREATY BETWEEN CHINA AND THE UNITED STATES.

PREAMBLE.—Whereas since the conclusion of the treaty between the United States of America and the Ta-Tsing Empire (China) of the 18th of June, 1858, circumstances have arisen showing the necessity of additional articles thereto, the President of the United States and the august Sovereign of the Ta-Tsing Empire having named for their plenipotentiaries, to wit, the President of the United States of America, William H. Seward, Secretary of State, and his Majesty the Emperor of China, Anson Burlinghame, accredited as his Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary, and Chih-Kang and Sun Chia-Ku, of the second Chinese rank, associated High Envoys and Ministers of his said Majesty, and the said plenipotentiaries after having exchanged their full powers, found to be in due and proper form, have agreed upon the following articles:—

ART. 1. His Majesty the Emperor of China, being of the opinion that in making concessions to the citizens or subjects of foreign Powers of the privilege of residing on certain tracts of land, on resorting to certain waters of that Empire for purposes of trade, he has by no means relinquished his right of eminent domain or dominion over the said land and waters, hereby agrees that no such concession or grant shall be constructed to give to any Power or party which may be at war with or hostile to the United States the right to attack the citizens of the United States or their property within the said lands or waters; and the United States, for themselves, hereby agree to abstain from offensively attacking the citizens or subjects of any Power or party or their property with which they may be at war on any such tract of land or waters of the said Empire; but nothing in this article shall be construed to prevent the United States from resisting an attack by any hostile Power or party upon their citizens or their property. It is further agreed that if any right of interest in any tract of land in China has been or shall hereafter be granted by the Government of China to the United States or their citizens for purposes of trade or commerce, that grant shall in no event be construed to divest the Chinese authorities of their right of jurisdiction over persons and said property within said tract of land, except so far as that right may have been expressly relinquished by treaty.

ART. 2. The United States of America and his Majesty the Emperor of China, believing that the safety and prosperity of commerce will thereby best be promoted, agree that any privilege or immunity in respect to trade or navigation within the Chinese dominions which may not have been stipulated by treaty shall be subject to the discretion of the Chinese Government, and may be regulated by it accordingly, but not in a manner or spirit incompatible with the treaty stipulations of the parties.

ART. 3. The Emperor of China shall have the right to appoint consuls at ports of the United States, who shall enjoy the same privileges and immunities as those which are enjoyed by public law and treaty in the United States by the consuls of Great Britain and Russia, or either of them.

ART. 4. The 29th article of the treaty of the 18th of June, 1858, having stipulated for the exemption of Christian citizens of the United States and Chinese converts from persecution in China on account of their faith, it is further agreed that the citizens of the United States in China of every religious persuasion, and Chinese subjects in the United States, shall enjoy entire liberty of conscience, and shall be exempt from all disability or persecution on account of their religious faith or worship in either country. Cemeteries for sepulture of the dead of whatever nativity or nationality shall be held in respect, and free from disturbance or profanation.

ART. 5 The United States of America and the Empire of China cordially recognise the inherent and inalienable right of man to change his home and allegiance, and also the mutual advantage of the free migration and emigration of their citizens and subjects respectively from the one country to the other, for the purposes of curiosity, trade, or as permanent residents. The high contracting parties, therefore, join in reprobating any other than an entirely voluntary emigration for these purposes. They consequently agree to pass laws making it a penal offence for a citizen of the United States to take Chinese subjects either to the United States or to any other foreign country, or for a Chinese subject to take the citizens of the United States to China or to any other foreign country, without their free and voluntary consent respectively.

ART. 6. Citizens of the United States visiting or residing in China shall enjoy the same privileges, immunities, or exemptions in respect to travel or residence as may there be enjoyed by the citizens or subjects of the most favoured nation, and, reciprocally, Chinese subjects visiting or residing in the United States shall enjoy the same privileges, immunities, and exemptions in respect to travel or residence as may there be enjoyed by the citizens or subjects of the most favoured nation.

ART. 7. The United States and the Emperor of China, recognising in the present progress of nations a favourable tendency towards unity of civilisation, and regarding a unity of money and a unity of weights and of measures as favourable to that great object, do hereby agree that they will use their influence and efforts to obtain the establishment, by the general agreement of nations, of representative coins having a common value, and also a common standard of weights and measures for all countries.

ART. 8. The United States freely agree that Chinese subjects shall without hindrance on account of their nationality or religion be admitted to all schools, colleges, and other public educational institutions, without being subject to any religious or political test; and, on the other hand, his Majesty the Emperor of China agrees that citizens of the United States may freely establish and maintain schools in that empire in those places where foreigners are permitted by treaty to reside.

ART. 9. The United States, always disclaiming and discouraging all practices of unnecessary dictation and intervention, by one nation in the affairs or domestic administration of another, do hereby freely disclaim any intention or right to interfere in the domestic administration of China in regard to the construction of railroads, telegraphs, or other material internal improvements. On the other hand, his Majesty the Emperor of China reserves to himself the right to decide the time and manner and circumstances of introducing such improvements within his dominions. With this mutual understanding it is agreed by the contracting parties that if at any time hereafter his Imperial Majesty shall determine to construct or cause to be constructed works of the character mentioned within the empire, and shall make application to the United States or any other Western Power for facilities to carry out that policy, the United States will, in that case, designate and authorise suitable engineers to be employed by the Chinese Government, and will recommend to other nations an equal compliance with such application, the Chinese Government, in that case, protecting such engineers in their persons and property, and paying them a reasonable compensation for their service.

In faith whereof the respective plenipotentiaries have signed this treaty and hereto affixed the seals of their arms. Done at Wahington the 4th day of July, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty-eight.

"THE TIMES" ON TREATY REVISION.

In the letter of our Shanghai correspondent published on Thursday (July 30) an interesting account appeared of the opinions held by a powerful Chinese official concerning the relations of the Empire to European States. Ten years ago the Treaty of Tientain was concluded. After long resistance and evasion on the part of the Chinese the English and French Plenipotentiaries obtained concessions which, though full advantage has not yet been taken of them, bid fair to change the character of the Celestial Empire. The Treaty of 1842 had done much, and the war which led to it—the first great collision between the restless enterprise of the West and the immobility of the East—will form one of the most important epochs in the history of Asia. The Treaty of Tientain, which itself had to be re-stipulated at the close of new hostilities, two years after, carried the principles of international comity and free trade still further. It was provided that Ambassadors, Ministers, or other diplomatic agents might be appointed by either of the contracting States, and should be received by the other; and, particularly, that a British Minister with his family and suite should be at once received at Peking. Consuls might be appointed to reside in any of the open ports, and the number of these was increased. The Christian religion was to be tolerated, and its professors protected. British subjects (we quote the treaty with England) might travel for pleasure or trade into all parts of the interior with passports from their Consuls, countersigned by the local authorities. British merchant ships were to be allowed to trade up the Great River (Yang-tse), and certain ports on its banks were made free to them. This Treaty, enforced by the lesson which the two European Powers were forced to teach the Chinese Government in 1860, has been the means of bringing China into more intimate relations than ever with the West, and it is not difficult to see that the morose or timid isolation of the Celestials must yield to the arguments, the authority, or the irresistible pressure of the civilised nations. The time approaches when this Treaty is to undergo revision; and if the diplomatists engaged do their duty and are well supported by the Queen's Government, the result ought to be the complete removal of the restrictions which now hamper the enterprise of Europeans.

The Chinese rulers still resent and fear the irruption of foreigners. They look upon the trader as a robber, the traveller as a spy, the representative of a foreign Government as a scarcely disguised enemy. They like English and French silver, of course; but they prefer that it should be paid by "barbarians" who keep a respectful distance, and are satisfied to receive at the outports such qualities of tea or silk as the Celestial merchants think proper to produce. The Government has acquiesced sulkily enough in the provisions of the Treaty, and has placed difficulties in the way of those Englishmen who have wished to receive its full benefits. China is not yet a country in which the European can freely come and go. The disturbed state of certain districts aids the inhospitality of the Government in keeping strangers out. In others the influence, either open or secret, of the Government is sufficient without the fear of maltreatment from bands of insurgents. But whatever may be the character of our present relations, it has been decided to demand further concessions. It is known by all who have been concerned in Chinese affairs that the people are far less exclusive than their Government. It is the official aristocracy which desires to keep the Empire in Conservative isolation. It is this power, with its mingled stolidity and shrewdness, its traditional learning and its real ignorance of politics and science, which we have to resist in the Cabinet as we have three times vanquished it in the field. This bearing of the ruling power is the best justification for the high-handed measures to which European Powers have had recourse. Every traveller or merchant tells the same tale—that the Chinese people have no objection to a more extended intercourse with Europeans, and that in commercial and industrial matters they have extraordinary curiosity and desire to learn. They know what the value of money is, and they know that the English and French have plenty of it. They are aware of the superiority of the Western nations in science and mechanical arts; and though their learned men may affect to despise this as a cleverness of the hands rather than of the head, they know that it leads to wealth, and power, and enjoyment. Wherever our countrymen have penetrated they have found people glad to see them and wonderfully anxious to hear all about the outer world. They have heard words of their own English tongue uttered in secluded districts, and have been astonished to find that there were native Chinese to whom their own utterances were not unintelligible. For not only does the European press upon the ever-weakening defences of Chinese officialism, but the Chinese are wandering forth into the most active communities of the Anglo-Saxon race, whence they continually return to heighten the curiosity of their countrymen concerning the great nations which can be such terrible enemies and are such useful friends. We know that the efforts used to overcome the resistance of the Chinese authorities to a more extended intercourse will be beneficial to the Chinese people, and we also know that, so far as they are instructed in the matter, their sympathies are with us. The European nations by importuning China for free ingress and free trade are working, not only for themselves, but for this vast race of men who, after advancing to a certain point of civilisation, have remained stationary for ages, and can be only invigorated by the action of Western civilisation. Hence it is the duty of our diplomatists, not only to maintain with all their power the rights we have already won, but also to urge those which are yet denied or evaded. They may with justice declare that Englishmen ought to have within the Chinese Empire all those rights which a Chinese immigrant would possess in Australia, or a Chinese sailor in London.

Our correspondent states that, in reference to the revision of the Treaty of Tientain, the Chinese Government has been endeavouring to collect the opinions of the great officials, in order to have the best advice in a matter of so much importance. The correspondence is said to be secret, but the opinions of the Viceroy of Nanking—a very powerful personage—have become known. He advises that the Emperor shall refuse to any foreigners the right of navigating the inland waters with small steamers, as well as that of constructing railways, on the ground that such new means of locomotion would seriously injure the boating population. He would refuse the right of residence and trade in the interior, as that will interfere with native merchants and manufacturers. It will be seen that Tsen-kwo-fan is a Protectionist of the stanchest school, and that his economical canons do not appreciably differ from those which were held sacred a few years since in this country and are still maintained by the great orators of France. Happily the Viceroy believes that the "barbarians" are not wholly useless, for he will permit the working of coal mines, which he considers would be highly beneficial to China. He is in favour of concessions to missionary enterprise, because he believes the doctrines of Confucius are proof against every attack. He is liberal in the matter of diplomatic courtesy, and is in favour of conceding the right of personal interview with the Emperor to foreign ambassadors as soon as the latter takes the reins of Government into his own hands. "He is emphatic only on the score of railways, telegraphs, inland steamers, and inland residence, and advises armed resistance in preference to concession."

It is not difficult to understand a statesman of this kind. The type is one with which we are all familiar, and we should not have to travel many hundred miles to find examples of it. The astute mandarin would purchase immunity from real concessions by showing diplomatic civilities and exercising a nugatory toleration in religious matters. He would hold on to the one solid institution of the empire—its isolation—while amusing the formidable foreigners by a show of liberality. But the matters about which the Viceroy is inflexible are just the most important for ourselves and for the Chinese people. While accepting any compliments to the Ambassador and to the missionaries, this country must demand for its citizens what is granted by every civilised State to another—the right to travel, to reside, and to pursue whatever industry they may think proper.

NAVAL AND MILITARY.

In October next it is stated that his Royal Highness the Duke of Edinburgh will again take his departure from England in her Majesty's ship Galatea on a lengthened cruise. We believe that the Prince will first proceed to China, then to Japan, and return home by the way of New Zealand.

Her Majesty's ship Tamar, Captain F. W. Sullivan, C.B., arrived at Queenstown on Sunday, the 19th ult., having the 2nd battalion 9th Regiment on board, from Japan. This ship left England on the 17th of October last, on a round of troop service, taking out detachments from Gibraltar and the Cape, and arriving at Simon's Bay on the 29th of November. She embarked the 1st battalion 9th Regiment from Table Bay on the 12th of December from Algoa Bay, where, disembarking them and embarking the 86th Regiment, she left on the 17th of December for Mauritius, arriving on the 27th, disembarked the 86th, and left on the 31st for Algoa Bay. On the 19th of January the 1st battalion 10th Regiment was embarked for conveyance to Japan, where the Tamar arrived on the 4th of April, having landed a battery of artillery at Penang and Singapore on her passage up, and having also been docked at Hong Kong. Having disembarked the 1st battalion 10th Regiment and embarked the 2nd battalion 9th Regiment at Yokohama, she left on the 14th of April for Queenstown, via Hong Kong, Singapore, Mauritius, Cape, St. Helena, Ascension, and St. Vincent. On the passage home two soldiers, one seaman, and five children died, leaving on board a total of 1,123 souls. The passage from Japan to the Cape was made in forty-one sea days, from the Cape to Queenstown in thirty-one. The Tamar during a nearly five years' commission has traversed 145,000 miles.

Lieutenant-Colonel Milward, R.A., who joined the Abyssinian Expedition at the express wish of General Napier, and who served with that distinguished officer in China, has received a deputation from the inhabitants of Woolwich and Plumstead, to present him with an address congratulating him on his return, and eulogising in high terms the part which the lieutenant-colonel took in the battle before Magdala on Good Friday, and which terminated with such great results to the expeditionary force.

The death of Captain A. J. Kingston, R.N., at the early age of forty' has been announced. By this casualty Commander Fellowes will attain the rank of Captain. Both these officers recently served on the China station.

NEW TREATY BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND CHINA.

Since the date of our last issue news has reached us that an entirely new treaty between the United States and China has been signed by Mr. Seward and Mr. Burlinghame, and sent to the Senate for approval, and that this treaty is in all respects similar to the one which the Chinese Envoy intends to offer to each of the European Powers. It consists of nine articles, none of which embody any striking feature, except such as are of a negative tendency, as will be seen by the copy given elsewhere. The first simply recognises the Emperor's "right of eminent domain" over such portions of Chinese territory and waters as are open to foreign trade, and provides for the preservation of neutrality therein. This is intended to bring China within the scope of that provision in the law of nations which prevents the forces of two antagonistic Powers meeting in armed collision on the territory of a neutral State. Article 2 is to the effect that the Chinese shall not be required to accord any privileges regarding commerce or navigation beyond those already stipulated for by treaty; which is sheer nonsense. Then follows a provision for the appointment of Chinese Consuls at United States ports; this is sensible, and will have a good effect if properly carried out, especially at San Francisco, where Chinese subjects need protection badly enough. Next comes a clause permitting mutual liberty of conscience in religious matters; hardly necessary, for even now the Chinese Government interposes no obstacles in the way of missionary enterprise, while in the States a multiplicity of creeds are tolerated, with some of which either Buddhism or Sintooism compare quite favourably. Article 5 provides for mutual emigration, but agrees to make the compulsory exportation of Chinese subjects by Americans, or vice versa, a penal offence. This is undoubtedly a wholesome regulation, the due enforcement of which by all other countries as well as America would be a death-blow to the detestable Macao coolie traffic. Of course, England and the leading European States will do this, but how about Portugal, Spain, Peru, &c.? Article 6 provides that "citizens" of either nation residing or travelling in the other shall enjoy all privileges accorded to "the most favoured nations." Article 8 admits Chinese to American schools and colleges without any religious test or other restriction. Objections have already been raised to this clause, on the ground that several of the United States' colleges at present do prescribe a religious test, and it may thus become a source of disagreement in the future. The concluding article embodies the very extreme of self-abnegation on the part of the States. By this clause the American Government not only disclaims all intention to press on the Chinese the introduction of railways and telegraphs, but recognises the supreme right of the Emperor to decide the time and manner of introducing such improvements—which virtually allows him to exclude them entirely—and it is further stipulated that should the Emperor at any time determine to construct such works he will apply to the United States, or some European Power, for engineers, "who shall be paid by the Chinese Government." This last clause is clearly intended to shut out foreign companies or capitalists.

Such in brief are the terms of the new treaty; now let us endeavour to form an estimate of its probable effects. The gist of the whole thing clearly lies in Articles 6 and 9. The former—like every other clause in the treaty—is all in favour of China. In according to China the rights enjoyed by other frendly Powers, it accords the privilege of naturalisation to Chinese immigrants, a most valuable concession, for it will emancipate the tens of thousands of Celestials in California from their present state of thraldrom and degradation, which would be a disgrace to any Christian land. The Chinese however on their part only concede to the United States as few advantages as they can persuade other less easy-going nationalities to put up with; while Article 9 permits the Chinese Government, if it so pleases, once more to wrap itself up in its old policy of exclusiveness and isolation. This is Treaty Revision with a vengeance, but not exactly of a nature that Great Britain will be inclined to accept. Why the United States should submit to it is a question that admits of easy explanation. By giving the Chinese all the advantages already accorded to other foreigners, they lose nothing, while by professing a disinterested anxiety to refrain from all interference in Chinese affairs they hope to inspire a friendly feeling, and even a degree of admiration, in the Celestial bosom that may be turned to good account hereafter. In the meanwhile the Embassy comes to Europe; the English and French treaties are revised—either here or at Peking, as the case may be; and the United States, under cover of the "favoured nation clause," will, as on former occasions, benefit by whatever concessions are then obtained.

Late advices from China mention that the Chinese Government has followed the example of our own in collecting expressions of opinion regarding the revision of the treaties, chiefly, of course, from the official class, and the reply of one of the most influential men in the country, Tseng-kwo-fan, forms a curious commentary on the subject before us. Tseng-kwo-fan, Viceroy of Nanking, and representative of a powerful party in the State—recommends his Government to refuse the right of navigating the inland waters by small steamers, or of constructing railways, as these will seriously injure the boating population; to refuse the right of residence and trade in the interior, as that would interfere with native merchants; to refuse permission to import foreign salt, as that, again, would interfere with native salt merchants and manufacturers; and almost the only concession he would make is permission to work the coal-mines, as that would, he thinks, be a source of benefit to the country. He would also assent to some concession to missionary enterprise, simply because he believes it to be futile. But he is emphatic on the score of railways, telegraphs, inland steamers, and inland residence, and advises armed resistance in preference to concession. The people, he says, could not fail to support a risk incurred in support of their own rights. This is a poor, blind policy at best, though put forward with some show of plausibility; for, as The Times' correspondent justly says, the innovations most strongly contended against are exactly those most likely to be beneficial to the Imperial Government; nothing would give them greater strength against local disturbances or general rebellion than telegraphs to afford quick communication between the capital and distant provinces, and railways to convey large masses of troops to the points where they are required. But Mr. Burlinghame's policy, when it comes to be dissected, proves to be merely an echo of Tseng-kwo-fan's. A new treaty, professing to grant a general reciprocity of all possible rights and privileges—some of them altogether delusive, and others impossible to realise—will be of far less value than a fair revision of the old treaty, providing for the full exercise of those special rights which it already pretends to accord, but which are, and always have been, wrongfully withheld.

The Embassy, it is said, will arrive on this side the Atlantic in about a fortnight, but whether our own, or some other European Court, will be visited first is not stated. At that time, however, the Queen will be in retirement in Switzerland, and Lord Stanley will also be absent, as Minister in attendance on Her Majesty. The Foreign Secretary does not appear to attach any very great importance to Mr. Burlinghame's approaching visit, for on being asked by Colonel Sykes (on the morning of prorogation) "whether he had received any communication from the Envoy of China," Lord Stanley replied in the negative. "He was not aware when "the gentleman referred to was expected in this country." Perhaps Lord Stanley was aware how worthless a document Mr. Burlinghame would present for his consideration when he should arrive.

COLONEL GORDON'S CAMPAIGN AGAINST THE TAIPINGS.

The Ever-Victorious Army; a History of the Chinese Campaign under Lieutenant-Colonel Gordon, C.B., and of the Suppression of the Taiping Rebellion. By Andrew Wilson, Author of "England's Policy in China," and formerly Editor of the China Mail. William Blackwood and Sons: Edinburgh and London. —A link of no slight importance in the chain of contemporaneous history is supplied by this volume, and supplied, moreover, in a manner which leaves nothing to be desired. The clique of rebel sympathisers, once so numerous among foreigners in China, is we may assume long ago extinct; but were any proof still needful of the utter futility of their hopes that the regeneration of China was destined to be effected through the agency of Taiping-dom, such evidence is now placed before us in the most complete and most convincing form. From time to time fragmentary notices of the progress of the Taipings, and isolated narratives of some of the leading events connected with the movement, have appeared. In the well-known works of Mr. Meadows, Mr. Oliphant, Commander Brine, and Dr. Rennie, the earlier portion of this eventful chapter in Chinese history has been ably dealt with, but in Mr. Wilson's book we have for the first time a succinct account of the entire movement—its origin, spread, and final extinction by the operations in which Colonel Gordon took so conspicuous a part. It is fortunate, indeed, that the task has been undertaken by a hand so well qualified to execute it. The main facts of the story are based upon such authentic data—Colonel Gordon's own private journal and correspondence being the chief—as admit of no doubt as to their accuracy. But the very nature of the chronicle did not allow of its being treated simply as a record of dry facts. The causes of the discontent that had long smouldered, until the embroilment of the Imperial Government with foreign Powers afforded the turbulent spirits who fomented it an opportunity of breaking out into organised rebellion—the curious manner in which the Taiping movement and the foreign war acted and reacted on one another—these and other considerations more or less closely interwoven with the main subject of the work had to be explained, in order to render the sequence of events completely intelligible. How the rashly-provoked wars with England weakened the power of the Government, and so enabled the insurgents to obtain an ascendency; how the anarchy thus induced rendered the Government incapable of acceding to the demands of foreigners; how Hung-sew-tsuen rose into power, established himself as the "Heavenly King of the Great Peace," and held his court at Nanking, the ancient capital of China; how the Imperialists, foiled time after time in their efforts to recover possession of this stronghold, at last humbled themselves to solicit aid from the very same "barbarians" they had so lately treated with contemptuous defiance; all this, and much more, is narrated in the earlier chapters, before we come to the formation of the "Ever-Victorious Army," which gives its well-earned title to the book. The nucleus of this force was a body of about a thousand drilled Chinese, with a sprinkling of Europeans and Manillamen originally raised by "General" Ward and his lieutenant, Burgevine—names familiar enough to all who watched the progress of Chinese affairs in 1861 and 1862. During the latter year it did good service, in conjunction with the British and French forces, in clearing the "thirty-mile radius" around Shanghai. Ward was killed at the capture of Tse-ki, in September, 1862; Burgevine succeeded him, but soon quarrelled with his Chinese superiors, and was dismissed; and after a short interregnum, during which Captain Holland took the command, Colonel (then Captain) Gordon, of the Royal Engineers, was selected, at the recommendation of General Staveley, as the permanent chief of the army destined eventually to destroy the hydra-headed monster that threatened the dissolution of the empire.

The chapters that follow, detailing the exploits of the Ever-Victorious under its new commander read far more like romance than history, and afford a forcible illustration of the well-worn saying that truth is stranger than fiction. Gordon is of course always the central figure; not that he himself would have willed it so, as all who have any knowledge of his character must be aware. Indeed, Mr. Wilson tells us that when conceding the use of his journal and papers, he expressed a strong wish "that he should not be made the hero of a work in which so many other officers were engaged;" and that the relation of his own services "should be subordinated to the more important object of presenting a true account of the course of events." Doubtless Mr. Wilson conscientiously endeavoured to carry out this wish; but however anxious he may have been to do so, he could not write a truthful account of the campaign without picturing Gordon as a hero in the truest sense of the term. Mature in judgment, to a degree wonderful at his age; untiring in energy; brave even to rashness; loyal, humane, and modest; generous and disinterested to the very extreme of self-abnegation, he exhibited in perfection all the highest qualities of an honourable soldier. The material he had to work with consisted of a heterogeneous assemblage of Chinese from different provinces, subsequently reinforced by numbers of rebel captives, who would willingly join the ranks of their conquerors, and next day fight against their former comrades as a matter of course. The force varied in strength from three to five thousand men, divided into five or six infantry regiments, with as many batteries of artillery; the commissioned officers being all foreigners of various nationalities, of the construction and discipline of the force, the pay and emoluments of the officers, their relations with the local Chinese authorities, the difficulty of adjusting the internal dissensions that too frequently arose, and many similar points of interest, Mr. Wilson gives a full account. Gordon soon obtained the entire confidence of his troops, and from that time led them to victory after victory in rapid succession. The account of the capture of Tai-tsan (a walled city strongly garrisoned by the rebels) with a force of only 2,800 men, will give a fair idea of the sort of work he had entered upon:—

"On the 2nd May (1863), the 1st regiment was moved at an early hour towards the North gate, in order to prevent a retreat from that point, and to cover the left flank of the main body of the attacking force, which was established in the Western suburb. The troops were so placed as to be under cover; and the guns, protected by portable wooden mantlets, were gradually pushed forward until they were within a hundred yards of the walls of the city, which, by 2 P.M., were rather dilapidated, as every gun and mortar available was in action. Two hours after this, a wide breach having been made in the walls, a storming party advanced to the assault. The resistance made, however, was now very serious—the place being garrisoned by 10,000 men, 2,000 of whom were picked braves,—and its guns being served by several English, French, and American adventurers in Taiping employ. The rebels swarmed to the breach, manned the walls, and poured down a tremendous fire on the attacking column as well as on the bridge beyond. Major Bannon, however, who led the storming party, succeeded in mounting the breach, and a hand-to-hand conflict took place, in which the assailants were for the moment worsted and compelled to retire, the Taipings being bravely headed by the foreigners in their service. Again the guns played upon the breach for about twenty minutes, and then the assault was resumed. At last the 5th Regiment, under Major Brennan, advanced, and Captain Tchirikoff's company managed to plant the colours of that regiment on the top of the wall On this the storming party covered in, while the Taipings fled in every direction, trampling each other to death in their eagerness to escape. . . . . The loss on the part of the Ever Victorious army was heavy, Major Bannon, of the 4th Regiment, with about twenty rank and file, being killed, while there were wounded—Lieut. Wood, R.A., Major Murant, Captains Chapman, Chedwick, Ludlam, Robinson, and Williams, with 142 privates—out of a force of 2,800 men."

It was no child's play that Colonel Gordon had undertaken, and this was the commencement of a long series of equally hard-fought battles. A fortnight later (May 16) he was made by special Imperial decree a Tsung-ping—a rank in the Chinese service equivalent to that of brigadier-general. A much higher grade than this was in store for him; but this alone, as Mr. Wilson observes, sufficiently refutes an assertion put forth by Mr. Lay that Gordon never held an Imperial commission. A translation is given, certified by Mr. Mayers (interpreter to H.M.'s Consulate), of the despatch in which Governor Li announces this honour to its recipient.

The next noteworthy incident was the capture of the still more important city of Quinsan, in which between 3,000 and 4,000 rebels were killed, and 800 taken prisoners. This, being a strong and central position, was forthwith adopted as the head-quarters of the force and the base of its future operations. The capture of this important stronghold was followed by an incident that called into action all the energy and determination of which Colonel Gordon was capable. The force was yet only partially disciplined, and much addicted to plunder; and at Quin-san more stringent regulations than had hitherto existed on this point were put in force. A mutiny, in which the artillery took the lead, was attempted, and for the moment seemed likely to end in a general massacre of all the superior officers. The result may be told in the author's words:—

"This intimation of serious mutiny was conveyed to Colonel Gordon in a written proclamation. He ordered up the non-commissioned officers, being convinced that they were at the bottom of the affair, and inquired of them who wrote the proclamation and why the men refused to fall in. On their professing ignorance, they were told that one out of every five of them would be shot—a piece of information which was received with groans. As it was absolutely necessary to restore discipline, the commander ordered a corporal, one of the most prominent of the groaners, to be dragged out and shot, which was instantly done by two of the infantry. The remaining non-commissioned officers were then put into confinement for an hour, with the assurance that if the men did not fall in, and if the name of the writer of the proclamation were not given up by the end of that time, the arrangement of shooting every fifth man would be carried out. This energetic measure brought them to their senses, the men falling in and the writer's name being disclosed."

Of the fate of the writer of the proclamation and ringleader of the mutiny nothing is said, but it is not difficult to guess. The necessity of maintaining order under all circumstances, and at any cost, was of course paramount to every other consideration, and justice could not always be tempered with mercy. This difficulty surmounted, the force was employed in a series of operations which, though generally successful, were not uniformly so, and which required the utmost military skill as well as personal courage and endurance to carry on. The service, in fact, was one not only of incessant toil, but of far more than ordinary exposure to danger to the commander; for he had constantly to lead assaults in person, and often to seize reluctant officers and march them into the thick of the fire. And here one of his most remarkable peculiarities must be noticed: in all this desperate fighting he carried no arms, unless an ordinary cane can be considered as a weapon. Mr. Wilson says:—

"In almost all these engagements Colonel Gordon was very much exposed; for he found it necessary, or at least expedient, to be constantly in the front, and often to lead in person. Though brave men, the officers of his force would sometimes hang back, and their commander had occasionally to take one by the arm, and lead him into the thick of the fire. He himself seemed to bear a charmed life, and never carried any arms, even when foremost in the breach. His only weapon on these occasions was a small cane, with which he used to direct his troops; and in the Chinese imagination this cane soon became magnified into Gordon's magic wand of victory. His Celestial followers, finding him almost invariably victorious, and escaping unhurt, though more exposed than any other man in the force, naturally concluded, in accordance with their usual ideas, that the little wand he carried insured protection and success to its owner."

Of the numerous romantic incidents that go to make up this strange eventful history, we may here quote one that went far to strengthen the belief in his being protected by some supernatural influence. This occurred immediately after the capture and occupation of Patachiaou :—

"Behind the stockades which he had taken there was a bridge 350 yards in length, with 53 arches, which had been partially cut through to let the Hyson (a gun-vessel belonging to the force) pass through; and this bridge was the scene of a curious incident which occurred to Colonel Gordon. He was resting on its parapet one evening, smoking a cigar, when first one rifle or musket-ball, and then a second, struck the stone upon which he sat. These shots came not from the enemy, but from his own camp, where they had been fired accidentally. On the second shot being fired, Colonel Gordon thought it necessary to descend into his boat and go over to the camp to inquire into the matter; but he had hardly got half-way across the creek below when that part of the bridge he had been sitting on suddenly fell into the water, so that the accidental shots which had endangered his life were probably the means of saving it."

The operations now in progress were chiefly directed towards the capture of the great city of Soo-chow, one of the most important strongholds still in the hands of the rebels. Gordon's force was far too small to justify a direct attack on a fortified city of such dimensions; Soo-chow was garrisoned by 40,000 Taipings, some 20,000 more held the neighbouring town of Wusieh, and one of the "Wangs," a rebel king, was entrenched midway between the two with a force of 18,000 men, ready to give aid to either. The "Ever-Victorious" army at this time numbered only between three and four thousand men, but was supported by some 10,000 Imperial troops under native commanders. The disproportion of numbers, as already observed, negatived the idea of a direct movement; but Gordon fought his way completely round Soo-chow, and left a fortified circle held by its allies, encompassing the city. In one of these battles the Commander had another of his many narrow escapes, and we quote Mr. Wilson's account of it because it so well exemplifies his manner of dealing with his officers :—

"Some day's previously Gordon found lying on the ground a letter in the handwriting of this officer (Captain Perry) to a Taiping sympathiser in Shanghai, giving information as to the intended movements of the force. On being shown this letter Perry confessed that he had written it, but declared he thought the information of no importance, and had only intended to send it to Shanghai as a piece of gossip which might be interesting. On this his commander said to him, 'Very good, Perry. I shall pass your fault over this time on condition that, in order to show your loyalty, you undertake to lead the next forlorn hope.' This agreement had been forgotten by Colonel Gordon when, a few days after, they stood together on the edge of the ditch in front of the stockades at Leeku. They were both, in fact, leading a forlorn hope; and, while standing together, a ball struck Perry in the mouth, and he fell into Gordon's arms, where he almost immediately expired."

The investment of the city completed, a night attack was made which resulted in a repulse. Gordon, as usual, led his force in person, but the resistance was desperate, and the fire so appalling that all his exertions could not prevent the assailants from falling into confusion, and he ultimately retired with considerable loss. The attack lasted three hours, during which Gordon's artillery (twenty guns) poured an incessant fire of shot and shell on the stockade that formed the point of attack; and in this stockade the Moh Wang, who commanded the defenders, fought like a private soldier, without shoes or stockings. It is sad to remember that only a few days later this brave leader was the victim of a cowardly assassination by his own people. This reverse, instead of acting as a discouragement, seems to have whetted Gordon's appetite for hard fighting; for next day he again opened fire on the stockades, and after battering them for some time, once more led the assault in person. During a desperate hand-to-hand fight, the result of which for some time seemed doubtful, Gordon, surrounded only by a handful of men, found himself separated from the rest of his force by a large body of Taipings; still he pushed forward, rallied his men, and ultimately carried the stockades. The city then capitulated, on which Gordon withdrew his force to avoid the demoralisation certain to ensue if they were allowed to plunder, leaving the place in the occupation of the Imperial troops, commanded by General Ching and Li, the Futai (or Governor) of the province, with a distinct understanding that no cruelty should be practised on the vanquished. Then followed a series of events too complex to be described in detail, but ending in the discovery by Gordon of the headless bodies of nine of the rebel chiefs, who had been executed at the instigation of Li :—

"On witnessing this sight Colonel Gordon's grief and indignation knew no bounds. Though he had not actually guaranteed the safety of the Rebel Chiefs, yet he had assisted in inducing them to surrender on the supposition that the Futai would treat them in an honourable and humane manner. His first impulse was to obtain hold of the Futai and inflict summary justice on that high official. General Ching, however, gave timely warning of Gordon's incensed state, and Li very wisely avoided a meeting. For some days Gordon's anxiety to meet with the Futai was only equalled by that of the Futai to keep out of his way, and this was the only period of his campaign during which the commander of the Ever-Victorious Army burdened himself with carrying arms."

Li, however, escaped with a whole skin; but Gordon called his officers together, and announced his intention of forthwith laying down his command unless the Peking Government took steps to punish this treachery. In the end, Li partially justified his merciless severity by showing that the conduct of the chiefs, subsequent to their surrender, was menacing in the extreme; instead of quietly accepting their position as prisoners of war, they demanded to be allowed to retain command of the city, refused to disband their forces, and otherwise exhibited such insolence that only their immediate execution could have prevented the outbreak of further hostilities on the spot. Mr. Wilson accepts the explanation as satisfactory, and thinks Li's action justified by the rules of Chinese warfare; but Colonel Gordon took a totally different view, and the question is manifestly one on which no reconciliation of adverse opinions is at all probable. Colonel Gordon, having abandoned the idea of inflicting summary vengeance on Li, held his force at Quinsan, declining to move further until the matter had been decided at Peking. Soon after this the Emperor issued a decree acknowledging Gordon's eminent services, conferring on him a medal of distinction of the highest class, and ordering payment to him of the sum of 10,000 taels (about £3,500), as a special reward for the capture of Soo-chow. These honours were in the ordinary course conveyed to him through Li, the Governor, who at the same time offered valuable presents from himself; they were, however, indignantly refused by Gordon, who also sent back the 10,000 taels with a short reply to the Emperor's decree, in which he stated that, "owing to the circumstances which had occurred after the capture of Soo-chow, he was unable to accept any mark of his Majesty's recognition." Though he steadfastly adhered to this decision, Gordon was ultimately persuaded once more to take the field, on a promise being given that no executions should in future take place without his authorisation. Some reverses attended his first movements, but the "Ever-Victorious" soon vindicated its fame, and at the end of some fourteen months' campaigning the rebels were left with only Nanking and Wuchu. In the meanwhile the treachery at Soo-chow had reached the ears of the British Government, who consequently withdrew the permission hitherto accorded to British officers to serve in the Chinese army. In obedience to this measure Gordon laid down his command, and the Ever-Victorious Army was disbanded. Its mission was fulfilled; the two cities that alone remained to the Taipings were already closely invested by Imperialist troops, and were very soon afterwards starved into submission. The closing days of Tai-ping-dom—when Nanking was in its last extremity—the pseudo-regal state of the "heavenly monarch" dwindled to a shadow—the garrison disorganised, the city in ruins, the people starving—present a melancholy picture; a little later, and the suicide of the unhappy "king," the burning of the greater part of the city, and its capture, with tremendous slaughter, by the Imperialists, marked the final extinction of the great Taiping Rebellion. This was in July, 1864.

On the dissolution of the "Ever-Victorious" the Chinese Government dispensed liberal gratuities to the officers and men, especially those who were disabled, and once more they offered to reward the exertions of the commander with a large sum of money. Once more, however, was the offer courteously but firmly declined; and this self-denial raised him higher than ever in the estimation of the Chinese authorities. He had spent not only his whole pay, but some of his private funds, in promoting the efficiency and well-being of his force; he had spared himself no labours, had shirked no danger, yet resolutely refused any pecuniary reward. Honours were, however, heaped upon him without stint. He was thanked for his services by Imperial decree; created Ti-tu (Commander-in-Chief), the highest military rank existing in China; received a banner and the Order of the Star, as well as the distinction of the Yellow Jacket, the highest possible mark of Imperial favour. He was also specially recommended by the Emperor to the British Government, who made him a C.B.; and so, with all possible honours from the Chinese Government, and this paltry distinction from his own, he returned to England at the end of 1864 and contentedly resumed his position as a simple officer of Engineers.

The book of course would not have been complete without some notice of the projected Anglo-Chinese flotilla, Mr. Lay's "magnificent scheme for regenerating China and exalting himself." The history of this gentleman's arrogant pretensions, and the miserable fiasco they brought about, are duly chronicled; but our readers must by this time be thoroughly sick of Mr. Lay and his mania for self-aggrandisement, so we will pass over this story without further comment. A specially important chapter is that entitled "Sketches of Nature and English Officials in China," which gives some interesting particulars regarding Prince Kung, Tseng-kwo-fan, and Wan-seeang, three statesmen whose influence on foreign interests in China is especially important at this juncture. Lord Elgin, Sir Frederick Bruce, and our present Minister come in for their share of criticism, which is of a highly favourable nature as regards the two former, and rather the reverse as regards Sir R. Alcock. Mr. Wade, Sir Harry Parkes, Admiral Hope, Mr. Lay, and Mr. Hart are all mentioned in this chapter, and the influence they have exercised on Chinese affairs is freely commented on. Mr. Hart appears to be a special favourite with the author, who attributes the recent appointment of Mr. Burlingame as Chinese envoy to his inspiration; whether that step is destined to prove an unmixed blessing either to the Chinese or ourselves yet remains to be proved, and any discussion of it would be out of place here.

It was hardly to be expected that the disturbances that had so long convulsed the Middle Kingdom should end finally with the suppression of the Taiping rebellion. Later events have made us familiar with many other minor insurrections, among which the Nienfei and the Mohammedan rebels have been the chief agents. Mr. Wilson, in an ably-written chapter devoted to these movements, shows that their importance, as regards the general homogeneity of the Empire, have been much over-rated; although the excesses of the Nienfei have from time to time undoubtedly justified a feeling of uneasiness regarding the safety of some of the more northern ports. He points out that the Nienfei are but a body—certainly a large body—of marauders, driven to a life of brigandage by famine and similar causes, and possessing no political organisation such as would give them any chance of subverting the Imperial Government. One of the results of the Taiping rebellion was to diminish the resources of the Government, and hence ensued a neglect of public works—among others, the embankments of the Yellow River, which consequently overflowed and laid waste large tracts of land in Chih-li, Shantung, and Honan.

"The necessity that knows no law but self-preservation has created these robber bands, but of course they have attracted to them many idle and disreputable people inclined for all kinds of mischief, and such bands necessarily grow by what they feed upon. The people whose houses they plunder (and, it might be added, whose farms they lay waste) become themselves Nienfei, in order to avoid starvation; and so a band increases rapidly, until it attains such dimensions that the Imperialist troops are directed against it. . . . Occupied by its foreign war and the Taiping rebellion, the Government allowed the Nienfei to continue their depredations, until they became formidable bands, threatening at times to advance on Tientsin and cut off the communication between Peking and the sea."

Vigorously attacked at different points by Tseng-kwo-fan and San-ko-lin-sin, and subsequently by Li (now a Che-tai, or Governor-General), the Nien-fei were dispersed; but they still reappear from time to time, and Mr. Wilson admits that we must expect to hear of their depredations at intervals for some few years. The Mohammedan insurgents can hardly be called rebels; they people some of the outlying dependencies that have been rather a source of weakness than of strength to China, and the severance of the remote provinces of Kansuh and Ili, consisting of wild deserts and inhospitable mountains, would be a positive benefit instead of an injury to the Empire. The general conclusion drawn by the author from these facts—in which we quite coincide—is, that these local disturbances, although they receive a semblance of importance from the exaggerated accounts published, are after all but trifling affairs in an empire of some 400,000,000 inhabitants. Too much faith is placed in the statements of alarmists—"Foreigners who enliven their exile by abundant gossip and their Chinese hangers on, who take a peculiar pleasure in stuffing them with startling stories." Probably this remark of Mr. Wilson's was already in type when the cost of the China Legation was debated in Parliament last month, or he might have included in the category of "startling stories" the wonderful statements then put forth by Colonel Sykes. The self-constituted oracle of the House of Commons on all subjects connected with China said:—"There was no such thing as Executive Government in China. . . there was no executive power at Peking; almost every province was in a state of rebellion. . . the greater portion of the country was in possession of the insurgents." For which highly satisfactory reason he wanted to cut down our Minister's salary to £4,000 a-year. Lord Stanley naturally declined to accede to the proposition, although "nobody understood China affairs better than the hon. member." As if the "hon. member" had a single idea—or even the ghost of an idea—of the true state of affairs in China! But this is a woful digression from Mr. Wilson, to whom we must return for a brief space yet.

Of course the author has somewhat to say of the conduct of foreigners in China generally, and of the British merchant in particular. That misguided individual is once more told of the fatal mistake he made in supposing that an inexhaustible El Dorado would be found in the mere multiplication of ports and commercial establishments on the coast and rivers of China.

"The very ease with which they made money, and their otiose, luxurious style of life, brought the foreign merchants into a condition like that of Jeheshurun when he waxed fat and kicked. The repelling attitude of the Celestials at Canton, the Hwang-chu-kee murders, the expansion of commerce in other parts of the world, and above all, vague but glowing hopes connected with the opening of the Yang-tsze River and the interior of the country, threw the foreign community in China into a feverish state of dissatisfaction with the past, disgust with the then present, and boundless anticipations of the future. It must have been a great relief to their minds when Sir Harry Parkes picked up the bone of the lorcha Arrow, and Sir Michael Seymour suddenly remembered that we had a right, or something like a right, to enter the gates of Canton. . . . When that city was taken it began to dawn disagreeably on the mind of the mercantile community that something more than the seclusion of China was being broken into; that other old things were to pass away, including many of their former privileges, and a portion of their former power. . . . The foreign community entered on a phase of matters very different from what it had fondly anticipated. . . . It soon became painfully clear that the opening of a large number of new ports, the influx of an increased number of foreigners, and a wild tendency among them to competition and overtrading, which was taken advantage of by combined action among the native merchants, were producing a period of distress and ruin."

The picture is too true, and needs not to be completed by a recapitulation of the disastrous results to which it formed the background. Mr. Wilson goes on to say that "their fixed idea is that China is not opened, and that commerce will expand immensely if only they can get further access into the interior." Surely this idea no longer prevails; the dream has been rudely dispelled, and merchants, we should hope, no longer put their faith in further "opening-up," in the old sense of the word, but in a gradual and natural development of the trade now existing. We have already far outrun the limits usually accorded to a review, but it is impossible to pass unnoticed an appendix in which the author explains his reasons for not noticing in the body of his work a book entitled "Ti-ping Tien-kwoh," professing to be a history of the great rebellion, written by a person calling himself "Lin-lee," who fought with and for the rebels.

"My reasons for taking no notice of that book are various and sufficient. It is not necessary to go beyond the author's own admissions to find ground for receiving his statements with caution. Though he does not mention the name of the Firefly, he admits heading the capture of a steamer at Shanghai in circumstances which leave no doubt that the Firefly is referred to; he actually complains that for being engaged in that act one of his accomplices, a man called White, was condemned to three years' imprisonment by the British Consular Court of Shanghai. . . These are not recommendations, for they involve a direct admission that he committed what the laws of his country condemned as an act of piracy. . . He admits having made prisoner on board this captured steamer four Europeans, and that he promised to endeavour to pass them into Gordon's lines as prisoners of war . . . How this promise was fulfilled can only be judged from his own statements, and from the fact that when Colonel Gordon occupied Wusieh he found there the bodies of the four men in a burned and mutilated state, which proved in the judgment of his (Gordon's) medical officers that they had been deliberately tortured before death. . . . But even this is not all. According to his own account, 'Lin-lee' shot dead Hart, an Englishman, one of his four foreign associates in the capture of the Firefly, as they were returning from Soochow with the price (£20,000) which they had received for that steamer. At the same time he drove away, and 'nearly frightened out of his life,' Thompson, the second of his associates, and on reaching Shanghai, White, the third, was betrayed to the British authorities and cast into prison, while only the virtuous Lin-lee (Lindley?) escaped unscathed with his prey to England. . . . 'Lin-lee' on returning to England for the benefit of his health, &c., is not content with availing himself of his success, but must place himself in prominent contrast with Colonel Gordon. The latter officer is supposed [Mr. Wilson might have written well known] to be not a bad specimen of the Christian gentleman. His officers and soldiers idolised him; Chinese of all classes regarded him with high respect; . . . . always foremost in moments of danger, no coolie of his force cared less for personal comfort; . . . . he returned from China a poorer man than he went out, with little more than the honorary acknowledgments of his own and the Chinese Governments. But it seems we are all under a mistake. The real hero is 'Lin-lee,' whose exploits, so far as he adduces testimony, are the midnight capture of a small steamer lying off a peaceful settlement; the delivery, for money, of it and the Europeans on board to the cruel Taipings; the killing of one of his associates; and a secret flight to England."

Enough of this unsavoury subject. But before taking a final leave of Mr. Wilson's book, it may not be out of place to ask whether, in the opinion of those best qualified to judge, due effect has been given to the strong recommendation from the Chinese Government with which Colonel Gordon returned to this country. It was in furtherance of British policy, and at the instance of the British authorities, that he assumed his command; his exploits advanced British interests, besides promoting the cause of order and civilisation generally; they shed, moreover, a lustre on British arms that can scarce be dimmed by any lapse of time. Through a campaign of unparalleled difficulty, including some thirty sieges and pitched battles; through treachery, mutiny, massacres, and indescribable horrors, he bore a stainless shield—truly a knight "without fear and without reproach." Another engineer officer, who has just concluded a successful campaign—admirably conducted, no doubt, but not entailing a tithe of the labour, privation, and danger of Gordon's—is made a peer and a G.C.B. and pensioned. Gordon, as a reward for incalculable services in the great cause of humanity, receives a brevet Lieutenant-Colonelcy and the Companionship of the Bath, and is no more thought of. Barren honour indeed! Surely something better worthy of his country's bestowal, and his acceptance, might have been found.

Monetary and Commercial.

We understand that the Hong Kong Government has sanctioned a proposal made by the directors of the Hong Kong and Shanghai Bank, by which the payment of the remaining call on the unpaid 20,000 shares will be spread over a term of five years, expiring in December, 1874, and that a notification to this effect will in due course appear in the Hong Kong Government Gazette.

In the Rolls Court on the 23rd ult. an application was made by creditors of the Commercial Bank Corporation of India and the East that the official liquidator might be directed to pay a further dividend out of the funds—said to be about £300,000—in his hands. The application was opposed by some of the contributories, who alleged that many of the creditors claiming a dividend were not entitled to rank as creditors, the recent decision in the case of Captain Felix Jones having established that depositors might, under certain circumstances, have to claim against the predecessor of the Corporation—namely, the Commercial Bank of India. Lord Romilly, however, directed the payment of a dividend of 2s. 6d. in the pound, or of such further amount as the liquidator should think proper, security to be taken from those creditors whose claims are objected to, for repayment of the money, if the appeal now pending should decide that they are not to be included in the list of creditors. A further call, to be made at Michaelmas, was also authorised. On the 30th the matter was again before the Court, and owing to the opposition by some of the shareholders the Court decided against the immediate distribution of the dividend. We have on more than one occasion pointed out that the course adopted by the shareholders in this bank could be productive of only evil results, and this is further verified by the announcement just made that the conflict of interests between the shareholders in the Commercial Bank Corporation of India and the East and those of the old Commercial Bank of India, has necessitated the appointment of a separate liquidator for the latter. This antagonism opens the door to fresh litigation, the result of which cannot fail to be disastrous to both parties.

Biddings for £200,000 in bills on Calcutta and Madras took place on the 5th. The amounts allotted were—to Calcutta, £177,200, and to Madras, £22,800. The minimum price was fixed, as before, at 1s. 10½d. on both Presidencies; and tenders at 1s. 10⅞d. will receive about 94 per cent.; those above will be allotted in full. These results show a renewed diminution in the demand for means of remittance to the East.

The limited amount of Mexican dollars brought by the last West India packet was disposed of for shipment for China at 59½d. There is now less demand, and the price shows a drooping tendency, owing to the recent fall in the China exchanges. The

The amount of bullion by the P. and O. Company's steamer Bangalore, from Southampton on the 25th ult., was, in gold, to Madras, £4,339; in silver, to Hong Kong, £34,892; to Shanghai, £21,400; total in gold, £4,339; in silver, £56,292.

The amount of bullion by the P. and O. Company's steamer Syria, from Southampton on the 8th inst., was in gold, to Galle, £10,750; to Bombay, £4,280; to Madras, £2,592; in silver, to Hong Kong, £24,912; total in gold, £17,622; in silver, £24,912.

It has been decided by a few of the firms in London to undertake the forwarding of telegraphic mercantile messages to the Chambers of Commerce in China in place of those now forwarded by Messrs. F. Bower and Co., who are desirous of being relieved from the responsibility involved.

The new subscription room in Lombard-street, which is intended to afford similar conveniences to the old-established "Jerusalem" in Cornhill—but on a more extended scale—has obtained the support of several houses of good standing. The date of opening has not yet been fixed.

The Paris Comptoir d'Escompte has announced a dividend of £1. 1s. 10d. per share, making up a dividend for 1867-8 at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum.

The Albert Assurance Company, one of the principal life offices in India and the East, has just issued a notice to the effect that in consequence of the few casualties that occurred in connection with the Abyssinian expedition, the extra premium charged to those constituents of the office who took part in the expedition will be refunded. The extra premium being at the rate of eight guineas per cent., the concession must be considered a very handsome one.

A prospectus has been issued of the Globe Marine Insurance Company, with a capital of £400,000, in shares of £20. The manager of the underwriting department is Mr. Charles Richard Harford, junr., and it is understood that the share list has already been largely subscribed by merchants and others who place reliance on the result of his experience and connections.

At the meeting of the British Indian Tea Company (Limited) the deficit on the operations of the year was stated at £3,500, partly owing to a decrease in the quantity of tea manufactured, and partly to the decline in the market value of the article. The report was adopted.

The half-yearly report of the directors of the West India and Pacific Steamship Company states that there has been a satisfactory increase in outward freights earned, but that in the homeward there has been some diminution; and that the business of the company is generally satisfactory, all the vessels being kept well employed. A fair sum is "accumulating to the credit of the insurance fund account." The directors recommend an interim dividend of 12s. per share, free of income-tax, being at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum, to be paid on the 12th August.

The Agra Bank (Limited) have declared an interim dividend to the 30th June at the rate of 8 per cent. per annum on the A capital of the bank. That portion of the bank's capital which is represented by B, or "reserved" shares, will not, in accordance with the articles of association, participate in the payment of dividend until after the present year.

The creditors of the late Agra and Masterman's Bank, (Limited) which passed into liquidation in June, 1866, have availed themselves of the occasion of the payment of the final instalment of all the debts of this concern with interest at 5 per cent. per annum, to convey to the board of directors of the resuscitated establishment—viz., the Agra Bank (Limited), and especially to Mr. James Thompson, the chairman—their high appreciation of the skill and promptness with which engagements to the amount of not less than seven millions sterling have been honourably and punctually discharged.

The London and County Bank held its meeting on the 6th inst. After paying all charges and interest to customers, and making provision for bad and doubtful debts, the net profits amount to £72,165 12s. 6d. This sum, added to £7,810 16s. 2d. brought forward from the last account, produces a total of £79,976 8s. 8d. The usual dividend of 6 per cent. was declared, with a bonus of 2 per cent. for the half-year, free of income-tax (equal to 16 per cent. per annum), which will absorb £75,884 5s. 4d., and leave £4,092 3s. 4d. to be carried forward to profit and loss new account.

A letter recently addressed to a shareholder in the Asiatic Banking Corporation by the official liquidator, states that the winding-up has proved most disastrous, and that the recent decision of the Lords Justices, by which secured creditors can prove for the whole amount of their claims, irrespective of the value of the securities they hold, will render the position of unsecured creditors still more unfortunate. If this decision should not be reversed, the ultimate distributions to the general creditors will be considerably under 5s. in the pound, and this will depend upon the result of the calls now made upon the shareholders to the full extent of their liability.

BOARD OF TRADE RETURNS.

The returns of the Board of Trade for the month and six months ended 30th June have been issued. The following shows the declared value of the exports of British and Irish produce and manufactures for the month of June in the last three years:—June, 1866, £14,630,120; June, 1867, £15,490,091; June, 1868, £13,933,054. It will be seen from the above comparison that a diminution has taken place in the general volume of the export trade of £1,557,037, or about 10 per cent. in the declared value of our exportations compared with those of the corresponding month of last year, while from June, 1866, the reduction is 4¼ per cent. Depression in the cotton trade has again been almost the sole cause of these results, the diminution in our total shipments of yarns and goods having been as much as £1,225,829. Of cotton yarn our shipments have been about 30 per cent. less, both in value and quantity, while in those of cotton manufactures there has been a falling off of 18 per cent. in value and 11 per cent. in quantity. Linen and woollen goods have likewise been inactive, a falling off being shown of 35 per cent. in linen yarns and 7 per cent. in linen manufactures, and 10 per cent. in woollen manufactures. Similar results are shown by contrasting the figures for the first six months of the present year with those for the same period of last year and the year before, as follows:—Six months, 1866, £92,857,830; six months, 1867, £87,613,484; six months, 1868, £84,601,157. The import returns also exhibit a falling off. In May—the last month for which values are given—the imports of the principal articles were valued as follows:—May, 1866, £24,799,261; May, 1867, £24,405,169; May, 1868, £21,794,568.

We annex a summary of those figures which relate to our Import and Export trade with China and other countries in the Far East:—

ARTICLES OF IMPORT.

—o—

TEA.

The auctions which were commenced on the 4th were concluded on the 6th; they included 32,400 packages, of which about 30,000 were sold. The sales opened without spirit, and proceeded with great heaviness to the close. Compared with prices current by private contract, common red-leaf Congous show only a slight decline, but a marked fall has taken place in good common and medium black-leaf kinds, especially the latter, which went only a trifle over common Congou price. Common black and red leaf Congou sold at 1s. 1½d. to 1s. 1¾d., the better kinds realised 1s. 2d. to 1s. 3d., good Kaisow brought 1s. 7d. to 1s. 9½d., and fine 2s. 1¼d. per lb. In Green Tea fair prices were obtained for all descriptions. Oolong and Canton Scented Caper and Orange Pekoe show a still further reduction from last sale. Within the last day or two more inquiries have been made at the lowest terms accepted, but at present no important business has resulted.

SILK.

Sales of the new China crop have been made at 31s. 6d. for No. 3 chop Tsatlee, ordinary 30s. to 31s. These rates leave a profit of about 1s. These extreme prices are a considerable check to purchases, and have been mainly caused by the high rates given in China.

According to a Circular of Messrs. Arles Dufour and Co., of Lyons, the business in silk during the past month has been satisfactory. Buyers, finding scarcely any manufactured goods ready, have been compelled to order for late deliveries even articles such as were always formerly to be found in stock. Most of these orders have been placed at prices based upon contracts for the raw material made before the last rise. At present the extreme rates current, based upon an unusual scarcity, must greatly restrict business, especially for low goods of more general consumption. Under these circumstances a hope is expressed that the quality of China and Japan silk will prove better than that of last year, and restore the popularity which Asiatic sorts at one time enjoyed.

COTTON.—The London market has been extremely dull during the past week, the total sales only amounting to 3,730 bales on the spot, and 6,800 bales for arrival. Prices exhibit considerable reduction from those of the previous week, and the closing quotations are as follows: —Surats, 6¼d. to 9¼d.; Madras, 6¾d. to 8d.; Scinde, 5¾d. to 6½d.: Bengal, 5¾d. to 6¾d. The Liverpool market has also been very quiet. The latest prices paid have been as follows :—On the spot. American, 8¼d. to 11d.; Egyptian, 10¼d. to 13½d.; Surat, 6¼d. to 9d.; Madras, 7⅜d.; Bengal, Scinde, &c., 6d. 6¼d. To Arrive.—Broach: fair new merchants, May sailing, 7¼d. Dhollerah: fair old merchants, June sailing, 6¾d.; fair new merchants, April sailing, 7⅜d.; June shipment, 7¼d.; ship named, 7¼d. Omrawuttee: fair new merchants, May sailing, 7⅛d. Bengal: fair new merchants, March sailing, 6d.

COFFEE.—The late heavy arrivals are being brought forward freely, and the value of the article consequently declines. A large quantity of Plantation Ceylon has found buyers at a reduction of 1s. 6d. to 2s. per cwt. from last week's rates, the commoner qualities showing the greater fall. Good ordinary Native is again lower—the better sorts maintain their value. The first arrival of Wynaad Plantation sold at relatively good prices—the Native was held rather stiffly. The public sales of Ceylon during the week have been as follows:—2,866 casks, 744 barrels and bags Plantation, good ordinary to fine fine ordinary, 55s. to 66s., low middling and middling 67s. to 75s., good middling to fine at 75s. 6d. to 86s. 45 casks 3,361 bags Native, about half taken, common good ordinary to real good ordinary 44s. to 47s., fine ordinary and bold 48s. to 53s. 6d. Wynaad: 494 cases Plantation sold at 68s. 6d. to 78s. 6d. 250 bags Native, one lot bold, sold at 60s., the remainder bought in.

Coir Goods.—The auctions of Yarn have gone off with good spirit, and generally at advanced prices, the whole being sold. A few lots of Fibre also sold rather higher. 8 bales Ceylon Yarn sold. very fine £69, fine £56; also 108 tons in dholls, good £44 to £47, middling to good middling £36 to £42 10s., common to low middling £29 5s. to £33. The sales of Fibre have included 84 bales Singapore mattress at £15 5s. to £15 15s., while 4 tons Ceylon Fibre and 5,078 pieces (10¼ tons) Ceylon Junk were withdrawn.

Cutch.—The value of fine quality is at present uncertain; the stock in warehouse is very light, but parcels are now landing, mostly, however, previously sold for arrival. In auction 100 boxes ordinary mixed bought in at 25s.

Gambier.—The market has been extremely dull, and we have no business to report.

Galls.—Privately there have been transactions in China at 54s., and Japan being scarce and much inquired for has realised the same prices. At the public sales 78 cases China were bought in at 52s. to 54s.

Gums.—Benjamin: The transactions have been as follows:—Of 43 cases Siam 37 cases sold, good small almond with a small part bold in block, £20 5s. to £21 5s.; seed in block, £16 10s.; rather dark small almondy in block, £9 5s. to £9 15s.; siftings in ditto, £8 10s. to £8 15s. Of 18 cases Sumatra seconds 11 cases fair to good fair seconds at £9 to £9 10s.; 150 cases Sumatra thirds bought in at £5 5s. Copal: With a steady market we have to report the sale of 25 cases hard middling Manila at 29s. per cwt.

Japan Wax.—This import continues scarce, and although there has been a good demand we have no transactions to report.

Manila Hemp.—The market since our last report has been steady, but no great activity has been exhibited. The offers at auction have amounted to 704 bales, of which the sound portion was bought in; mark B. S. and Co. over L., at £47 10s.; K. C. over D., at £43 10s.; and a few bales second class damaged, mark L. L., sold at £46 to £46 10s.

Pepper.—Black: Holders are firm, and of 3,314 bags Penang about 2,000 bags were realised at and after public sale at the extreme rates required, fair Acheen, 3⅛d.; good West Coast, 3⅛d. to 3 3-16th. Singapore is mostly held above the present market value, but 600 bags have been sold at 3⅜d. White: By private contract full rates have been obtained, but at the public sales the quotations have been slightly reduced. Of Singapore 470 bags were greater part sold, fair quality at 5d., being steady, and 362 bags common Penang at 4⅞d.

Plumbago.—Rates for Ceylon are lower, and of 414 barrels offered about two-thirds sold, good bright small lump at 37s. to 37s. 6d., ordinary chips at 16s., and fine dust at 17s. 6d. to 18s. 6d. per cwt.

Rice.—On the spot little animation has appeared in the market, but the tone is less depressed than in the previous week. Madras has resold at 4½d. to 6d. above the lowest point, and Ballam has met a fair demand at 8s. 6d. ex ship, or 9s. landed. Extensive floating transactions have again occurred in soft grain sorts, partly out of the cargoes arrived. The sales of cargoes afloat have been as follows:—1,250 tons Necransie, July sailing, at 10s. 10½d., for Liverpool landed; 900 tons Necransie, July-August sailing, at 10s. 10½d., for Liverpool; 660 tons Siam, March sailing, at 11s. 7½d., for Liverpool; 500 tons Bassein, June sailing, at 11s., for the Continent; 700 tons Bassein, July sailing, at 10s. 10½d., for the Continent; 800 tons Necransie, May sailing, at 10s. 7½d., for the Continent; 800 tons Necransie, July-August sailing, at 10s. 6d., for the Continent; 700 tons Rangoon, June-July sailing, at 11s. 4½d., Continental terms; 800 tons Rangoon, May sailing, at 11s. 6d., Continental terms; 760 tons Necransie, arrived off the coast at 11s., for the Continent.

Spices.—Cinnamon: Of 50 bales Ceylon 22 bales sold, thirds at 1s. 11d., low coarse at 8d. to 1s. 3d. per lb. Cloves: Penang have advanced, and 8 cases sold at 10d. to 10½d. per lb. Mace: Penang has sold readily at firm rates, viz., good bold bright 3s. 3d., medium 2s. 2d. to 2s. 6d. At the auctions 7 cases Penang were sold, and 6 cases Singapore bought in. Nutmegs: At the public sales 62 cases Penang chiefly sold at rather lower prices, good bold 74's at 2s. 4d. to 2s. 5d., 76's at 2s. 2d. to 2s. 3d., 78's at 2s. 1d. to 2s. 2d., middling 94's to 88's at 1s. 6d. to 1s. 8d, 109 to 98's at 1s. 3d. to 1s. 4d.

Sugar.—The market for East India descriptions has been very dull for some time past, and we have no business to report. During the past week some inquiries have been made for Manila and also for other descriptions, but no sales are reported.

Tin.—The current quotations are—Banca, £94 10s.; fine Straits, on the spot, £92; afloat, £93. Messrs. French and Smith's Circular reports:—Straits has been in better demand than might have been expected, taking into consideration the reduced quantity taken by tin plate manufacturers, whose make is so much diminished by the heat and dry weather. We estimate this branch of industry alone has consumed during past month 150 tons tin less than their usual quantity. The stock here at the end of the month was small, but does not include 400 tons just arrived; this quantity is not taken into the stock in warehouse, but forms portion of the 1,580 tons still "afloat." The price is £92 cash, at which there is a good demand. In Holland the deliveries of Banca were smaller than corresponding month last year, being 7,190 slabs, against 9,307.

ARTICLES OF EXPORT.

METALS.

The following review of the trade during the past month is from the Circular of Messrs. Von Dadelszen and North:—

During the past month, what with the extraordinary heat and general depression of business, the Metal Trade has been, if anything, duller than ever; still there are indications at bottom of greater strength than the appearance of the Market would lead one to expect. The completion of an early and abundant harvest will, we trust, be the harbinger of brighter times.

Iron.—The excessive heat has naturally checked the production of finished Iron. In Wales the demand for Bars has been fair, and prices well maintained: £5 10s. to £5 15s. Rails: are decidedly dearer, and the last sales of Eries were £5 15s. In Staffordshire, makers are also stiffer, and the demand for finished Iron larger than for a long time past. In Cumberland we hear complaints from the makers of Pig Iron, and many furnaces are out of blast. In the Middlesborough district trade is more active, the low price of their Pig Iron attracting consumers, and the demand for their Manufactured Iron being on the increase. In Scotland the trade is not so satisfactory, the value of Pig Iron is declared not to be on a par with the cost of production, while the colliers are obstructive, and strikes and locks out the results. The Market for Warrants has been very firm, 52s. 9d. being the average, and present price for m.n. 52s. 6d. The shipments from Scotland during July have been 56,116 tons, against 51,240 tons last year, and 62,717 tons in 1866; and since the 1st of January, 327,615 tons, against 356,795 tons in 1867.

Copper.—This article has again suffered a severe fall in price, and is altogether in a worse position than for a long time past. The prospect of large supplies from Chili, and the advice of very heavy charters, created a perfect panic. By the two mails arrived during the month, we have advice of charters having been effected for over 8,000 tons of copper produce. This is principally the transfer of an accumulation of stock from Valparaiso to England, but the effect on our market has been most depressing, and rumours of large charters being again advised by the next mail still further deepens the general despondency of holders. Some large purchases of India sheets were made during the month, and consumers in Birmingham bought freely, but the market at the close is as flat as it well can be.

Tin Plates.—The demand has been somewhat better, and, owing to the shortness of water, there has been a reduced make; higher prices have consequently been obtainable for early delivery, and the market is decidedly firm.

Lead.—The market has again been very dull, and prices somewhat lower. We quote good soft English Pig £18 17s. 6d. to £19; L.B., £19; W.B, £21 5s.; Soft Silver Lead, £18 5s.

Swedish Iron.—A small business has been done, but at low and irregular prices.

Spelter.—The market for Silesian has been very irregular throughout the month, and the difference between the buying and selling price wider than usual; we can only account for this by the general disinclination to deal in the article. A large portion of the stock in this country is held on foreign account, and as prices abroad are comparatively above ours, which are merely nominal, it is only when a sale comes to be forced that the real value is ascertained. The consumption of English and Belgian Spelter has increased materially by their now taking the place of Silesian to a considerable extent, a fact which seems likely to revoiutionise the routine of the trade. Sales of ordinary brands, in London, have been made at various prices, from £20 5s. down to £19 12s. 6d., closing nominally at £19 15s. to £20. Ordinary brands in outports from £20 down to £19 2s. 6d., closing about £19 10s. to £19 15s. We quote special brands £20 to £20 5s. and WH £21. V and S is quoted nominally £20, but this make is fully sold. The stock in London on the 1st of August was 1,107 tons, against 1,394 tons last month; and in the outports 2,220 tons, against 2,480 tons.

MANCHESTER GOODS.

Mr. Sam Mendel's Monthly Circular, dated August 1st, is as follows:—With the exception of the improvement during the last few days this market has suffered from extreme depression and inactivity. The value of yarns and goods has gradually tended daily, more or less, against millowners, without circumstances of a favourable nature to arrest the downward tendency, or to impart even a temporary cheerful tone to the market. The total business for the month has been only moderate in extent, and, with few exceptions, orders were placed below the general run of quotations as the only way to avoid further accumulation of stocks. The stronger and dearer tone in the Liverpool Cotton Market, with larger sales at the beginning of the month, found no response in this market, placing both spinners and manufacturers in a still worse position from increased loss, and so forcing from necessity a resort to short-time working in numerous instances, as the only means to check the downward course of values, already so much under cost. Before the close of the month the Cotton Market had fallen more rapidly than either yarns or goods, and to some extent improving the producer's position, but not sufficiently so to cover anything near cost of yarns or goods. Since the past few days demand has become decidedly more active, and the month has closed with a more cheerful feeling and a marked improvement in demand, and prices advanced ½d. per lb. on yarns—India and China Shirtings, nominally 4½d. to 6d. per piece, with sales at quite 3d. above the lowest price previously accepted. Stocks have been generally cleared out, and contracts taken that will require many weeks to complete. Other sorts scarcely show equal improvement, but the general tone of the market is stronger and decidedly against buyers.

The Weekly Circular, dated 4th inst., states:—The improvement, both in demand and prices, during the last few days of the past week has been of short duration, and we have again less doing, with easier prices than paid on Friday last. Yarns rule about ½d. per lb., and Shirtings 3d. per piece advance on the previously lowest accepted values. The tone of the market is steady, with a fair, but not very active, demand at the advance quoted herein.

LAUNCHES.

Messrs. W. Denny and Brothers, of Dumbarton, have lately launched the Ethiopia, screw, built for the British India Steam Navigation Company, and a sister vessel to the Abyssinia, recently built by Messrs. Denny for the same owners. An iron screw of 2,300 tons burden, built and engined by Messrs. W. Simons and Co., has been launched from the London Works, Renfrew. She is named the Queen of the Belgians, and is intended for the Atlantic trade, being fitted with accommodation for about 800 first, second, and third class passengers.

About the same time an iron ship, named the Glenlyon, was launched from the yard of Messrs. Brown and Simpson, at Dundee. She is 179 feet in length, 28 feet 8 inches in breadth, and about 18½ feet in depth. Her stern is after quite a new model, and is considered to be a great improvement over the common style. She has been built for Dundee owners, W. O. Taylor, Esq., being the managing owner, and is intended for the East India and China trade. The christening ceremony was successfully performed by Miss Jessie Smith, daughter of Thomas Smith, Esq., of Viewbank, one of the owners.

Bravery Rewarded.—A party of underwriters assembled recently at the offices of Captain Downward, Birchin-lane, Cornhill, for the purpose of presenting a purse of 300 guineas and a gold chronometer and chain valued 60 guineas, to Captain Henry Wyeth, master of the ship Seringapatam, to mark their approval of his conduct under very trying circumstances while at sea. The ship Seringapatam left London on the 9th of August, 1864, bound for Japan with a cargo valued at £75,000. In the early part of the voyage she encountered a fearful hurricane, during which she sprung a leak and did great damage, requiring the pumps to be kept constantly going for forty days. On the 7th of October the crew, observing a vessel in the distance, told the captain they would remain no longer by the ship, and were determined to abandon her. Captain Wyeth told them his determination was to remain by her, whereupon the crew attempted to launch the longboat to carry out their purpose. The Captain, arming himself with a revolver, warned them not to touch the boat, declaring he would fire on the first man who did so. This had the effect of quieting the men, and, six days afterwards, the ship was safely taken into the Mauritius. Mr. Swan, an underwriter, paid high tribute to Captain Wyeth for his courageous conduct in not abandoning his ship, as some captains would have done under the circumstances. The delay in not presenting Captain Wyeth with a suitable testimonial was in consequence of his having made another voyage.

Marine Disasters.—The monthly statement published by the Bureau Veritas of Paris shows that in the month of June last 119 vessels were reported as total losses, including five steamers. Of the vessels lost 47 bore the British flag, 20 the American, six North German, six French, four Dutch, four Norwegian, two Danish, two Swedish; Belgium, Spain, Portugal, and Russia were each represented by one disaster, and the nationalities of 24 vessels remained unascertained.

The Taunton, Hartlepool to Hong Kong, sailed from Pentland Frith on July 7, having been becalmed there for from thirteen to fourteen days.

WHARVES.

NOTICE.

THE undersigned call the attention of Masters and Agents of Vessels discharging at this Port to the great advantage to be gained in point of convenience, despatch, and economy, by making use of their WHARVES at NEW HARBOUR.

With the assistance of Steam Cranes, a general cargo can be landed easily in a few days—or in about one-fifth of the time usually occupied discharging in the roads.

There are large, dry, and very commodious brick Godowns on the Wharves, which vessels have free use of for cargo while discharging.

The trouble and disputes with, and pilfering of cargo common among boatmen are avoided by vessels using the Wharves.

Cartage of cargo to the town (which is within easy distance) is guaranteed to be not more than lighterage from the roads, and the coolie hire discharging alongside is less.

There is always a large stock of the best English and Welsh coals on the premises, which are supplied to steamers at the lowest market price, and vessels going alongside to take in or discharge coals pay no wharfage.

Vessels discharging cargo pay a wharfage of 20 cents per ton—a trifling charge when the immense advantages gained are taken into consideration.

Arrangements have been made by which all repairs to ships or steamers can be done with despatch while the vessels are lying alongside the Wharves.

There is an efficient European pilot on the premises, and, when required, a steam tug is always available.

THE BORNEO COMPANY (LIMITED).

Singapore, April 6, 1868.

PORT OF AMOY.

SHIPOWNERS, AGENTS, and COMMANDERS are informed that the Dock Company's establishments at the above port afford every facility for REPAIRING and SPARRING VESSELS, cleaning and painting iron ships, and repair and refit of STEAM MACHINERY AND BOILERS.

Their large Granite Dock is 307 feet in length, fitted with a caisson-gate, and with a centrifugal steam pump of great power, ensuring despatch in all states of the tides. At average spring tides this dock can receive vessels drawing 16 to 17 feet, and during the autumn and winter months 18 feet. Their two smaller docks, also built of granite, can receive vessels drawing 12 to 13 feet.

The premises comprise a large smithy and boiler shop, carpenters and boat-builders' shops, an fitted with lathes and tools driven by steam,

AN IRON FOUNDRY

for castings up to 5 tons weight, and a BRASS FOUNDRY.

The different departments are superintended by experienced Europeans, viz., engineer, blacksmith, and shipwrights.

A DRY GODOWN for reception of stores of vessels requiring to discharge them.

Good quarters for officers of ships under repair in the dock.

SINGAPORE DOCKS.

THE PATENT SLIP AND DOCK COMPANY execute SHIPS' REPAIRS of all descriptions in the most efficient manner, under the supervision of European Engineers and Shipwrights.

The DRY DOCK (opened in March, 1859) admits two Vessels at the same time, being over 400 feet in length, with a depth of water ranging to 15½ feet. A second DRY DOCK of larger dimensions will shortly be completed, and available for the heaviest Steamers.

Adjoining the above there is extensive WHARF, WAREHOUSE, and other accommodation, including every convenience for coaling Steamers, discharging cargo, and storing goods, together with ample MACHINERY and appliances for repairing iron steamers, &c.

Apply at the offices of Messrs. Paterson, Simons and Co., Singapore; or 21, St. Swithin's-lane, Cannon-street, London, E.C.

ARRANGEMENTS FOR 1868.

The Proprietor has made arrangements to run six couriers per month in May and June, in the event of delay in the transmission of telegrams by the Russian Telegraph Service. It may not be generally known that the delays during the last season were occasioned by the overflowing of the Rivers Irtisch, Obi, and Yenessei; upwards of 800 versts of Telegraph Line were swept away from time to time. As such inundations occur only once or twice in a century, the Proprietor hopes that the precaution he has taken will prove unnecessary. During the latter two months of last season the line worked very well, and Telegrams were delivered to and from Europe in 18 days; the average time being as follows:—

London and Kiachta by Telegraph	2 days.
Kiachta and Tientsin by Courier	12 „
Tientsin and Shanghai by Steamer	4 „
Total ...	18 days.

A courier having been killed by a fall from his horse last year, the telegram bag was lost, and has not yet been recovered. In order to prevent a recurrence of the inconvenience, it is the intention of the Proprietor to open all telegrams addressed to his care, and forward duplicates by the subsequent courier to their respective addresses, unless he be specially notified to the contrary. The number of stations in Mongolia will be doubled this year. Contracts have been made to deliver telegrams between Kiachta and Tientsin in twelve days; the non-fulfilment of the contracts as to time entails a penalty upon the contractors of from 1 to 3 taels per hour (6s. to 18s.), thus giving a guarantee that delay will not occur.

After the first two months of the season, which are the most severe as regards the climate, the contractors will reduce their contract time to ten days.

Summary of News from the Far East.

JAPAN.

OSAKA AND HIOGO.

From Hiogo and Osaka we have no news of importance. The Mikado has returned to Kioto. There appear to be constantly occurring little "difficulties" between parties of foreigners strolling about the environs of Kobe and Japanese samurai, all of which bear a singular resemblance to each other, and may some day lead to trouble. The samurai uses some offensive expressions regarding foreigners—(the Hiogo journals apparently never have to record any initiatory rudeness of this sort on the part of the strangers)—he then quietly draws his sword, some of the party threatened produce their lethal weapons—and the belligerents part, mutually dissatisfied. It is a dangerous species of game, and one which Englishmen, at all events, play at a very serious disadvantage, because, as their Consuls are very fond on telling them, their duty is immediately to get up and run away as hard as they can, which is precisely the effect the Japanese wishes to produce. For, after the recent proclamation of the Mikado, denouncing the murder of foreigners as a crime punishable with disgrace—which the samurai dreads—as well as by death, which he don't—we may be pretty well assured that the object of these bravoes is only to intimidate. The annoyance is only to be stopped by some foreigner instantly shooting a samurai who has thus drawn on him, and, strange to say, this is precisely what the native authorities recommend. An instance occurred some time ago at Hakodate, which we relate as in point. A samurai drew on a foreigner, merely to frighten him, but the foreigner seized the bully's sword arm and, being stronger than he, dragged him off to the Custom-house, where he insisted on an interview with the Governor. This gentleman was actually quite vexed with the foreigner because he had not killed his countryman, constantly reverting to the point in evident dudgeon throughout the examination:—"And why did you not shoot him then?" "Why did you bring him here—you should have shot him at once," &c., &c., and, in fact, appeared to think himself rather badly used in being appealed to in such a case. It is probable that a new proclamation by the Imperial Court, granting licenses to foreigners to "pot" all samurai who threaten them thus, would have a beneficial result.

Nee-e-gata is to be opened to Prussians and Italians, at all events on the 15th July. The British Minister, however, having been officially informed that the port is at present the scene of a "civil contest" (whatever that may be) between the Government of the Mikado and the Daimio Aidzu, will not allow us to go there as yet.
